INDEX.—By H. KRISHNA SASTRI, B A.

he had acquired by his own arm (svabhujōpārjita-Nakshisapura-chaturatīti ā), to (a temple of) the Sun under the name Tarunādityadēva, which stood on the banks of the river Kanavirikā. The boundaries of the village were—on the east the village of Sihavāhalaka, on the south the village of Rā[jyastha]la, on the west the village of Pēdhilaka, and on the north the village of Amvullaka (Ambullaka). After the usual admonition to preserve this gift, and six imprecatory verses, lines 29-34 give the names of twelve witnesses—four Brāhmanas, four merchants, and four Mahattaras. They are followed by the name of the writer, which cannot be read with certainty, and this, again, is followed by the date śrī-Valabhi-samvat 674 Māgha-suddha 6, the numerals of which are ordinary decimal figures. The inscription, in line 36, ends with the signatures sva-hastō=[tra] śrī-Va(ba)lavarmmanah || sva-hastah śrī-Dhīka, where (the second) sva-hastah is preceded by a mark which seems to represent the actual sign-manual of Dhīka. Who this Dhīka was, does not appear from the present inscription, but the grant B. makes it probable that he was a high official of the king Mahēndradyudha (Mahēndrapāla), whose permission was necessary for the making of the grant.

B.—Plates of Avanivarman II. Yōga; [Vikrama-samvat 950].

These are three plates, the second of which is inscribed on both sides, while the first and third are inscribed on one side only. They contain 68 lines of well-preserved writing in Nāgarī characters. The engraving is done carelessly, so that the text contains numerous mistakes, the correction of some of which, especially in two passages where proper names are concerned, is very difficult. The language is Sanskrit. Lines 1-45 contain twenty-four verses which, after glorifying the Sun, treat of the genealogy of the donor and of his and his ancestors' exploits, and two imprecatory verses are cited in lines 65-67, the rest of the text is in prose.

The inscription records a grant of land by the Mahāsāmanta Avanivarman [II.], surnamed Yōga, of the Chālukya race (verse 2). In this race there were two 'great kings' (mahā-muhīpati), the brothers Kalla and Mahalla (v. 3), the former of whom is eulogized in conventional terms (vv. 5 and 6). Kalla had a son, whose name cannot be made out with confidence (v. 7); and this chief had a son whose name ended with dhavala, and whose full name perhaps was Vāhukadhavala (v. 9). This last named chief destroyed (or defeated) in battle a certain Dharma, conquered kings who were well-known rājādhirāja-paramēśvaras, and defeated a Karṇāta army (vv. 10 and 11). His son was Avanivarman [I.] (v. 12), and his son, again, was Balavarman (the donor of the grant A., above). Balavarman defeated a certain Vishadha (v. 16) from whom he took away a pair of big drums (uru-dhakkā); and, by slaying Jajjapa and other kings, 'freed the earth from the Hūna race' (v. 17). His son was Avanivarman [II.], also called Yōga (v. 18), who routed the armies of a certain *Yakshadāsa*¹ and other kings whose countries were invaded by him (vv. 19 and 20), and put to flight Dharanivarāha (v. 21).

In lines 45 ff. this Mahāsāmanta Yōga (i.e. Avanivarman II.), a feudatory of the Paramabhāṭṭāraka Mahārājādhirāja Paramēśvara Mahēndrapāladēva who meditated on the feet of the P M P Bhōjadēva, informs his officials and others, as well as future kings, that, with the approval of the illustrious Dhīka,² he gave the village of Amvulaka (Ambulaka),³ which belonged to the Nakshisapura eighty-four (Nakshisapura-chaturasīti) in the Saurāshtra mandala, to (a temple of) Tarunādityadēva, located near the river Kanavirikā in the vicinity of the village of Jayapura¹. The boundaries of the village were—on the east the village of Viyaraka, on the south the village of Jayapura, on the west the villages of Sēnduvaka and Kōrinthaka, and on the north the village of Vavulika. After the usual admonition to preserve this gift and two imprecatory verses, the inscription, in line 68, ends with the date samvat 956 Māgha-sud 6, the numerals of which here also are ordinary decimal figures.

¹ Verse 19 records that, after destroying the army of Yakshadāsa, Avanivarman took away from him the musical instrument (tārya) called Sāgarakeśhōbha.—In my previous account of this inscription I suggested that Yakshadāsa may have ruled the Madra country; but this is wrong. As the engraver of the grant in several other places has engraved m instead of y, the actual reading muddha-bhāmim in line 36 must undoubtedly be altered to yuddha-bhāmim, not to Madra-bhāmim.

² The inscription, the text of which is not quite certain here, seems to indicate that Dhīka was an antapāla or 'frontier guard' of Mahēndrapāla's, and that Avanivarman II. was a subordinate of his (as his father Balavarman had been before him). See the end of the grant A.

The Chālukya chiefs mentioned in the preceding are not known from other inscriptions. The large Bilhari inscription, in Ep Ind Vol I p 266, mentions a Chaulukya Avanivarman whose daughter Nohalā was married by the Kalachuri Chēdi king Yuvarāja I Kēyāravarsha. That Avanivarman may have been a contemporary² of Avanivarman II Yōga of our grant B, but—even assuming that the terms Chālukya and Chaulukya might be used synonymously³—he cannot be identical with him, because his father and grandfather were Sadhanva and Simhavarman (not Balavarman and Avanivarman).

For Balavarman, a feudatory of Mahēndrāyudha (Mahēndrapāla), the grant A furnishes a date in about A D 893. We therefore may assume that his grandfather Vāhukadhavala (?) lived about the middle of the 9th century A D, and was almost certainly a feudatory of Mahēndrapāla's predecessor Bhōjadēva (Mihira) of Kanauj, for whom we possess dates from A D 843 to A D. 881. Now in the inscription No 77 of my Southern List this Mihira (Bhōjadēva) is stated to have been defeated by the Gujarāt Rāshtrakūta Dhruvarāja II. Thus at any rate would show that he was at war with the Rāshtrakūtas, and I believe that such a war is actually referred to in the account of Vāhukadhavala's (?) exploits related in the grant B. In my opinion, the Karnāta army which is said to have been defeated by him can only have been an army of the Rāshtrakūtas. As regards (the king) Dharma who is stated to have been destroyed (or defeated) by the same chief, I know of no king Dharma who could have been a contemporary of his, excepting the well-known Pāla king Dharmapāla, and I see no reason why Dharma should not be identified with that Pāla king, who at one time or another undoubtedly was at war with the rulers of Kanauj.

Balavarman himself defeated a certain Vishadha, and by slaying Jajjapa and other kings 'freed the earth from the Hūna race'. Who Vishadha was, it is impossible to say. Wars with Hūna kings are frequently mentioned in Indian inscriptions of the Middle Ages,⁴ and we know of a Hūna princess, Āvalladēvī, who was married by the Kalachuri Karna in the 11th century, but in recording the name of Jajjapa our grant B for the first time discloses the name of an individual Hūna king, who must be placed in about the last quarter of the 9th century.

The kings or chiefs mentioned as opponents of Avanivarman II. Yōga, for whom we have a date in about A D 899, are Yakshadāsa and Dharanivarāha. The former is unknown to us. The latter I do not hesitate to identify with the Chāpa Mahāsāmāntādhipati Dharanivarāha, known to us from his Haddālā plates⁵ which were issued from Vardhamāna (or Wadhvān in

² A daughter of the Kalachuri Yuvarāja I, Kundakadēvī, was married by the Rāshtrakūta Amoghavarsha III Baddiga, for whom we now possess dates in A.D. 937 and 939.

⁴ See my note on the grammarians' ajayaj-Jarṭā Hūnda in Nachrichten d. K.-Ges. d. Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 1903, p. 305 ff. The Pāla Dēvapāla humbled the pride of the Hūnas (Ep Ind Vol. II p. 163, v. 13), according to the Khārda plates of the Rāshtrakūta Kakkarāja II. Amoghavarsha of A D 972 this king fought battles with the lord (or lords) of the Hūnas (Ind Ant Vol. XII p. 265, l. 32), the Paramāra Utpala (Muñjarāja) took away the life of the Hūnas (ibid Vol. XVI p. 28, l. 41), his younger brother Sindhurāja conquered the king of the Hūnas (Ep Ind Vol. I p. 235, v. 16), etc.

Kāthiāvad) in A D 914, and in which he is represented as a feudatory of a Rājādhirāja Mahīpāladēva whose proper identification, as will be seen below, can no longer offer any difficulty

The place Nakshisapura, the nine villages mentioned in connection with the two grants, and the river Kanavirikā I have not, I regret to say, been able to identify. The main point of general interest connected with these localities is, that the Nakshisapura group of eighty-four, which was held by the two donors, according to the inscription B belonged to the Saurāshtra maṇḍala. The name Surāshtra we know to denote the southern part of Kāthiāvad, and since the two chiefs Balavarman and Avanivarman II describe themselves as feudatories of the Mahārājādhirāja Mahēndrāyudhadēva or Mahēndrapaladēva (of Kanauj), it follows from these inscriptions that towards the end of the 9th century A D. the kingdom of Kanauj extended as far south as, and included, the province of Kāthiāvad. Moreover, it becomes quite certain now that the Rājādhirāja Mahīpāladēva, who in the Haddāla plates of A D 914 is mentioned as the overlord of the Chāpa Mahāsāmantādhipati Dharanivarāha, must be identified with the Mahārājādhirāja Mahīpāladēva of Kanauj (whose Asni inscription is dated in about A D 917), the successor of Mahēndrapaladēva, and cannot have been one of the Chūdāsamās of Gurnār-Junāgadh.

In the grant A the king, known to us from the grant B and other inscriptions as Mahēndrapāla, is called Mahēndrāyudha. This name of course at once recalls the names Indrāyudha and Chakrāyudha, the former denoting a king who according to the Haritamsa-Purāna was ruling the north in Śaka-samvat 705=A D 783-84, and the latter another king, to whom the sovereignty of Mahōdaya (Kanauj) was given, after the defeat of Indrarāja (i.e., in my opinion, Indrāyudha), by the Pala Dharmapāla, and who was defeated by Nāgabhatta,¹ the grandfather of Bhōjadēva of Kanauj. It may also be mentioned that in Rājasēkhara's *Karpūra-mañjarī*² a certain merchant is represented as having gone to 'Kanauj, the capital of Vajrāyudha, the king of Pañchāla'. That story would seem to show that in the opinion of Rājasēkhara, who was Mahēndrapāla's guru, a name with the somewhat unusual ending āyudha, such as Vajrāyudha, was a suitable or characteristic name of a Kanauj king. Most probably Mahēndrapāla himself was known to Rājasēkhara also by the name Mahēndrāyudha.

The date of the grant A, śrī-Valabhī-samvat 574 Māgha-suddha 6, is by a long way the earliest date in which we find the technical expression Valabhī-samvat. In the inscriptions of the Valabhī kings themselves the year of a date is ordinarily preceded by only saṃ, rarely by samvat, and hitherto the earliest inscription containing the term Valabhī-samvat was the Vērāval inscription of the temple-priest Bhāva-Brihaspati of Valabhī-samvat 850 (No 503 of my Northern List). In the Mōrbi plate of Jānka (ibid No 502) of the year 585 of the same era the number 585 in line 19 is preceded by simply samvat, while in line 17 the year is described as a Gauṇtu (i.e. Gupta) year. — It is curious that in Kāthiāvad we should find the Gupta-Valabhī, Vikrama and Śaka eras employed in dates of the same period and in almost the same localities.

As the text stands, we do not learn from it what the chief Yōga had received from Mahēndrapāla¹⁹ The two akṣharas in brackets are quite doubtful. No 2 — VASANTGADH INSCRIPTION OF PURNAPALA,

THE VIKRAMA YEAR 1099

By PROFESSOR F. KIELHORN, CIE, GOTTINGEN

About the year 1840 the stone, which bears this inscription, was taken by Captain T. S. Burt from a tank at Vasantgadh¹¹ in the Sirohi State of Rājputāna, and the inscription was published in Journ. As Soc Beng Vol. X. p. 664 ff, from a very unsatisfactory transcript prepared by Pandit Kamalākānta. For a long time the stone seems to have been lost sight of; but it has lately been rediscovered by my indefatigable friend, Mr. Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha of Udaipur, and is now deposited at the town of Sirohi. I re-edit the text from impressions which have been kindly sent to me by Mr. Ojha.

The inscription contains 23 lines of writing which covers a space of about 2' broad by 1' 4 $\frac{1}{4}$ " high. At the upper proper right corner part of the stone is broken away, so that between about 15 and 2 aksharas are missing at the commencement of lines 1-9. Otherwise the writing is well preserved and may be read with certainty nearly throughout. The size of the letters is between $\frac{1}{8}$ " and $\frac{3}{8}$ ". The characters generally differ little from the ordinary Nāgarī, but they include a few signs which are peculiar to the earlier northern inscriptions. The letter ḥ everywhere is denoted by a sign of its own, and the secondary ā is often written by a superscript line, once (in Trashtuh=prasādāt=, l. 13) we have the sign of the upadhāniya, and once (in bhāryām, l. 12) the conjunct ry is made up of the full sign for r and the secondary form of y. Between verses 32 and 33 and at the end of the text a conch-shell has been engraved, and between verses 33 and 34 a circular ornament. The language of the inscription is Sanskrit, and, excepting the words asy=ānayaō=pi and nagar=ānayaō=pi in lines 8 and 13, the whole is in verse. Both the language and the verses often are incorrect, and as a piece of literary composition the inscription is worthless. Here, to show how very limited was the author's knowledge of grammar, I need only point out forms such as nāma, l. 5, vēsmam, l. 9, vēsmam, l. 14, and vyōmē, l. 21 (for nāma, vēsmā, vēsmabhih, and vyōmni), from passages regarding the reading of which there cannot be any doubt. And what liberties were taken by him, simply for the sake of the metre in the spelling of words, may be seen from instances like Pūrnāpāla, l. 7, samdhī, l. 19, svapāna, l. 15 (for Pūrnāpāla, samdhī, sōpāna), etc.¹

The object of the inscription is, to record that a queen named Lāhini, a younger sister of the Paramāra Pūrnāpāla and widow of a king Vīgraharāja, at Vata² (Vata-nagara, Vata-pura) restored an ancient temple of the Sun, and restored or founded a tank (vāpī), apparently the very tank where this record has been found. And the inscription is divided into three parts, the first and second of which give the genealogies of Lāhini and Vīgraharāja, while the third glorifies the town Vata and the pious work executed there by the widowed queen. The whole is introduced by two verses, in one of which (so far as it is preserved) the author pays homage to Mahēśvara (Śiva), Prāchētasa (the poet Vālmiki), and Vānī (the goddess of eloquence), while in the other he invokes the protection of the god Hari (Vishnu).

Verse 3 relates that through the anger of (the sage) Vasishtha there was produced a youth or prince (humāra) from whom the Pramāra (or Paramāra) family took its origin.³ In his lineage there was Utpalarāja; from him sprang Āranyarāja, and from him Adbhutakrishnarāja. His son (or, if a name should have been lost at the commencement of line 4, his son's son) was Mahipāla, and from him sprang Dhandhuka. To Dhandhuka there was born from his wife Amritadēvi Pūrnāpāla, who ruled the Arbuda territory (bhū-maṇḍalam=Arbbudasya).⁴ In his reign, his younger sister Lāhini was married by king Vīgraha (Vīgraharāja).

Vīgraharāja's genealogy, in verse 12, commences with a twice-born named Yōta, who by his bravery acquired the title of king (bhūpa). In his lineage there was the king (nripa) Bhavagupta, who, after restoring the temple of 'the Sun dwelling at Vata' (Vata-vāsi-bhānu), reigned at Vata. In his lineage, again, there was Saṅgamarāja, who ruled Badari in Vamśāratha. From him sprang Durlabharāja; from him, Chacha, and from him, Vīgraharāja, who, as stated

² In line 9, verse 13, the word is used in the plural (Vatēshu), and in the inscription of Varmalāta, mentioned above, the place appears to be called Vatākarasthāna.

³ See e.g. Ep Ind Vol II p 190, verse 13. In the present inscription we have the name Pramāra in verse 3, and Paramāra in verse 10. The name is written Pramāra also in the unpublished Bhārunda inscription of Pūrnāpāla of the [Vikrama] year 1102, of which I possess impressions.

already, married Lāhni. After his death, his widow went to her brother's home, and was settled at the town of Vata which in the course of time had fallen into decay.

The town of Vata (Vata-nagara, Vata-pura) is glorified in verses 20-25¹. Here it will be sufficient to say that it is stated to have been founded by the sage Vasishtha, that it was situated on a river named Sarasvatī, and that its inhabitants are described as devoted to the worship of the Sun. That the queen Lāhni restored there an ancient temple of the Sun and restored or founded a tank, has been already mentioned.

The inscription (according to verses 33 and 34) was composed by the Brāhman Mātrīśarmaṇ, the son of Hari, and engraved by Śrīapāla, the son of the sūtradhāra Dēuka, who was the son of Durga (Durgārka, i.e. Durgāditya), the son of the sthapati ('architect, carpenter,' etc.) Nāga. It ends (v. 35) with the date the ninth tithi of the dark half of the month Nabha, i.e. Śrāvana, the moon being in (the nakṣatra) Mrigaśīras, of the year (given in words) 1099 in the time of Vikramāditya, 'in the place' (sthānakā) of Chitrabhānu. By this last expression I understand the author to say that the date fell in the Jovian year Chitrabhānu. This year can be combined with the Vikrama year 1099 only, when the latter is taken to be the expired Chaitrādī Vikrama year 1099, and Chitrabhānu to be the Jovian year so named according to the southern system.² For that year the date would correspond to the 12th August A.D. 1042, when the 9th tithi of the dark half of the amānta Śrāvana ended 10 h 46 m., while the nakṣatra was Mrigaśīras by the equal space system and according to Garga for 15 h 46 m., and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 14 h 27 m., after mean sunrise. The date is the earliest date of the Vikrama era that quotes a Jovian year, and, with the exception of quite modern dates, the only Vikrama date in which a Jovian year is quoted according to the southern system. It also is the earliest known date in which we find the expression Vikramāditya-kālē.

The Pramāra or Paramāra chiefs mentioned in this inscription ruled the Arbuda-mandala, i.e. a tract of country called after Arbuda, the modern Mount Abū. They are probably closely connected with the Paramāras of Chaudrāvatī, mentioned, e.g., above, Vol. VIII, p. 201. Regarding Vigraharāja and his ancestors I cannot offer any remark.

The places Vaṭa and Badarī in Vamsāratha (v. 14) I am unable to identify. Vata must be an old place, being mentioned already in the Vasantgadī inscription of Varmalāta of the [Vikrama] year 682, and in a somewhat earlier inscription which was found at the village of Samoli in the Bhōmata district of Mēvād, and of which Mr. Ojha has sent me impressions. If not identical with Vasantgadī itself, it must be looked for close to it.

No 3 — ALUPA INSCRIPTIONS AT UDIYAVARA.

By PROFESSOR E HULTZSCH, PH D., HALLE (SAALE)

The ancient royal family of the Ālupas is one of those whose early history is wrapped in obscurity—'carent quia vate sacro' as Horace (Carm IV 9) expresses it. All that was until recently known regarding them will be found on page 309 of Dr Fleet's Dynasties of the Kanarese Districts. A few additional records of them were published by Mr Rice in his Epigraphia Oarnatica. The Ālupas or Ālupas are referred to in inscriptions of the two Western Chalukya kings Pulakēśin II¹⁹ and Vinayāditya, of the Rāshtrakūta king Gōvinda III,²⁰ and of the Kādamba Jayakēśin I, and the poet Bilhana mentions them in connection with his patron Vikramāditya VI. They are thus proved to have existed as a ruling family in the period from the seventh to the eleventh centuries of the Christian era.

As regards the name Ālupa, Dr Bhandarkar suggested that it 'seems to be preserved in the name of the modern town of Alupai on the Malabar coast'²¹. This is very improbable, because Ālupāy (Alwye) is situated in Travancore, while the inscriptions of the Ālupas are found in South Canara, Kadûr and Shimoga. The original meaning of the word Âlupa or Âluva is probably 'a ruler,' from the Diavidian root âl, 'to rule'

A few individual names of kings are preserved to us. The Sorab plates of Vinayâditya were issued at the request of Gunasâgar-Âlupêndra's son Chitravâha-Mahârâja, who was in possession of the district (vishaya) of Edevoal in the N.E. of Banavâsi in North Canara.¹ According to the Harihar plates of Vinayâditya, which are dated two years after the Sorab plates, another village in the district (bhôga) of Edevoal, forming part of the Vanavâsi-mandala, was granted at the request of Âluvarâja,² i.e. perhaps Chitravâha-Mahârâja. The same two princes (Gunasâgara and Chitravâha) may be meant in an inscription at Kigga in the Koppa tâluka of the Kadûr district,³ which states that, when Âluarasa, whose second name was Gunasâgara, was ruling the Kadamba-mandala,—Âluarasa, (his) great queen and (his son) Chitravâhana made a grant to a local temple.⁴ Another inscription (Kp 37), which is on the other face of the same stone, is dated while some Chitravâhana was ruling Ponbuchechu,⁵ the modern Humcha.⁶ Finally, an inscription at Mâvali in the Sorab tâluka of the Shimoga district states that in the time of Prabhûtavarsha Gôvindaasa, i.e. the Râshtrakûta king Gôvinda III, a certain Chitravâhana ruled the Âluvakhêda six-thousand, while Râjâdityarasa ruled the Banavâsi-mandala.⁷

If the Chitravâhana of the first Kigga inscription was really the same person as the Chitravâha of the Sorab plates, it would follow that the Âlupa or Âluva prince Gunasâgara was governor of the Kadamba-mandala, i.e. the Banavâsi province, in or immediately before the time of the Western Chalukya king Vinayâditya, and that Gunasâgara's son Âluvarâja Chitravâha or Chitravâhana (I) granted two villages in the district of Edevoal, which formed part of the Banavâsi province, during Vinayâditya's reign. Consequently Chitravâhana I. seems to have succeeded his father Gunasâgara in the government of Banavâsi. In the time of Gôvinda III, however, the Banavâsi-mandala had been taken from the Âlupas and was entrusted to Râjâditya, while the Âluvakhêda six-thousand was administered by a second Chitravâhana, who on the strength of his name may be assumed to have belonged to the Âlupa family. To judge from the Mâvali inscription, he proved troublesome and had to be coerced by the force of arms. That Chitravâhana, whom the second Kigga inscription mentions as residing at Humcha, may or not be identical with this Chitravâhana II, but must be distinct from Chitravâhana I, whose capital was most probably Banavâsi. If this identification is correct, Ponbuchechu, the modern Humcha, would have been the head-quarters of the Âluvakhêda six-thousand, which in a later record is mentioned as Âlvakhêda among the boundaries of the Poysala kingdom.⁸

Mr Rice's volumes contain many records of certain later families which seem to be connected with the ancient Âlupas. These are the Changâlvas,⁹ Kongâlvas,¹⁰ Nâdâlvas,¹¹ Sântaras,¹² and the rulers of Kalasa and Kârkala.¹³

In the course of a tour in 1901, Mr H. Krishna Sastri, B.A., discovered a number of archaic Kanarese pillar inscriptions of the Âlupas at Udiyâvara near Udipi in the South Canara district Of these records I now edit the eight most complete and important ones. Regarding some difficult points in them I have consulted my old friends Venkayya and Krishna Sastri, whose remarks proved of much assistance in unravelling the meaning of these enigmatical ancient documents

The first five Udiyâvara inscriptions are on Virakals, i.e. stones set up as memorials of deceased heroes; the remaining three refer to grants of tolls. The three first inscriptions must all belong to the same period; for Nos I and II mention a certain Ranasâgara, and Nos. II and III one Śvêtavâhana. These two names and, in addition to them, Chitravâhana in No I look like those of Alupa princes, among whom we have already found a Gunasâgara and two Chitravâhanas. As the alphabet resembles that of the Mâvali inscription,¹ we may identify the Chitravâhana of No I. with Chitravâhana II., who ruled the Âlurvakhêda six-thousand in the time of Gôvinda III. Consequently Nos I.-III. must be assigned to about A.D. 800. From the first few lines of No I. we learn that Chitravâhana II seized Udiyâvara in the course of a war with Ranasâgara, who seems to have been a rival claimant to the throne. Nos II and III. refer to the storming of Udiyâvara by Śvêtavâhana, and No II records the death, on this occasion, of a follower of Ranasâgara. From this it may perhaps be concluded that, after the time of the inscription No I, Ranasâgara succeeded in ousting Chitravâhana II, but that, later on, he was in his turn defeated by Śvêtavâhana, who may have been a near relative of Chitravâhana II.

The remaining Udiyâvara inscriptions date from the reigns of the two Âlupa, Âluva or Âlva kings Prithvisâgara (Nos IV.-VI) and Vijayâditya (Nos. VII and VIII) alias Mâramma (No. VII.). It is impossible to say at present how these two princes were connected with Chitravâhana II., Ranasâgara and Śvêtavâhana. But, as the alphabet of their inscriptions agrees with that of Nos I.-III, they must be assigned to about the same period.

In each of the eight subjoined inscriptions Udiyâvara is referred to by one of its older names Udayâpura (Nos. V. and VIII), Udayapura (Nos II, III, VI, VII.) or Udeyapura (Nos I. and IV.). In the three last it is mentioned together with Patî (No VI.), Pombulcha (No VII) or Ponbulcha (No. VIII) Patî and Pombuchcha are known to have been ancient names of the modern Humcha in the Nagar tâluka of the Shimoga district.² This Humcha seems to have been the capital of the Âlupa kings. For an inscription at Kigga is dated while Chitravâhana (II) was ruling Ponbuchchu.³

I.—Inscription of Chitravâhana (II.) and Ranasâgara.

This inscription (No 94 of the Government Epigraphist's collection for 1901) is engraved on an octagonal pillar in front of the Śambhukallu temple at Udiyâvara. It records that a follower of Chitravâhana (II) met with his death when the 'lord of the earth' (viz Chitravâhana) occupied and entered Udeyapura (Udiyâvara) 'during the trouble of Ranasâgara,' i.e. in the course of a war with the latter.

II.—Inscription of Ranasâgara and Śvêtavâhana

This inscription (No 108 of 1901) is engraved on an octagonal pillar lying near a well in the back-yard of Râghavêndrabhatta's house at Udiyâvara and commemorates the death in battle of a follower of Ranasâgara. He fell while Udayapura (Udiyâvara) was entered by Śvêtavâhana, whom I take to have been the victorious opponent of Ranasâgara. The dead warrior is described as a zealous devotee of the 'lord of Paṭṭi,' and he and his two immediate ancestors as adherents of the 'Pâśupata lord.' Paṭṭi (or Pombuchcha) is the modern Humcha.⁶ It may be concluded from the present inscription that this town was the seat of the head of a Śaiva maṭha.

Prithivisāgara, who claimed descent from the lunar race and bore the surnames Udayāditya and Uttama-Pāndya, and records that he confirmed a previous grant of tolls to the two cities (nagara) of Udayapura (Udiyāvāra) and Patī. The last is evidently the same as Patti, the modern Humcha¹ The imprecatory passage at the end of this inscription and of the two next ones (VII and VIII) mentions two sacred places Vāranāśī and Śivavallī. The former is of course the modern Benares Regarding the second, Mr Krishna Sastri contributes the following information —

“The Shivalī (Śivallī) sect of Brāhmanas in South Canara take their name from this place In the Madras Manual of Administration, Vol III p 610, we are told that the town Oodipī (Udipī), ‘considered the most sacred spot in the Canarese country,’ is ‘formed of parts of Badagabett, Moodanidambore, Poollore and Shivally villages’ In the Madras Postal Directory Shivalī figures as a village served by the Udipī post office ”

Hail! Prosperity! During Bōygavarma's headmanship of the district,³ Prithivisāgara, the glorious Ālupēndra, who sprang from the race of the Moon, the ornament of (his) family, Udayāditya Uttama-Pāndya, the glorious Āluvarasa, confirmed the gift of one half (of) the tolls both on water and on land to the city of Patī, together with the city of Udayapura. (The recipients of this gift were)⁴ Udayapuranāyga's⁵ son Sngadatta; Kumāra Erega, Ranavikrama[nātha],⁶ and Sandavarada's (son) Kannachi. Let this stand as long as the moon and the stars! (To) him who without fraud confirms and grants this, shall be the acquisition of the fruit of a horse-sacrifice He who destroys this, shall be covered with the five great sins (of one) who destroys Vāranāśī and Śivavallī.

the god Krishna. In the verse following we find Indrarâjadêva (III.), the royal grantor of the charters, compared to the god Upendra (Vishnu). In verse 4 we are informed that the god Brahman sprang from the water-lily in the navel of Vishnu, from Brahman his son Atri, from Atri the Moon, and from the Moon the dynasty of the Yadus, where Krishna was born. In the next verse we are told that there arose king Dantidurga in the Sâtyaki branch of the Yadu dynasty, to whom of herself repaired the goddess of sovereignty of the Châlukya family. This means that Dantidurga was the first Râshtrakûta king who defeated the Châlukyas and made himself master of their dominions. From verse 6, if we notice the double entendre clearly intended, we learn that Dantidurga first reduced the lowermost, i.e. southern, country, then turned his arms against the Madhyadêśa, and finally conquered the city of Kâñchi. According to an inscription in the Daśavatâra cave at Elurâ,¹ Dantidurga subdued the rulers of Kâñchi, Kalinga, Kôsala, Śrîśaila, Mâlava, Lâta, Tanka, and so forth. If we are right in understanding verse 6 as we have done, Dantidurga first gained victories in the South and conquered the kings of Śrîśaila, Kalinga, and so forth, then turned to the central part of India and subjugated the princes of Kôsala, Mâlava, Lâta, and so forth, and finally came back again to the South and vanquished the lord of Kâñchi.

Verse 8 tells us that after Dantidurga his paternal uncle Krishnarâja (I.) came to the throne. The next verse makes mention of his son Nirupama(-Dhruva), but omits the name of his elder brother Gôvinda II, probably because the author of the inscription wanted to give a direct genealogy of the royal grantor, with reference to whom Gôvinda II. was a collateral prince, while he mentioned the name of Dantidurga as the latter was the founder of the dynasty. But by no means can this omission be taken as favouring the view that Gôvinda II. did not reign. I have elsewhere adduced reasons for dissenting from this view,² and in support of my position may now be stated the incontrovertible fact that the Dhulâ copper-plate grant³ of Gôvinda II's nephew and feudatory Suvarnavarsha-Karka distinctly refers itself to his reign, and gives the date Śaka 701, when we must consequently suppose Gôvinda II. to have been alive and wielding supremacy. Verse 10 informs us that Nirupama(-Dhruva) won two white parasols in battle, one from the lord of Kôsala and the other from the king of the North. Who these princes were we have no means to determine. But it looks tempting to identify the king of the North either with the Indrâyudha mentioned in the Jaina Harivaṃśa, or with Chakrâyudha, the ruler of Kanauj and contemporary of Dharmapâla of the Pâla, and of Gôvinda III. of the Râshtrakûta, dynasty.⁴

Verse 11 says that from Nirupama(-Dhruva) sprang Jagattunga(-Gôvinda III.), who, in his turn, begat Śrîvallabha(-Amôghavarsha I.). The next verse tells us that Amôghavarsha

⁴ In an unpublished grant of Amôghavarsha I in the possession of my brother Prof S. R. Bhandarkar, two princes of the names of Chakrayudha and Dharma are mentioned as having gone to the Himâlayas to do homage to Gôvinda III who had gone thither on an expedition of conquest. It can hardly be seriously doubted that Dharma is Dharmapâla, the second prince of the Pâla dynasty, and that Chakrayudha is the same as the Chakrâyudha of the Bhâgalpur grant, whom Dharmapâla restored to his lost throne. Prof Kielhorn (Nachrichten von der K. Ges. d. Wiss zu Göttingen, 1905, p 303) has already identified this Chakrâyudha with the Chakrâyudha of the Gwalior inscription, who was conquered by Nâgabhatta. Nâgabhatta again was a contemporary of Gôvinda III (Journ Bo Br R A S Vol XXI p 422, note 2). We have thus four princes, viz Gôvinda III, Nâgabhatta, Chakrâyudha and Dharmapâla, who were contemporaries. We know from Râshtrakûta records that Gôvinda III reigned from A.D. 791 to 813. We must, therefore, suppose Dharmapâla to have flourished about this time. As this synchronism was not known before, it was but right to assign Dharmapâla to A.D. 861, the date of the Pathârî inscription referring itself to the reign of the Râshtrakûta prince Parabala (Nachrichten von der K. Ges. d. Wiss zu Göttingen, 1901, p 525 f). But now we see that this date would be rather too late for Dharmapâla. Besides, there is nothing to show that this Parabala is, as a matter of fact, identical with Parabala, the father-in-law of Dharmapâla.

I. raised the glory of the Ratta sovereignty immersed in the ocean of the Chalukyas and thereafter assumed the epithet Viranārāyaṇa. If we read between the lines, we cannot fail to notice that the Rāshtrakūṭa sovereignty had been shaken by the Chalukyas of Vēṅgī to its very foundations in the early part of Amōghavarsha's reign. The Chalukya contemporary of Amōghavarsha I was Narēndramrigarāja-Vijayāditya II,¹ who, in an Eastern Chalukya record, is represented to have fought, during twelve years, by day and night, a hundred and eight battles with the armies of the Gangas and the Rattas. The latter can be no other than the Rāshtrakūṭas of Mālkhēd, and it thus appears that Narēndramrigarāja-Vijayāditya II was a powerful king. We can, therefore, very well understand that he might have for a time eclipsed the glory of the Rāshtrakūṭas. Amōghavarsha I, however, was by no means slow to retrieve his lost reputation, and seems to have wreaked a terrible vengeance upon the Chalukyas, whom, as verse 13 informs us, he destroyed, just as a man burns chick-pea plants, the stalks of which have been pulled out by the root. That he inflicted a severe defeat on the Eastern Chalukyas can also be seen from the Cambay and Sānglī charters,² in which he is said to have gratified the god Yama with unprecedented morsels of cakes which were the Chalukyas. Verse 13 incidentally gives us the information, if my interpretation is correct, that the Chalukyas whom Amōghavarsha I vanquished had devastated Stambapura, which is the same as Tāmraḥpta, identified with the modern Tamlūk, the head-quarters of the subdivision of the same name of the Midnapur district, Bengal.

From Śrīvallabha(-Amōghavarsha I), who was a comet of destruction to the Chalukya family (v 14), sprang Kṛṣṇnarāja (II), whose fights with the Gūrjaras need to be still remembered by old men, as we are informed in verse 15. I have elsewhere pointed out that the Gūrjaras, with whom the Rāshtrakūṭas were often at war, ruled over Northern India and had their capital at Mahodaya or Kanauj, and consequently the Gūrjara prince defeated by Kṛṣṇnarāja II. (A D 888-911) must have been Mahēndrapāla (A D 899-907), the patron of the poet Rājasekhara.

Kṛṣṇnarāja II. had a son of the name of Jagattunga (v 16), who married Lakshmi, the daughter of Ranavīgraha, the son of Kokkalla of the Haihaya, i.e. Kalachuri, dynasty (vv. 17-19). It is worthy of note that Ranavīgraha is here called Chēd-īśvara, i.e. lord of Chēdi. The same fact is hinted by a verse in Jahlana's Sūktimuktāvalī, quoted by Dr. Bhandarkar in his paper on the Karhād plates of Kṛṣṇa III,³ which purports to say that of rivers the Narmadā, of kings Ranavīgraha, and of poets Surānanda were the ornaments of Chēdi. The name Ranavīgraha does not occur in the list of the names of the Kalachuris of Chēdi. From a Ratanpur inscription,⁴ however, we learn that Kokkalla had eighteen sons, of whom the first-born was a ruler of Tripurī, and the others lords of mandalas, i.e. minor chiefs. If this statement deserves any credence, Ranavīgraha, being a ruler of Tripurī, i.e. of Chēdi, and not of a mandala, was the eldest son, and the successor of Kokkalla. But from the Benares copper-plate inscription⁵ it appears that Kokkalla was followed by his son Mugdhatunga-Prasiddhadhavalā. We may, therefore, suppose that Ranavīgraha and Mugdhatunga-Prasiddhadhavalā were one and the same prince.

The issue of the marriage of Jagattunga with Lakshmi was Indrarāja (III), whose epithets Ratta-Kandarpadēva and Śrī-Kīrti-Nārāyaṇa are mentioned in verses 20 and 21. The next verse contains a double entendre, and so far as its mythological sense goes, it does not present any difficulty. But the historical sense of this verse is by no means clear. This much is certain that it records the defeat of a king of the name of Upēndra by the Rāshtrakūṭa prince Indrarāja III. But who this Upēndra was, and how the epithets kṛta-

Gôvardhan-ôddhâra and hél-ônmûlita-Mêru, used in connection with the kings Upêndra and Indrarâja respectively, are to be interpreted, is far from clear. At one time I thought that Upêndra referred to Mahîpâla of the Prathâra dynasty of Mahôdaya, for whom I then contended that the Bhâgalpur grant of the Pâla dynasty gave the other name Ohakrâyudha.¹ But I have stated above that, beyond all doubt, Dharmapâla and Chakrâyudha, whom he re-instated on the throne, were contemporaries of the Râshtrakûta prince Gôvinda III.² Chakrâyudha cannot, therefore, be identified with Mahîpâla, who was a contemporary of Indra III., the great-great-grandson of Gôvinda III. According to Pandit Bhagwanlal Indrapî,³ the word Mêru in the expression hél-ônmûlita-Mêru signifies Mëra or Mëhra, and the whole expression speaks of the defeat of some contemporary Mëhra king of North Kâthiâwâd by Indrarâja III. Prof. Kielhorn, on the other hand, holds that Mêru probably is Mahôdaya,⁴ i.e. Kanauj, implying thereby that it records the capture of Kanauj by Indrarâja III. specified in the Sângli charter. With regard to the other expression, viz. kṛita-Gôvardhan-ôddhâra, no interpretation has been proposed, and we must wait for the publication of other inscriptions to enable us to understand perfectly the historical sense of this verse.

In the preamble of the prose passage preceding the formal part of the inscription, the P. M. P. Śrīman-Nityavarshanarêndradêva, i.e. Indrarâja III., is spoken of as "meditating on the feet" of the P. M. P. Śrīmad-Akâlavarshadêva, i.e. his grandfather Kṛishna II. This indicates that Jagattunga, the father of Indrarâja III, did not come to the throne. The same may be concluded from the statement of our inscriptions that the battles of Kṛishnarâja II. were remembered and described by old men in Indra III.'s time. This shows that hardly a generation had passed since the occurrence of that event, and that consequently there was no Râshtrakûta sovereign intervening between Kṛishna II. and Indra III. The same conclusion is pointed to by the fact that the Khârêpâtan grant of Rattarâja,⁵ in setting forth the Râshtrakûta genealogy, takes the succession direct from Kṛishna II. to Indra III. and refers to Jagattunga only further on as the father of Amôghavarsha-Vaddiga. But our conclusion is placed beyond all doubt by the Dêôli and Karhâd plates of Kṛishna III,⁶ which distinctly speak of Jagattunga as having died without obtaining the sovereignty.

The composer of our inscriptions was Trivikramabhaṭṭa, the son of Nêmâditya. There can hardly be a doubt that he is identical with Trivikramabhaṭṭa, the author of the Nalachampâ, of the Śândilya gôtra, and the son of Nêmâditya (var. leot. Dêvâditya)⁷ Another Śândilya-kavi-ohakravartin Trivikrama was the sixth ancestor, of the astronomer Bhâskarabhaṭṭa, a contemporary of king Bhôja of Dhârâ. The oldest mention of Trivikrama is in Bhôja's Sarasvatikanthâbharana, while he himself quotes Bâna. The authorship of a Maddâlâsâ-champâ is also attributed to this Trivikrama.

As regards the localities mentioned in the grants, Pâtaliputra from where the grantee of No. II emigrated is obviously Paṭnâ, the principal town of the district of the same name in Bengal, and Mânyakhêta, the capital of the royal grantor, is Mâlkhêd in the Nizam's Dominions Kurundaka, where Indrarâja III had repaired for his paṭṭabandha, was first identified by Mr A. M. T. Jackson with Kurundwâd at the junction of the Krishnâ and Pañchagangâ in the Southern Marâtha country⁸ In No. I. the village granted is Umvarâ (or Umbarâ) near Kammanijja in the country of Lâṭa, and the boundaries specified are Tôlêjaka to E, Môgalikâ to S., Samki to W, and Javalakûpaka to N Umvarâ. as was first pointed out by Dr. Bhandarkar, is the modern Bagumrā, with the prefix bag.¹ Tōlājaka and Mōgalikā cannot be identified, but Samkī and Javalakūpaka are Sankī, one mile S W of Bagumrā, and Jolwa, one and a half mile N. of Bagumrā. In No. II. the village granted is Tenna near Kammanijja, and the boundaries specified are Vāradapallikā (or Bārada²) to E, Nāmbhitāṭaka to S, Valisā (or Baliśā) to W., and Vavviyana (or Babbiyana) to N. They have been identified with Ten, Bārḍoli, Nadida, Wanasa and Baben respectively. Kammanijja, in the vicinity of which lay both the villages granted, is Kāmrej. All these villages are to be found in the Nausārī division of the Baroda State. The Bagumrā grant of the Gujarāt Rāshṭrakūṭa Dhruva II. mentions Trennā, both as a village and a territorial division, and speaks of the village of Trennā as having been bestowed upon a certain Brāhmaṇa by his grandfather Dhruva I. (A.D. 834-35). "The explanation of its being given away again by the present record," as Dr. Fleet has rightly said, "is, no doubt, to be found in the statement, made in the present record, that Indra III gave away four hundred villages which had been confiscated by previous kings; this was evidently one of them."³

TRANSLATION OF No. II.

Om. Hail !

(Verse 1.) May he (Vishnu), the water-lily (springing from) whose navel was made (his) abode by Vēdhas (Brahman), protect you, and Hara (Śiva) whose head is adorned by the beautiful crescent of the moon !

(V 2) Victorious is (Krishna), (who is) the comet (of destruction) to Kāma (and is) the friend of the gods, on whose chest, extensive as the Vindhya (mountain), dangles the pure Kaustubha, (and) on the stage of whose lotus-like face dance the side-glances of Lakshmi, with the pupils (of her eyes) languid through excess of love¹

(V 3) Ever victorious is the king Indrarāja (III), whose long arms (were made her) refuge by the goddess of Wealth, who has rooted out in battles the circle of (her) enemies difficult to withstand, who has seized the territories of the mighty, (and who is) the lion (i.e. the best) among men, just as Upēndia (Vishnu) is ever victorious, whose long arms (were made her) support by (the goddess) Lakshmi, who held up in battles (his) discus bearing spoils and difficult to resist, who carried off Bah and (his) legions (to Pātāla), (and who was) a man-lion (in his fourth incarnation).

(V 4) The self-existent (Brahman) was born of the wide and blooming water-lily springing from the navel of (Vishnu) the lord of Śrī, of him was born (his) son Atri, (and) of him again (i.e. of Atri) the Moon that overflows with rays of nectar. From him there grew on earth the lineage of the Yadus, amongst whom (at one time) flourished (Vishnu) the wielder of the Śarṅga (bow) (in his eighth incarnation as Krishna), who was worshipped by the lotus-eyes of cowherdesses with every kind of flirtation.

(V 5) In that family there arose the illustrious king Dantidurga, born in the great Sātyaki branch, the best of men, whose hand (bore) the (auspicious) marks of the conch and discus, (and) to whom of herself came the goddess of wealth of the Chālukya family, just as (in that family) there arose Parushōttama (Krishna), who prolonged the line of Sātyaki,¹ who (held) the conch and discus in (his) hands as (his peculiar) characteristics, (and) to whom of herself came (the goddess) Lakshmi from the ocean.

(V 6) The hand (i.e. the prowess) of this (prince), matchless in battle, having (first) established itself on the beautiful lowermost region of the earth, and having again overcome in a gentle manner at its own will the central region (Madhyadīpa), again established itself in the province of Kāñchi, just as the hand (of a lover), after (first) establishing itself on the hips of a woman, attractive to the heart, and pressing again gently at its will (her) waist, again establishes itself on the region (below the waist) where the girdle (is worn).

(V 7) His orders, forming a wreath on (their) crests with which came in contact (their) hands (joined) like buds, (all) kings respect with (their) heads slightly bent (and) with (their) knees rolling about on the surface of the earth, from Sētu (Rāmēśvaram), where the blossoming lavanga (trees) are destroyed on the declivities of mountain-tops by hosts of powerful monkeys, as far as the Kailāsa (mountain), the outskirts of which resound with the jungling anklets on the moving feet of Bhavāni.

(V 8) When that king, after conquering the world by his own arm, had gone to heaven as if to conquer (it), being desirous of a fresh victory,—(his) paternal uncle, the illustrious king Krishnarāja (I.), of well-known prowess, occupied his position of supreme majesty.

(V 9) Nirupama, of spotless valour, springing from that (king), whose fame, solid, extensive and bright, diverted itself in the form of the lines of sandal-painting on the faces of the beauties, (was) the quarters, (and) who adorned the mountain (consisting of) the family of the glorious Rāshtrakūtas.

(V 10) From the hand of the trembling lord of the Kōśalas was snatched away by him in battle one white (regal) parasol, which was the white (auspicious) water-pitcher for the setting out of (his) fame, bright as the kunda (flower), on a journey over the whole world, (and) which was the toy-lotus, resplendent as the disc of the full moon, on the palm of the hand of Lakshmi, another again (was snatched away by him) from the king of the northern (country) as if it were (his) glory

(V 11) From him obtained birth Jagattunga, who honoured the twice-born, he in his turn begat as son the king of kings Śrivalabha.

(V 12) This (prince), possessed of fortitude, on raising again the glory of the Ratta kingdom, drowned in the ocean of the Chalukyas, became (i.e. assumed the epithet of) Viranārāyaṇa, just as (Vishnu), again uplifting the earth, drowned in the ocean, became Viranārāyaṇa (i.e. the heroic Nārāyaṇa)

(V 13) Having, by means of punishment, put down obnoxious persons, he destroyed the fiery Chalukyas, (his) enemies, who had completely devastated (the city of) Stamba,¹ just as (a gardener), after removing the thorns by means of a stick, burns chick-peas, the stalks of which have been plucked out with the roots

(V 14) From him who was the comet of destruction to the plantain tree, (viz) the high family of the Chalukyas, was born Krishnarāja (II), of spotless life, whose fame, bright as the moon, wanders about, though constantly drunk by the people by means of the cavities of (their) ears

(V 15) On the advent of clouds, when there is a heavy downpour of rain (and) when the circular rainbow (appears in the sky), the old men thus describe the event of his fight with the roaring Gūṛjara:—"Thus did (he) in anger draw (his) bow, studded with a series of gems darting forth rays; thus did (he) discharge arrows at the heads of the warriors of (his) enemy"

(V 16) From him was born the illustrious Jagattungadēva, who caused the destruction of the multitude of (his) enemies, who surpassed the beauty of Madana, who was the beloved of the goddess of Heroism, (the palm of each of) whose hands (bore the auspicious sign of) a discus shining by means of (the marks of) a banner, a lotus and a conch, (and) who (thus) by (his) greatness excelled Vishnu.

(V 17.) There was a king (named) Sahasrārjuna, sprung from the Haihaya lineage, who relieved the itching sensation² of the powerful and shining long arms of the roaring and invincible Rāvana, (and) the letters (setting forth) whose fame and name, finding a resting-place in the ears of the gods, (and) written by the Siddhas with the dense fluid of nectar, covered the walls of the quarters.

(V. 18) In the dynasty of him who was an axe to the families of (his) enemies, there arose the renowned illustrious king Ranavīgraha, the son of king Kokkalla (and) the lord of Chēdi, into whose circle (of feudatory princes), pilferer as he was of the ornaments of the wives of (his) enemies, entered every enfeebled lord of the earth on the destruction of (his) partisans, just as the moon, destitute of (all) the digits, enters the disc of the sun at the end of the (dark) fortnight

(V 19) From him who was the receptacle of a collection of all virtues (and) the abode of resplendent majesty, there was born a daughter (named) Lakshmi, possessed of lotus-like hands, [just as from the ocean, which is the abode (of the sun) of intensely gleaming rays, there sprang Lakshmi, possessed of a lotus in (her) hand], Jagattungadēva, the moon to the night-lotus of the Yadu race (and) the ravisher of the hearts of beautiful women, married her (viz Lakshmi, the daughter of Ranavīgraha), just as Hari, the moon to the night-lotus of the Yadu race (and) the ravisher of the hearts of beautiful women, married her (viz the goddess Lakshmi).

² [Compare Śīsupālavadha, I. 48.]

(V. 20.) From these two sprang Rat̥ṭa-Kandarpadēva, whose bravery was known as far as the shores of the four oceans, who was a grinding-stone to (his) enemies, who dwelt in the hearts of beautiful women, who was a refuge to all men, (and) who was a store of merit and beauty, [just as from (Hari and Lakshmi) sprang the god Kandarpa (i.e. Cupid), whose prowess is known as far as the shores of the four oceans, who is a grinding-stone to (his) enemies, who abides in the minds of beautiful women, who is a refuge to all persons, (and) who is a store of heavenly beauty]

(V. 21.) This king, overrunning, by means of his own valour, the earth shining with the girdle of the four oceans, became (i.e. was known as) Śrī-Kīrti-Nārāyaṇa, just as the god (Vishnu), covering, with his stride, the earth shining with the girdle of the four oceans, was known as Śrī-Kīrti-Nārāyaṇa, on hearing of whose birth, the lustre of the faces, the minds, and the heads of (his) enemies, whose understanding was bewildered, simultaneously experienced dejection, fear, and the cavity of the hands folded (as a mark of) servitude

(V. 22) This Indrarāja (III), having uprooted Māru (Mahōdaya?) with ease, was not puffed up with pride at (his) defeating (king) Upēndra who had saved Gōvardhana, just as the god Indra, who uprooted (Mount) Māru with ease, was not puffed up with pride at (his) vanquishing (the god) Upēndra (Krishna) who had upheld the Gōvardhana (mountain).¹

(V. 23) This lord of the earth, entitled to obeisance from all men, on founding many endowments to temples and agrahāras (to Brāhmanas), to be respected (by all), became, in point of fame for charity, superior to Paraśurāma, the greatness of whose merits shone by the gift of a single insignificant village.²

(Ll 43-56) And he, the Paramabhaṭṭāraka Mahārājādhirāja Paramēśvara, the prosperous Nityavarshanarēndradēva, who meditates on the feet of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka Mahārājādhirāja Paramēśvara, the prosperous Akālarashadēva, being well, commands all the lords of provinces (rāshṭra), lords of districts (viśhaya), chiefs of villages, leading persons, officials, employés, functionaries, etc., according as they are concerned —

"Be it known to you that by Me, who resides at the capital of Mānyakhēṭa (and) who has come to Kurundaka for the glorious festival of the binding of the fillet,—for the enhancement of the religious merit and fame, in this world and the next, of (My) parents and Myself—with heartfelt devotion—eight centuries of years increased by thirty-six having elapsed since the time of the Śaka king, on the seventh (tithi) of the bright (fortnight) of Phālguna in the Yuva-samvatsara—having, on the completion of the glorious festival of the binding of the fillet, ascended the Tulāpurusha,³ and having, without coming down from the pan, given away, together with twenty lakhs and a half of drammas, Kurundaka and other villages, and four hundred villages besides, that had been confiscated by previous kings,—was bestowed to-day, by pouring water from the hand, for the sake of the Bali, Oharu, Vaiśadēva, Agnihōtra and Atithisantarpana,—upon Siddhapabbatta, of the Lakshmana gōtra, a student of the Vāji-Mādhyandina (śākhā), (and) the son of Śrī-Vennapabbatta who had come from Pātaliputra,—the village of the name of Tenna in the vicinity of Kammanijja situated in the country of Lāta, defined by the four boundaries, viz to the east Vāradapallikā, to the south Nāmbhitataka, to the west Valiśā, (and) to the north the village of Vavviyana,⁴ together with the royal share,

² There is here a play on the word ku, which means both 'the earth' and 'insignificant.'

³ "Gift of gold, etc., equal to a man's weight"—Monier-Williams' Dictionary

The third of them,¹⁰ of white (i.e. pure) character, the vanquisher of foes, having forcibly killed the self-conceited (and) cruel king of the Kāśīs, took Kāśī (from him) His son, known by the name of Jayavardhana (I.), the best of kings, having killed the lord of the Vindhya, took up his residence in the Vindhya for a long time

(V. 4) His son was Śrīvardhana (II.), the lord of the Vindhya, who possessed immovable (permanent) wealth like the immovable Vindhya mountain itself, who banished poverty by gifts of elephants, (and) who augmented the prosperity of various (other) big families.

(V. 5) His son, skilled in destroying all (his) enemies (and) a treasury of great virtues, was called Jayavardhana (II.). The goddess of Wealth so closely embraced him that the goddess of Fame, as if (jealous of her cowife), out of anger ascended to the heavens¹¹

NO 6—MALIYAPUNDI GRANT OF AMMARAJA II

By PROFESSOR E HULTZSCH, PH D ; HALLÉ (SAALÉ)

This interesting record of the Eastern Chālukya dynasty was first published in 1905 by Messrs. A. Butterworth and V. Venugopal Chetti in their Nellore District Inscriptions, p 164 ff, with seven photographic Plates. The original copper-plates had been "discovered by Mr Venugopal Chetti in the Rāmalingēśvarasvāmī temple at Madanūr, a village about 10 miles from Ongole, Nellore district." I re-edit the inscription from ink-impressions supplied by Rai Bahadur V Venkayya, to whom the original plates were kindly forwarded at my request by Mr Butterworth, and who contributes the following remarks on them :—

"These are five copper-plates, measuring $9\frac{1}{2}$ " by about $4\frac{3}{8}$ ". The first and last plates bear writing only on their inner side and have raised rims about $\frac{3}{8}$ " high only on their engraved side. The three remaining plates, which bear writing on both sides, have rims of the same height projecting on both sides.² Through holes ($\frac{7}{8}$ " in diameter), bored on the left margin of each plate, is passed a circular ring, which appears to have been cut and re-soldered before the plates came into my hands. The ring measures $5\frac{1}{8}$ " in diameter and is a little more than $\frac{1}{2}$ " thick. Its ends, which are slightly thinner, are secured in the upper part of an expanded lotus flower of eight petals. To the lower part of the same lotus, which is fashioned into a rim-like projection, is soldered a circular seal, which measures $2\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter and is nearly $\frac{3}{8}$ " thick. It bears, in relief on a countersunk surface, the legend Śrī-Tribhuvanāmbu[śa] in the centre, in characters similar to those of the inscription. Below the legend is an expanded lotus flower, and above it a running (?) boar facing the proper left. In front of the boar is an elephant goad, and behind its tail a crescent."

The alphabet is of the same Telugu type as in other grants of the same dynasty and period. No distinction is made between secondary ô and au, and secondary i and û is often written as i and u. Final k occurs in line 32, t in ll. 8, 30 and 51, n in ll. 10, 18, 24, 37, 39, 52, and m in ll. 5, 7, 9, 11, 12, 51, 54, 55 and 60. The jihvāmūliya is used in ll. 42, 51, and the upadhmanīya in ll. 10, 41, 43, 46 and 51.

The following orthographical irregularities deserve to be noted. Against one of Pāṇini's rules (VIII. 4, 49) the sh of varsha is doubled in ll. 8 and 11, but not in ll. 13, 18, 25 and 40. Some spellings are due to the Telugu pronunciation. Thus we find yētad (l. 57) for ētad, yuttara (ll. 54 f and 57, but not in l. 59) for uttara, raḥṣanāyayiva (l. 47 f) for raḥṣanāy=aiwa, aruḥa (l. 50) for arha, krishṭa (l. 39) for krishna. Dental n is employed instead of lingual ṇ in Kiranapuram and krishna (l. 43), punya (ll. 49, 50), ābharana (ll. 49, 53), ganēsa (l. 50), yuttarāyana (l. 54 f). The vowel ri is replaced by ri in riṣhna (l. 43), śadriśō (l. 52) and kritvō (l. 56). The palatal sibilant is improperly used in saṁha (l. 50) for saṁgha and śadriśō (l. 52) for sadriśō.

The language is Sanskrit prose, interspersed with 20 Sanskrit verses. In ll. 56-60 some names of villages, tanks and fields appear in their Telugu forms. At the end of the record the usual imprecatory verses and the names of the Ājñapti, composer and writer are missing.

As the inscription records a grant to a Jaina temple, it opens with an invocation of the Jaina religion (v. 1). Ll. 3-41 contain the genealogy of the Eastern Chālukya dynasty down to Samastabhuvanāśraya Vijayāditya (VI) or Ammarāja (II), the date of whose coronation is given in the same two verses (13 f) as in his Padankalūru grant.¹ The genealogical portion contains two passages of historical importance, the first (ll. 13-16) describing the reign of Vijayāditya III, and the second (ll. 22-32) the accession of Chālukya-Bhima II.

The Pithāpuram inscription of Mallapadēva reports that Vijayāditya III. slew Mangirāja, burnt Chakrakūta, terrified Sankila, residing in Kiranapura and joined by Krishna, restored his dignity to Vallabhendra, and received elephants as tribute from the king of Kalunga.² The slaying of Mangir is referred to also in three other inscriptions.³ The second of them adds the burning of Kiranapura, and the third states that the king, having terrified Krishna and Sankila, completely burnt their city. Hitherto we did not know who Mangir and Sankila were. Verse 3 of the Maliyapūṇḍi grant calls the former 'the king of the great Nodamba-rāshtra' and the second 'the lord of the excellent Dā[ha]ṇḍa.' Thus Mangir seems to have been one of the Pallavas of *Nolambavādi*⁴ and Sankila an early chief of Dahala (or Chēdi). While two of the above-mentioned inscriptions couple the name of Sankila with that of Krishna, the Maliyapūṇḍi grant (v. 3) states that Sankila was 'joined by the fierce Vallabha.' The Nellore District Inscriptions (p. 169, note 5) correctly conclude from this that Sankila's ally Krishna was a Vallabha, i.e. a Rāshtrakūta. Hence my former identification of this Krishna with the Paramāra king *Krishnarāja*⁵ must be wrong, and he may be identified, as was done by Dr. Fleet,⁶ with the Rāshtrakūta king Krishna II. The latter is known to have been connected with the Chēdi family, being the son-in-law of Kokkalla (I) and the brother-in-law of Śankula.⁷ I feel no hesitation in identifying Sankila of Dahala with Śankula (or Śankaragana) of Chēdi, the son of Kokkalla I, but am unable to identify Kiranapura, where Sankila resided according to the Pithāpuram inscription and Krishnarāja according to the Maliyapūṇḍi grant (v. 15) In two grants the burning of this Kiranapura,¹ the residence of Krishna and Sankila,² is attributed to Vijayāditya III. himself. Verse 15 of the Maliyapūṇḍi grant informs us that this feat was in reality performed by a military officer named Pāṇḍaranga It is perhaps worth noting that another Rāshtrakūṭa prince named Krishnarāja is mentioned in a grant of A.D 888.³ Between the slaying of Mangi and the victory over Sankila the Maliyapūṇḍi grant mentions that Vijayāditya III. 'defeated the Gangas who took refuge on the peak of Gangakūṭa' As suggested in the Nellore District Inscriptions (p 169, note 3), this statement may or may not be a mere variant of one in the Pithāpuram inscription, according to which the king burnt Chakrakūṭa.⁴ He is elsewhere said to have 'defeated the unequalled Gangas'⁵ Finally the new grant reports that Vijayāditya III bore the surname Parachakrarāma (l. 14)

The Maliyapūṇḍi grant gives a vivid description of the struggles that took place after the death of Vikramāditya II. Five years passed in continual wars between the rival claimants, among whom Yuddhamalla, Rājamārtanda and Kanthikā-Vijayāditya are mentioned by name Then Rājabhīma (or Chālukya-Bhīma II) succeeded in restoring order by slaying Rājamārtanda, defeating and banishing Kanthikā-Vijayāditya and Yuddhamalla, and killing many other rebels Yuddhamalla (II) is the son of Tāla, to whom one grant of Chālukya-Bhīma II attributes a reign of seven years,⁶ while two other grants,⁷ like the Maliyapūṇḍi grant, take no official notice of his reign Rājamārtanda is perhaps the same as Rājamayya in the Kaluchumbarru grant,⁸ and he is mentioned also in the Kolavennu plates.⁹ In editing these plates I committed a mistake, which has been endorsed by Dr. Fleet¹⁰ and Prof. Kielhorn,¹¹ in taking Rājamārtanda as a surname of Chālukya-Bhīma II. As stated in the Nellore District Inscriptions (p 170, note 4), the Maliyapūṇḍi grant now shows that Rājamārtanda was a distinct person Dr. Fleet has already noticed that ll 17-19 of the Kolavennu plates contain a verse,¹² the first half of which I would now, with the help of his remarks, correct as follows —

Thus the verse mentions four enemies of Chālukya-Bhīma II —Tātabikyana, Dhaladi (or Dhalaga), Munniṭiva and Rājamārtanda Kanthikā-Vijayāditya, whom the king banished along with Yuddhamalla II, is undoubtedly the same as Kanthikā-Bēta or Vijayāditya V, the son of Amma I. and the ancestor of the Eastern Chālukyas of Pithāpuram.¹³

The subjoined grant was made at a winter solstice (uttarāyana, l 54 f) The donee was a temple of Jina (Jinālaya) in the south of Dharmapuri (v 17), which was in charge of a priest of the Yāpaniya-saṃgha¹⁴ (v 18). It had been founded by the Kaṭakarāja (l. 54) Durgarāja (v. 16) and was named Kaṭakābharana-Jinālaya (v 17 and l 53), evidently after a surname of the founder At his request (l 54) the grant was made, and the grant portion opens with a pedigree of his family His ancestor Pāṇḍaranga is stated to have burnt Kiranapura, the residence of Krishnarāja (v. 15), and accordingly must have been a military officer of Vijayāditya III.¹⁵ His son Niravadyadhavala was appointed Kaṭakarāja (l. 44 f). His son was the Kaṭakādhipati Vijayāditya (l 45 f), and his son was Durgarāja (v. 16).

Pāṇḍarāṅga (the Pāṇḍaranga of v. 15) is mentioned as Ājñapti in a grant of Vijayāditya III¹. The title Kaṭakarāja or Kaṭakādhipati, i.e. 'superintendent of the royal camp,' which was borne by his three lineal descendants, seems to be peculiar to the court of the Eastern Chālukya kings. Dr Fleet remarked that the grants of Amma I and Amma II. mention Kaṭakarāja, Katakēśa and Kaṭakādhipa as Ājñapti, and came to the conclusion that these two words were not proper names, but mere titles². The Malyapūṇḍi grant now shows that in each case they refer to one of the three direct descendants of Pāṇḍaranga, who bore that title, viz. Nīravadyadhavala, Vijayāditya and Durgarāja. It seems preferable to take also Kaṭeyarāja in the grant of Chālukya-Bhīma I³ as a vulgar form of Kaṭakarāja, the title of Vijayāditya, and not as a proper name.

The object of the grant was the small village (grāmaṭikā) of Malyapūṇḍi (l. 55) in the district (viśaya) of Kamma-nāṇḍu (l. 42). Its boundaries are given in l. 56 f. The northern boundary, Dharmavuramu, is the Telugu form of Dharmapurī, to the south of which the Jinālaya was situated (v. 17). According to the Nellore District Inscriptions (p. 174, note) both Dharmapuram and the western boundary, Kalvakuru, are now in the Addanki division of the Ongole tāluka. Of two inscriptions at Dharmavaram (p. 966 ff of the same work) the first mentions Gunakenalla (Vijayāditya III), Pāṇḍaranga, the burning of Kiranapura, and Dharmavuram. An inscription at Addanki (p. 896 f. of the same work) also refers to Pāṇḍaranga and Dharmavuram. Malyapūṇḍi itself, the village granted, does not exist any more at present (ibid p. 167), but its former position is fixed by the identification of two of its boundaries. The district of Kamma-nāṇḍu, to which it belonged, is identical with the Kamma-rāshtra or Kammāka-rāshtra of other inscriptions. To my former remarks on this geographical name⁴ may be added that it occurs as Kammāka-raṣṭra in the Jaggayyapēta inscriptions of Purisadata⁵. This Prākṛit form renders my suggestion that Kammāka may be meant for *Kammānka*⁶ untenable, for the latter would have become in Prākṛit Kammanika, and not Kammāka.

No 7—PLATES OF VIJAYA-DEVAVARMAN

By PROFESSOR E HULTZSCH, PH D, HALLE (SAALE).

Two sets of excellent ink-impressions of this grant were sent to me by Rai Bahadur V Venkayya, who had received the original plates from the Collector of the Kistna district

³ According to Buddhist works, pratihārya or pratihārya means 'jugglery, working miracles,' see the St Petersburg Dictionary.

"The plates belong to the Head Assistant Collector of Narsapur, in whose office they have been lying for a long time. The person from whom they were originally obtained is not known."

"The copper-plates are four in number. Their length is $5\frac{1}{4}$ inches, and their height $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches at the ends and $2\frac{3}{8}$ inches in the middle. Their margins are not raised into rims. The ring was cut by me (viz. Mr Venkayya) for the first time. Its diameter is $2\frac{5}{8}$ inches, and its thickness slightly over $\frac{1}{4}$ inch. The ends of the ring are secured at the base of an oval seal, measuring $2\frac{3}{8}$ by $1\frac{1}{8}$ inches. The seal is all but obliterated, but a faint trace of some quadruped—perhaps a tiger—can be seen."

The inscription on the plates is carefully engraved and on the whole in a state of very good preservation. The alphabet resembles that of the three grants of Simhavarmā¹ and of the plates of Vijaya-Nandivarmā². But neither t nor n have a loop at the left. As in the Hīrahadagallī plates,³ the former is distinguished by a slight curve at the right, compare e.g. the ta of etassa (l. 8) with the na of vayanena (l. 7). As first members of a consonant group both look the same; see the ttā of āchchhettā and the ntā of ch=ānumantā (l. 17). Final forms of t and m, followed by a mark of punctuation which looks like a right angle, occur at the end of lines 17 and 19. The numerical symbol 20 occurs in line 11, the symbols 3 and 10 are used in the date (l. 15), and the plates ii a, ii b, iii a, iii b and iv are numbered consecutively, like the pages of a modern book,⁴ with the symbols 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 on the left margin, on the first plate the sacred syllable ōm occupies the place of the figure 1.

The language is Prākṛit prose, with the exception of the last plate which bears two of the customary Sanskrit verses. While in the cave inscriptions every double consonant is expressed by a single letter, the orthography of the prose part of the subjoined plates agrees in this respect with that of the literary Prākṛit and of the British Museum plates of Chārudēvi.⁵ In samvachchhara (l. 14) v is doubled after anusvāra. The language of the new plates is more archaic than that of the literary Prākṛit in one important point: single consonants between vowels generally remain unchanged.⁶ Thus k is preserved in bhaṭṭāraka (l. 3), kh in pamukha (l. 7), g in bhagavato (l. 1), j in vijaya (ll. 1, 6, 14), yājñ (l. 5) and mahārāja (l. 6), t in bhagavato (l. 1), anujjhāta (l. 2 f.), bhānitavva and eta (l. 8), pariharitavva (l. 13 f.), th in ratha (l. 2); d in pāda (ll. 2 and 3) and padesa (l. 10), dh in medha (l. 5). But elision and ya-sruti have taken place in addhaya (l. 11) for ārddha, nyattana (l. 10) for nivartana, vayana (l. 7) for vachana, and at the beginning of the enclitic cha in duvaggāna ya (l. 12) and pariharitavvo ya (l. 13 f.).⁷ The word Pausa (l. 15) appears in its Sanskrit form.⁸ Dental n occurs in anujjhāta (l. 2 f.), Sālankāyana (l. 4), yājño (l. 5), gharaṭṭhāna (ll. 11 and 12) = Sanskrit grihasthāna, and lingual n in bhānitavva (l. 8), Ganasamma (l. 9), duvaggāna and rakkhana (l. 12), samānatta (l. 13) = Sanskrit samāññāpta,⁹ and samvachchharāna (l. 14). Both n and ṇ appear in vayanena (l. 7), nyattanān[ṇ] (l. 10) and manussānam (l. 11).¹⁰ Among the remaining Prākṛit words may be noted the two numerals terasa (l. 15) and viṣaṇ (l. 11),¹¹ and of other inflected words the ablative Vengīpurā (l. 1), the genitives Devavamassa (l. 6) and Ganasamassa (l. 9),¹² the two differently formed locatives Elūre (l. 7) and padesamhi (l. 10), and the instrumental parihārehi (l. 13).

The inscription is dated on the tenth tithi of the dark fortnight of Pausa in the thirteenth year (in words and figures, l. 14 f.) of the Mahārāja Vijaya-Dēvavarman (l. 6), who issued this grant from Vēṅgipura (l. 1) and addressed it to the villagers of Ēlūra (l. 7). The donee was named Ganaśarman (l. 9) and received twenty (in words and figures, l. 11) navartanas of land, evidently near Ēlūra, together with a site for his house and a site for the houses of his servants.

The king is described as 'the performer of horse-sacrifices, the Śālan-kāyana, the fervent Māhēśvara, who is devoted to the feet of the lord (his) father, (and) who meditates at the feet of the holy Chitrarathasvāmin.' Nearly the same epithets are applied in another set of plates to the Mahārāja Vijaya-Nandivarman,¹ who was the son of the Mahārāja Chandavarman, issued his grant likewise from Vēṅgipura, and addressed it to the inhabitants of a village in the district of Kndrāhāra.² This family may be designated the Śālan-kāyana Mahārājas of Vēṅgipura. As Dēvavarman's grant is in Prākṛit, he was presumably an ancestor of Chandavarman's son Nandivarman, whose grant is in Sanskrit.

Vēṅgipura, the capital of the Śālan-kāyanas, has been identified with Pedda-Vēgi, a village near Ellore in the Godavari district.³ The correctness of this identification is confirmed by the existence of a small mound which, on a visit to Pedda-Vēgi in 1902, was shown to me by the villagers as the site of the ancient temple of Chitrarathasvāmin,⁴ the family deity of the Śālan-kāyana Mahārājas. Other indications point to the same part of the country. The plates of Vijaya-Nandivarman were found in the neighbouring Kollern lake,⁵ and Ēlūra, to whose inhabitants the subjoined edict was addressed, is no doubt the modern town of Ēlūru (Ellore), 7 miles from Pedda-Vēgi.

TRANSLATION.

Om (Line 1.) From the prosperous and victorious Vēngipura. The villagers³ of Ēlūra, headed by the Muluda,⁴ must be addressed (as follows) by the word of the glorious Mahārāja Vijaya-Dēvavarman, the performer of horse-sacrifices, the Śāṅkāyana, the fervent Māhēśvara, who is devoted to the feet of the lord (his) father, (and) who meditates at the feet of the holy⁵ Chitrarathasvāmīn :—

(L 8) "It has been ordered that to this⁶ Ganaśarman of the Ba[bhura]⁷ gōtra (there have to be made over) twenty—20—nivartanas of land in a handsome locality, a house-site (for himself, and) a house-site for the men who receive half the crop⁸ and for (his) door-keepers,⁹ (and) that the immunities (granted to him) have to be protected And thus he must be exempted with all immunities (In) the victorious year thirteen—13—(of the reign), (on) the tenth—[10]—tithi of the dark fortnight of Pausa "

No 8—BENARES INSCRIPTION OF PANTHA.

By P DAYA RAM SAHNI

I edit this inscription from two rubbings kindly supplied to me, one by Dr J. Ph Vogel, Superintendent, Archaeological Survey, Northern Circle, and the other by Mr G. D Ganguli, Curator, Provincial Museum, Lucknow A transcript of it has been published before in 1886 by Prof Hultzsch in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenlandischen Gesellschaft, Vol. XL p 55

The slab on which the inscription is engraved is said to have been discovered in the vicinity of the modern city of Benares, and is one of the twenty-four objects which were presented at the instance of Mr. J. H. Marshall, to the Lucknow Museum by the Principal of Queen's

³ Literally, 'the village'

⁸ On ardhika or ardhasṛin see the Mitāksharā on Yājñavalkya, I. 166. The Prākṛit form addhika occurs in Ep Ind Vol I, p 6, text line 39

College, Benares, in December 1903¹ In discussing these sculptures, Dr. Vogel also noticed this stone, but failed to ascertain its precise find-spot.²

Judging from the rubbings, the slab which bears the extant portion of the inscription measures 26" by 15" (66 cm by 38 cm.) The stone-mason has done his work with great care and neatness, and the letters are deeply cut.

The inscription consists of eight lines, but it is far from complete About one-fifth of the entire slab is broken away along the proper left edge, and consequently lines 1-7 have each lost a number of syllables, which varies from nine to fourteen The first three syllables of the first line and the first akshara of the second line have also disappeared owing to a small piece of stone having chipped off from the upper right corner The record is further damaged by the surface having more or less peeled off in the marginal portions.

The characters of the inscription very closely resemble those of an inscription from Jhârâpâtan³ and are of the ornamental type current in Northern India about the beginning of the eighth century A.D. Attention must, however, be drawn to the letters bh and y.⁴ The former of these always, and the latter in several cases, exhibit forms which come very close to those of the Maukhari alphabet of the sixth century A.D. The language is correct Sanskrit and metrical throughout. As regards orthography, there are three different points which deserve notice (1) the doubling of the letters m, t, p and v in conjunction with a preceding or following r, in -maranayôr=mmôksha, l. 1, yattrâ, l. 2; attrâ and -mûrtih, l. 4; sarppat-sarppa- and -ruchur=vvilâla-, l. 6, (2) the substitution of a single consonant for a double one in -tatva, l. 3, -vrityâ, l. 4, ujvalam, l. 7, and (3) the use of v for b in vrahmahâ, l. 2, and sandhuandha-, l. 7

The inscription is not dated, and its object is to record the erection of a shrine of Bhavânî at Benares There are altogether five verses, the first three in the Sragdharâ and the last two in the Śârdûlavikrîdita metre. The first stanza is devoted to the praise of the city of Vârânasî The purport of the second verse is not quite certain; it seems to speak of a particular quarter of the holy city, which was often visited even by the moon when practising her penance The third verse contains an eulogy of the builder of the shrine, named Pantha, and the last two speak of the consecration of the Bhavânî image (2) and the construction of the shrine, respectively

B.—NADOL PLATES OF THE RĀJAPUTRA KĪRTIPĀLA; [VIKRAMA-JSAMVAT 1218.]

Mr Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha of Udaipur in Rājputāna has informed me that these plates also were obtained, in the course of last year, at Nadol. My account of them is mainly based on two good rubbings, kindly supplied to me by Mr. Ojha

⁷ Read kaśchim.

⁸ Read kaśchim.

¹⁰ Metre . Upajati.

¹² Metre Śārdūlavikrīḍita

¹⁴ Read prāg=

¹⁵ Read bhavad=, and, perhaps, Vāsalaḥ

These also are two plates, each of which measures about $9\frac{1}{2}$ " broad by $6\frac{1}{2}$ " high. The first plate is inscribed on one side only, and the second on both sides¹. The writing on them is in a state of perfect preservation. Each plate contains a hole for a ring; I do not know whether the ring and any seal that may have been attached to it have been preserved. The characters are Nāgarī, and the language is Sanskrit. The text contains eight verses² of chiefly genealogical matter, three of the ordinary imprecatory verses, and one verse giving the writer's name, the rest is in prose, which in one or two places is grammatically incorrect. As regards orthography, the letter v is used for both b and v, except in -labdhajanmā, l. 3, the dental sibilant is used for the palatal in Mahēsvaram, l. 22; and the sign of avagraha is once employed, in śṅgajah, l. 16. In line 29 the gerund lagitvā is used in the sense of 'commencing from, beginning with.'

The inscription records a grant by the Rājaputra (or king's son) Kīrtipāla, a son of Ālhanadēva of Naddūla. After the words ōm svasti, it invokes the blessing of the gods Brahman, Śrīdhara (Viṣṇu), and Śamkara (Śiva), 'who, always free from passion, are famous in the world as Jinās' (or Jaina Arhats). It then (in verses 2-8) gives the following genealogy:—

In the town of Śākambhari there was formerly, in the Chāhamāna³ lineage, the king Vākpatirāja. His son was Lakshmana, who was king at Naddūla; and his son was Sōbhita. From him sprang Balirāja, and after him there ruled his paternal uncle Vigrahapāla. Vigrahapāla's son was Mahēndra, his son Anahilla, and his son Jēndrarāja, from whom sprang *Āsarāja*⁴. His son was Ālhana, the lord of Naddūla, who defeated the Saurāshṭrikas. This king married Annalladēvi,⁵ a daughter of Anahula of the *Rāshṭrauda*⁶ race, who bore to him three sons—Kēlhana, Gajasimha, and Kīrtipāla. Of these, Kēlhana, the eldest son, was made kumāra (or heir-apparent) and given a share in the government.

According to l. 17 ff. the *Rājakula*⁷ Ālhanadēva and the Kumāra Kēlhanadēva were pleased to give to the Rājaputra Kīrtipāla twelve villages appertaining to Naddūlāi. And then, on Monday, the 5th of the dark half of Śrāvana of the year 1218, the Rājaputra Kīrtipāla, after bathing etc at Naddūla and worshipping the Sun and Mahēsvara (Śiva), granted a yearly sum of two drammas from each of the twelve villages of Naddūlāi to (the temple of) the Jina Mahāvira at the village of Naddūlāi, and ordered this money to be paid in the month of Bhādrapada of every year, commencing with the year then current. The twelve villages to which this order referred were Naddūlāigrāma, Sūjēra, Darjī, Kavilāda, Sōnānam, Mōrakarā, Haravandam, Mādāda, Kānasuvam, Dēvasūri, Nādāda, and Mauvadi.

So far as I can judge, the village of Naddūlāi mentioned in the above is different from (the mahāsthāna) Naddūla, and the words Naddūlāi-pratibaddha in line 18 appear clearly to show that Naddūlāi not merely was the name of a village, but also denoted the district to which the twelve villages given to Kīrtipāla belonged.— On the map of the Rājputāna Agency I find,

⁴ In C, the name is Āsarāja, while in A, the actual spelling is Āsarāja. Here we have Āsarāja, and in D the actual spelling is Āsarāja.

⁷ On this and similar titles see my remarks above, Vol IV. p. 312, note 7. Mahārājakula occurs below in D., and in other Mount Ābū inscriptions.

south-east of Nadol, Desuri, which most probably is the Dévasúri of this inscription; of the other villages I can find no traces on the map

After the imprecatory verses the inscription (in lines 33 and 34) has the words 'this is the own hand (i.e. sign-manual) of the Mahārājaputra (or Mahārāja's son), the illustrious Kīrti-pāla,' and the statement that this grant was written by Śubhamkara, the son of Dīpmódara and grandson of the Kāyastha Sôḍha of the Naigama lineage.

The possible equivalents of the date, for the pūrnimānta and amānta month Śrāvana, would be — for the Chaitrādī Vikrama year 1218 current Saturday, the 25th June A.D. 1160, and Monday, the 25th July A.D. 1160 (when the 5th tithi of the dark half ended 9 h 8 m after mean sunrise), for the Chaitrādī Vikrama year 1218 expired Friday, the 14th July A.D. 1161, and Sunday, the 13th August A.D. 1161 (when the 5th tithi of the dark half ended 3 h 16 m after mean sunrise), for the Kārttikādī Vikrama year 1218 expired Tuesday, the 3rd July A.D. 1162 (when the 5th tithi of the dark half ended 11 h 58 m. after mean sunrise), and Thursday, the 2nd August A.D. 1162

From this it will be seen that the given date is correct only for the amānta month Śrāvana of the current Chaitrādī Vikrama year 1218, and therefore apparently corresponds to Monday, the 25th July A.D. 1160. As current Vikrama years are quoted very rarely, this result is not perhaps quite free from suspicion, but I can see no valid reason to question the authenticity of the wording of the original date.¹

¹ With reference to the above I may state that Mr. Ojha has sent me a rubbing of a grant (engraved on one side of one plate only) of the Mahārājādhirāja Kēlhanadēva, which is dated in line 1 samvat 1223 varshē Jy[ēṣṭh]a vadī 12 Sonē. This date also works out satisfactorily only for the amānta Jyāishṭha of the current Chaitrādī Vikrama year 1223, for which it corresponds to Monday, the 7th June A.D. 1165.

C.—SUNDHĀ HILL INSCRIPTION OF CHÂCHIGADĒVA; [VIKRAMA-]SĀMVAṬ 1319.

This inscription is on two stones which were found on the Sundhā Hill, about 10 miles north of Jaswantapura in the Jaswantapura district of the Jōdhpur State of Rājputāna.⁸ I edit it from rubbings, kindly placed at my disposal by Mr. Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha.

The first stone contains 26 lines of writing which covers a space of 3' 3" broad by 1' 7½" high, the second 24 lines which cover a space of 2' 10" broad by 1' 5" high. The size of the letters is about ½" on the first stone, and between ⅔ and ⅞" on the second. The inscription was carefully written by Nāmvasiṁha, a son of the physician Vijayapāla, and well engraved by Jisaravi, a son of the sūtradhāra Jisapāla, and is in a state of perfect preservation. The characters are Nāgarī, and the language is Sanskrit. Excepting two prose passages at the bottom of either stone which record the names of the author, the writer and the engraver, the date samvat 1319 in line 43, and another prose passage, numbered as a verse, in lines 35 and 36, the text is in verse, the total number of verses (including the prose passage counted as a verse) being 59. As regards orthography, the sign for v denotes both v and b, the palatal sibilant is used for the dental in śasya-, l. 16, śravaṇī, l. 19, sahasrāmsu- (for sahasrāmsu-), l. 22, śalīla-, l. 23, śitah-, l. 25, and śitāmsu- (for śitāmsu-), l. 37, kh and sh are confounded in mayūsha- (for mayūkha-), l. 10, and piyūkha- (for piyūsha-), l. 41, the i of śrī is left unchanged before the initial vowel of a proper name in śrī-Āśārāja-, l. 21, śrī-Udayasiṁha-, l. 35, and śrī-Aparājītēsa-, l. 43, chchh is written for chh in chchhalēna-, l. 7, and chchhāyayā-, l. 8, and the sign of avagraha is employed in Saṁdērā srka-, l. 16, and in four other places. The language is generally correct and plain, but there are one or two passages about the exact meaning of which I am still doubtful. I especially do not understand verse 12, which seems to allude to some legend unknown to me, in which the creator weighs the sun and the moon, apparently using the Ganges as a balance. Moreover, I am not sure about the meanings of the word śrīkarī, which occurs in verses 19 and 59, and gupyadguru in verses 15, 26, and 27. To judge from the context in verse 59 (śrīkarī-saptakavādī-), the former⁹ may denote some kind of musical instrument, and as a gupyadguru must be

⁶ Of the three lines on this side only a transcript has been sent to me by Mr. Ojha.

⁸ I owe this information to Mr. Ojha.

something on which a golden kumbha and a golden kalāśa can be placed,¹ the word perhaps denotes a temple generally or a particular temple. Of rare words or words employed in an unusual way we may note kēli, 'the earth,' in verse 6, bhūsphōṭa, 'a mushroom,' in verse 16, the feminine yugali, 'a pair,' in verse 18, and tāmbūliya, 'an areca-nut,' in verse 21, bandhu and bāndhava denote 'a brother' in verses 24, 26, and 20, and a cousin is described as pitruvyaja-tayā bāndhava, i.e. 'a brother in consequence of being born from a paternal uncle,' in verse 9.

The inscription in the prose passage at the bottom of the first stone and in verse 59 is styled a prasaṣti. It was composed by the (Jaina) sūri Jayamangala (Jayamangalāchārya), who belonged to the Brihad-gachchha and was a disciple of Rāmachandra, himself a disciple of Dēvāchārya.² And its primary object is to glorify the Chāhamāna chief Chāchigadēva, during whose reign it was composed, and for whom it furnishes a date³ in the month of Vaiśākha of the [Vikrama] year 1319, falling in about A.D. 1262. Fortunately, the author has used the occasion to give a eulogistic account of the Chāhamānas of Naddūla generally, which is of considerable interest.

Verses 1-3 pray the moon on Śambhu's (i.e. Śiva's) forehead and (Śiva's consort) Pārvatī or Chandikā to grant continuous good fortune and happiness. Verse 4 then records that formerly there was the hero Chāhamāna, a source of joy to the great Rishi Vatsa.⁴ In his lineage there were —

(1) The lord of Naddūla, king Lakshmaṇa, who was a Śākambhari prince⁵ (vv. 5 and 6).

(2) His son Sōbhita (v. 7; the Sōhiya and Sōbhita of A. and B.). He took away the glory of the lord (or lords) of the mountain Arbuda.⁶

(3) His son Balirāja (vv. 7 and 8). He defeated an army of Muñjarāja, i.e. the Paramāra Vākpātirāja II. Amoghavaraha of Mālava, for whom we possess dates from A.D. 974 to 993.

(4) His paternal uncle's son Mahindu (v. 9) — He is the Mahēndra of A. and B., the son of Vīgrahapāla whose name is here omitted. He most probably is identical with the Mahēndra or Mahindra (?) mentioned under No. 53 of my Northern List as a contemporary of the Rāshtrakūta Dhavala of Hastikundi, whose inscription is dated in A.D. 997.

(5) His son Aśvapāla (vv. 10 and 11, omitted in A. and B.)

(6) His son Ahila (vv. 12 and 13, likewise omitted in A. and B.) He defeated an army of the Gūjjara king Bhīma, i.e. the Chaulukya Bhīmadēva I of Anahlapātaka.

(7.) His paternal uncle Anahilla (vv. 14-17, in A. and B. described as the son of Mahēndra) He also defeated the king Bhīma (Bhīmadēva I.), took Śākambhari; and slew

² He is described as śrikarī-saptaka-vādin which, as intimated above, appears to mean 'playing the seven śrikarīs.'

³ The exact date (in verse 57) is the akṣaya-tīrtīyā or third tīthi of the bright half of the month Mādhava (Vaiśākha) of the [Vikrama] year 1319, given both in words and in figures. The date does not admit of verification; its possible equivalents would be the 4th April A.D. 1261, the 23rd April A.D. 1262, and the 12th April A.D. 1263.

(or defeated) Sādha, a general of the Mālava king Bhōja (i.e. the Paramāra Bhojadēva), and the Turushka.

(8) His son Bālaprasāda (vv. 18 and 19, omitted in B) He forced the king Bhīma (Bhīmadēva I) to release from prison a king named Krishnadēva — This Krishnadēva most probably is the Paramāra Krishnarāja (the son of Dhandhukal and grandson of (?) Dēvarāja), of whom we have two inscriptions at Bhīmāl (Śrīmāla), dated in A.D. 1060 and 1067 (Nos. 659 and 690 of my Northern List)

(9) His brother Jindurāja (vv. 20 and 21, the Jēndrarāja of A and B). He fought victoriously at Sandēra (the modern Sanderao in the Jōdhpur State, south-west of Nadol).

(10) His son Prithvipāla (vv. 22 and 23, omitted in B). He defeated an army of the Gūrjara king Karna, i.e. Bhīmadēva's son and successor Karna Trailōkyamalla

(11) His brother Yōjaka (vv. 24 and 25, the Jōjalla of A, omitted in B) He by force occupied Anahillapura (Anahilapataka)

(12) His brother Āśārāja (vv. 26-30, in B described as the son of Jēndrarāja). He pleased Siddhādhirāja, i.e. Karna's son and successor Jayasinha Siddharāja, by the assistance which he rendered to him in the country of Mālava, but afterwards apparently was on hostile terms with him

With the account of Āśārāja ends that part of the inscription which is on the first stone. The part on the second stone (after a symbol for om) begins, as if it were an independent inscription, with a verse (v. 31) praying for the blessing of Śambhu (Śiva), 'the crest of the Sugandhādri,' i.e. the mountain Sugandha, which clearly is the Sundhā Hill where the inscription was found. The author then continues the genealogy by stating that Āśārāja's son was —

(13) Āhlādana (vv. 32 and 33, the Ālhanadēva of A and B) His assistance was sought by the Gūrjara king, and his army put down disturbances in the mountainous part of Surāshtra (gīraṇ Saurāshṭrē). He built a Śiva temple at Naddūla — We have seen above that the two inscriptions A and B, which are of this chief's reign, are dated in A.D. 1161 and 1160. Before that time, he is mentioned (together with his son Kēlhana), apparently as a feudatory of the Chālukya Kumārapāla, in the Kerādu fragmentary inscription of Kumārapāla's reign which is dated in A.D. 1153 (No. 133 of my Northern List)

(14) His son Kēlhana (v. 34) He defeated the southern king Bhūlīma, and after destroying the Turushka erected a golden tōraṇa, 'like a diadem for the abode of the holy Sōmēsa' — For the Mahārājādhirāja Kēlhana I have given above, p. 68, note 1, a date in A.D. 1165. The southern king Bhūlīma, whom he is said to have defeated, must have been the Dēvagiri-Yādava Bhūlīma, whose Gadag inscription is dated in A.D. 1191 (No. 334 of my Southern List)

(15) His brother Kīrtipāla (vv. 35 and 36) He defeated a Kirātakūta chief named Āsala, and at Kāsahrada routed an army of the Turushka. As ruler of the kingdom of Naddūla he took up his residence at Jāvalīpura — Of the places here mentioned Kirātakūta is Kerādu, according to Bhāvnagar Inscr. p. 172,³ 'a small village near Hāthamo under Bādamera' (Bārmer) in the Jōdhpur State. Jāvalīpura, to which Kīrtipāla transferred his residence, is the town of Jalor in the same State. A place named Kāsahrada has been identified by the late Prof Bühler¹ with Kāsandra or Kāsandhra, a village with about 400 inhabitants on the road from Dholk to Pālitnā, in Long 72° 11', Lat 22° 19', but the Kāsahrada of this inscription may be a different place nearer Nadol—According to verse 41 Kirtipala's daughter Rūḍaladēvi built two temples of Śiva at Jāvālpura.

² I understand this epithet to mean that there was a temple of Śiva on the mountain Sugandha

(16.) His son Samarasimha (vs. 37-40). He built extensive ramparts on the Kanakāchala (or 'gold hill') and founded the town of Samarapura.—This town I am unable to identify. Kancalala according to Mr. Ojha is the name of the fort² of Jālor which, he informs me, is locally known as 'Soulgarh,' and the Sarvatra-giri of Jāvālpura I find actually mentioned in an inscription on Mount Ābu.³ In an inscription of the [Vikrama] year 1221, from which Mr. Ojha has sent me a quotation it is called Kaṇchana-gadha—Samarasimha clearly is the Chahamana⁴ Samarasimha, whose daughter Līlādēvi was the (or a) queen of the Chahamana Bhīmāditya II.⁵

(17.) His son Udayasimha (vs. 42-46). According to the prose passage in lines 35 and 36 he ruled 'the glorious Naddula, the glorious Jāvālpura, Māndavyapura, Vāgbhaṭamēru, Sūrāchanda Rāṭahraḍa, Kheda, Rāmasamya, Śrīmāla, Ratnapura, Satyapura, and other places.—With the exception of Māndavyapura and Rāṭahraḍa the places here enumerated are easily found on the map of the Rajputana Agency (in Marwar) under the names Nādol, Jālor, Bārmer, Surāṭ, Kheda (or on the river Bilotra), Rāmsen, Bhīmāl, Ratnapura and Surāṭ.—Māndavyapura is Mandor, according to the Rajputana Gazetteer three miles from Jādhpur, Rāṭahraḍa I cannot identify—Udayasimha's queen was Prahlādanadēvi, who bore to him the sons, Chāchuraditya and Chāmundaśrāja. Regarding his exploits, the inscription states in a general way that he subdued the pride of the Turushka, was not to be conquered by the Gūrjara lords, and put an end to the Sindhu king. He was a scholar conversant with the great words of Bhāṣya⁶ and others, and built two Śiva temples at Jāvālpura.—Udayasimha clearly is identical with the Udayasimhaditya of whose reign we have three inscriptions at Bhīmāl (No. 647-699 of my Northern List) dated in the [Vikrama] years 1262, 1274 and 1295, corresponding to about A.D. 1205, A.D. 1218, and about A.D. 1248, and also with the Udayasimhaditya of whom I have given a date, falling in A.D. 1249, in Ind. Ant. Vol. XIX p. 175, No. 115. He was succeeded by—

(18.) His son Chāchigad (vs. 47-57). He in verse 50 is described as 'destroying the roaring Gūrjara lord Virama, hating the enemy Śalya, taking exquisite delight in felling the shalig (or karpas) Patuka, depriving of his colour Sanga, and a thunderbolt to the mountain—the furious Nahara.' As will be seen from this translation, the words śalya,⁷ pātuka and sanga of the original must, in my opinion, like vīrama and nahara, be taken as proper names, but of the five persons enumerated I can identify only the first. Being described as 'Gūrjara lord,' Virama appears clearly to be the Vaghilā Viramadēva, the son of Viradbavala and elder brother of Virādadeva, who is reported to have been the son-in-law of Udayasimha of Jāvālpura,⁸ and

⁸ See Ind. Ant. Vol. VI p. 190. Compare also the Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. I. Part I p. 203, where Jāvālpura has been taken to be Jabalpur.

would therefore have been the own brother-in-law of Châchugadêva — The following verses treat of the same chief's works of piety. At Śrīmāla he remitted certain taxes, and at Râmasainya he granted funds for the worship of (the god) Vîgrahāditya, and placed a golden cupola (kumbha) and a flag-staff (dhvaja) on the temple of (the god) Aparântêsa to whom at the same time he gave a silver girdle (mâkhalâ). For the same temple he provided a hall (śālâ) with a car (ratha) richly decked with precious stones. Châchugadêva visited the Śugandhâdri, worshipped there the goddess Châmundâ, known by the name Aghatêsvarî, and at her temple established a manḍapa which was consecrated by the Brâhmins on the akshaya-tritîyâ of the month Vaiśâkha of the [Vikrama] year 1319

I have already stated that the inscription thus for the reign of Châchugadêva yields a date in about A.D. 1262. Two other dates, of the [Vikrama] years 1333 and 1334, falling in about A.D. 1276 and 1277, are furnished for him by the two Bhūmāl inscriptions Nos 702 and 703 of my Northern List, where he is described as the Mahârâjakula Châchuga or Châchugadêva

I may add that Châchugadêva is mentioned, under the name Châcha, in line 8 of the Jôdhpur inscription of Rûpâdêvi, published by me above, Vol. IV p 312 ff. In my text of that inscription I have given the name as Châva, and a renewed examination of the impressions enables me to affirm that either this is the actual reading, or that at any rate the name would be so read in the impressions by any one not acquainted with what we have learnt now from the Sundhâ Hill inscription. Knowing what I do now, I have no doubt that the intended reading is Châcha. This Châcha is called a Châhumâna in Rûpâdêvi's inscription and described as the son of Udayasîmha¹ and grandson of Samarasîmha, which exactly fits our Châchugadêva. The inscription supplies the additional information that Châcha's wife was Lakshmîdêvi, and that this lady bore to him Rûpâdêvi, who became the wife of a king Têjasîmha (to whom she bore a son named Kshêtrasîmha) and founded a well or tank in A.D. 1284, in the reign of the Manârâjakula Sâmyantasîmhadêva.²

D.—MOUNT ÂBŪ INSCRIPTION OF LUNṬIGADĒVA;
[VIKRAMA-]SAMVAT 1377.

This inscription is on a stone which is built into the wall outside the porch of the Achalēśvara temple on Mount Âbū. A translation of it was given, about eighty years ago, by H. H. Wilson in Asiatic Researches, Vol. XVI p 285 ff⁸ My account of its contents is based on impressions kindly sent to me by Prof Hultzsch, who had received them from Mr Consens.⁹ I mainly treat of the inscription here in order to give the true names of the chiefs who are mentioned in it, and to show the connection of these chiefs with those of the preceding inscriptions. The published translation long ago led me to suspect that this record also belonged to the Chāhamāna family of Naddūla, I am able to prove now that such is really the case.

The stone contains 32 lines of writing which covers a space of about 1' 11" broad by 1' 4" high. Portions of the first ten, and the last three lines and some of the final letters of nearly all lines are entirely gone or defaced. The characters are Nāgarī, and the language is somewhat incorrect Sanskrit. Up to nearly the end of line 29 there are 36 verses, forming a prasasti which was composed by a certain Mahādihara,¹⁰ the rest seems to be all in prose.

After three verses, for the greater part illegible, in which the blessing of certain divine beings is invoked, the author proposes to celebrate repairs made at the Achalēśvara temple, and to give the lineage of the person who made them. He then (in verses 6-10) records that, when the solar and lunar races had come to an end, the holy Vachchha (i.e. Vatsa) brought about the creation of a new race of warriors, the Chāhumāna¹¹ race, and that in it there was a person-age named Sindhurāja,¹² who conquered all other families.

³ Metre Śārdūlavikrīḍita

⁴ Metre-Ślōka (Anushtubh)

⁵ Metre Māndākrāntā.

⁶ Metre- Upajāti.—Here, as in verse 19, śrīkṛt was originally engraved.

⁷ Read simhēna, as in line 26

⁸ See my Northern List, No 256

⁹ In Mr Consens' List the inscription is No 1944

¹⁰ The original has Mahādihara

¹¹ The name is not preserved here, but the family is called Chāhumānāvaya in verse 17.

Then there came Lakshmana, who by his irresistible valour acquired part of the earth. In the mutilated verse 12, which together with verse 11 treats of this chief, the word Naddūla is distinctly legible, as well as Śākambharī; and it is certain that Lakshmana is described in the verse as king of Naddūla, and highly probable that he is spoken of as Śākambharimānikya, 'the jewel of Śākambharī'.¹ After him, verse 13 mentions 'his son' Balirāja,² and Balirāja's 'son,' whose name I read as Sōhi,³ regarding this to be another form of the name Sōhiya (Sōbhita, Śōbhita) of the preceding inscriptions. According to the latter, Sōhiya was Lakshmana's son, and his son again was Balrāja, the author of the present inscription has erroneously transposed the two names. Verses 14-18 then enumerate Mahindu,⁴ Jindurāja,⁵ Āsarāja, Āhana, Kirtipāla and Samarasimha. From what we know already from the other inscriptions, this is the line, from father to son, of the Chāhamānas of Naddūla from Mahindu to Samarasimha, except that, between Mahindu and Jindurāja, Anahilla, the son of the former and father of the latter, has been omitted — So far our inscription tells us nothing of importance that is new.

Samarasimha, according to verse 19, had two sons, of whom the one called Udayasimha, who also is already known to us from the inscription C, succeeded him in the government. Udayasimha's elder brother⁶ was Mānavasimha (v. 20), his son was Pratāpa (v. 21), and his son Vijāda, also named Daśasyandana⁷ (v. 22). This chief married Nāmalladēvi (v. 23), who bore to him four sons — Lāvanyakarna, Lunda,⁸ Lakshmana, and Lūnavarman (v. 24), of whom the eldest became the ruling chief. When Lāvanyakarna died, he was succeeded by the next brother, whose name in verse 26 is clearly Luntigadēva, in verse 28 Luntiga, in verse 30 Luntigāgara, and in the prose passage in line 29 Lūntāgara. Luntiga conquered and ruled 'all countries,' particularly Chandrāvati and the divine territory of Arbuda (Arbuda-dīrya-dēśam, v. 27). On the mountain Arbuda he set up images of himself and his queen, and carried out repairs at the temple of Achalēśvara. As a grant to the temple, he moreover gave the village of Hōṭhufūji⁹ (v. 33) for the perpetual worship of the god.

From the prose passage which follows, and which is more or less illegible, we learn that in the year 1377, on Monday, the 8th of the bright half of Vaiśākha, in the Keshaya-samvatsara, Luntiga, described as the Mahārājakula, the glorious Lūntāgara, resided at [Vū?]hundha which belonged to Chandrāvati.¹⁰ This date regularly corresponds, for the expired Kārttikādi

² The Translation has Adhurāja instead.

⁶ According to the Translation Mānavasimha was Udayasimha's son, but this is a mistake. The original text, after mentioning Udayasimha, clearly has. yō vai parō dāna-guṇav-garishṭhas-tasya-dāgrāyō Mānavasimha-nāma.

⁹ Above, Vol. VIII p. 222, line 28, and in an unpublished Mount Abū inscription (No. 1794 of Mr. Cousens' list) the name is spelt Hōthufūji.

¹⁰ The text has. samvat 1377 varshē Vai[s]ākha-sudī 8 Sōmē Keshaya-samvatsarē Sdy=dha Chamdravatt-pratita(ba)dha-[V4?]-hundha samādēsta-mahārājakula-śrī-Lūmidgara Chamdravatt-prabhūti-dēśē tatād

Vikrama year 1377, to Monday, the 6th April A.D. 1321, when the 8th tithi of the bright half of Vaisākha ended 17 h. 13 m. after mean sunrise, the day did fall in the Jovian year Kshaya, which according to the northern mean-sign system lasted from the 30th May A.D. 1320 to the 26th May A.D. 1321

Of the localities mentioned, in addition to the well-known Arbuda or Mount Âbû, Chandrâvatî according to the Rājputāna Gazetteer, Vol. III. p. 126, is a large place (now in ruins) on the Banās river near the south-east border of the Sirohi State. There can be no doubt that it was taken by Luntaga from the Paramāras¹ Hēthuhji is the small village of 'Hetamj' on Mount Âbû.² Vūhundha— if this is really the name— I am unable to identify.

On Mount Âbû there are at least two other inscriptions,³ of no great extent and partly illegible, of the reign of Luntagadēva, described as the Mahārājakula, the glorious Lūndhāka or Lūndha(P). One is dated on Wednesday, the 8th of the dark half of Chaitra in the [Vikrama] year 1372, corresponding, so far as I can see, to Wednesday, the 17th March A.D. 1316; the other on some specified day, which I cannot make out with certainty, in the [Vikrama] year 1373. And there is a third, partly effaced inscription,⁴ which also mentions the Mahārājakula, the glorious Lūndhāka or Lūndhāka, and speaks of the glorious Nāmāladēvi, who clearly is the Nāmāladēvi of the present inscription, the mother of Luntagadēva. I am not at present prepared to give a fuller account of these three inscriptions.

But I may add here that another account of some of the later Chāhamānas is found in an inscription⁵ which is on a stone at a temple—the Vimala-vasahikā, ordinarily but wrongly called Vimala Sāh's or Shāh's⁶ temple—which was founded on Mount Âbû, according to the inscription itself in the Vikrama year 1088,⁷ by a certain Vimala, 'an ornament of the Prāgvāta race,' after he had been appointed dandapati at Arbuda by the (Chaulukya) king Bhīmadēva (I). This inscription in lines 9-15 (verses 14-22) gives the following 'rājavalī':—

There was a hero, Āsarāja⁸ by name, a moon to the lotus-flower—the Chāhuvāma⁹ family, who was king of the town of Naddūla¹⁰ (v. 14). Then there came Samarasimha; and his son was Mahanasimhabhaṭa (v. 15). Then came Pratāpamalla; and of him was born Vijada, who ruled the Marusthali-mandala (v. 16). He had three sons, the first of whom was the king Lūniga (v. 17). After him the text mentions Lūndha (v. 18) and Lumbha (v. 19), without distinctly saying that they were his younger brothers. It then records the conquest of Arbuda (v. 20); says further that Lūniga's son was Tējasimha (v. 21); and after him eulogizes Tihupāka, to whom it wishes long life (v. 22).

The mutilated verse 23 appears to say that the glorious Lumbhaka, together with Tējasimha and Tihupa, in right manner carried on the government of the mountain Arbuda,

⁴ No. 1908 of Mr. Cousens' List.

⁵ No. 1790 of Mr. Cousens' List. I hope soon to give the text of this inscription, which is ready for publication.

⁶ Vimala edha seems to occur first in As. Res. Vol. XVI. p. 311, note. It owes its origin to a misunderstanding of the term Vimala-vasahikā, 'Vimala's temple,' which we find e.g. in line 8 of No. 1774 of Mr. Cousens' List.—I may add that in line 10 of the same inscription we have the similar term Tējapāla-vasahikā, 'Tējapāla's temple.'

⁸ I give all names here exactly as they are written in the original.

⁹ This may be a mistake for Chāhuvāna or Chāhuvāna.

¹⁰ This is the actual spelling of the name, and is required by the metre. The same may be said of the name Tējasimha, which occurs below.

and the rest of the inscription treats of a private family, two members of which made repairs of the temple. The date given in verse 41 is Monday, the 9th of the dark half of Jyēṣṭha of the [Vikrama] year 1378. It corresponds to Monday, the 10th May A.D. 1322.

As regards the genealogy given in this inscription, it is curious, but of no historical importance, that it commences with Āsarāja¹ (Āsarāja, Āsārāja), who was neither the founder of the family nor the father of Samarasimha who is here mentioned immediately after him. Instead of the name Mānavasimha of Luntigadēva's inscription this account has Mahanasimha which must be regarded as another name of the same person; and while according to the former Vijāda had four sons, according to this genealogy he had only three—Lūniga, Lundha and Lumbha. Of these, Lūniga undoubtedly is identical with the Lāvanyakarna of the other inscription,² and Lundha with Luntaga (Lundha), while Lumbha (Lumbhaka) most probably is another name of Lūnavarman. What is new to us and of some importance, is, that by the account here given Tējasimha, who is known to us from other inscriptions, was a son of Lūniga. According to No 261 of my Northern List Tējasimha³ was ruling in the [Vikrama] year 1387, corresponding to A.D. 1331, and there is an unpublished Mount Ābū inscription⁴ of his of the [Vikrama] year 1393, corresponding to A.D. 1336. What was the exact relation of Tihunāka (Tihuna) to Tējasimha, does not appear from the Vimala temple inscription; but the matter very probably is cleared up by a statement in an inscription (No. 265 of my *Northern List*⁵) of Tējasimha's son Kānhadadēva, who was reigning at Chandrāvati in the Vikrama year 1394, corresponding to A.D. 1338. That inscription in lines 11-14 records four separate grants of villages by the Chāhumānājñātiya-rāja-sri-Tējasimha, the dēvadā-sri-Tihunāka, the rāja-sri-Kānhadadēva, and the Chāhumānājñātiya-rāja-sri-Sāmatasimha. Here Tihunāka is placed between Tējasimha and his son Kānhadadēva, who both are distinguished from him by their title of rājan. This and the order in which Tihunāka is mentioned in the Vimala temple inscription render it probable that he was Tējasimha's younger brother. And this may possibly be the meaning of the word dēvadā prefixed to his name, a word which seems to be etymologically connected with the Sanskrit dēvī, dēvara, used in the specific sense of 'a husband's younger brother.'⁶

In the Table on page 83 I have placed all the chiefs mentioned in the above in their genealogical order, and have given the dates known from inscriptions either for themselves or for the kings and chiefs with whom they are said to have come in contact. The Table will show that Lakshmana, the founder of the family, must be placed in about A.D. 925-950, and that therefore he very probably was a son of that Vākpatarāja of Śākambhari, who was the grandfather of the Vīgraharāja⁷ of the Harsha inscription who lived in A.D. 973. My genealogical Table of the family is not quite complete. I do not know yet how to place exactly the Mahārājakula Sāmvatasimha or Sāmyantasimha, who is mentioned in Nos. 704-707 of my Northern List with dates from about A.D. 1282 to A.D. 1289, and— if this should be a different chief—the Rājā Sāmatasimha, mentioned in Kānhadadēva's inscription of A.D. 1338.

⁵ No 1919 of Mr Cousens' List. The inscription has been roughly edited in Ind Ant Vol II. p. 250.

⁶ In No 1958 of Mr Cousens' List a dēvadā-vamśa is mentioned. According to Ind Ant Vol IV p. 146, 'the Sirohi chieftains, . . . though Chohāns, are universally known by the name of their subtribe, the Derrā.'

No. 10.—AMBASAMUDRAM INSCRIPTION OF VARAGUNA-PANDYA.

BY V. VENKAYYA, M.A., RAI BAHADUR

Ambásamudram is situated on the northern bank of the Tâmrarnî river and is the headquarters of the tâluka of the same name in the Tinnevely district. The town has a local reputation for the manufacture of cloths largely in demand on the western coast. On the southern bank of the river is the big and flourishing village of Kallidaikkurichchi, which gives its name to the cloths manufactured at the sister town on the other bank, because the trade in them is carried on mostly by the Brâhmanas of the former place, who temporarily reside in Malabar and are frequently met with on the west coast.

The site of Ambásamudram seems to have been altered in comparatively recent times. The greater portion of the town is now situated at some distance from the river, while the most important temple, now called Erichcha-Udayâr, is quite close to it, and is separated from the town by a pretty large extent of rice fields. The heavy floods in the Tâmrarnî at certain seasons of the year might be one of the causes which led to the removal of the town to a more distant locality. Besides, in ancient times, Ambásamudram seems to have been a big place, including some of the adjacent villages such as Tiruvâlisvaram¹ and Maṇṇârkôyil.² In an inscription of [Jaṭavarman Sundara-]Chôla-Pândya³ the temple of Erichcha-Udayâr is said to be situated in the southern hamlet of Râjarâja-chaturvêdimangalam. During the period of Pândya supremacy the town was called Ilangôkkudi or Ilangôykkudi,⁴ which was altered into Râjarâja-chaturvêdimangalam after the Chôla conquest.⁵ The latter name has probably to be traced to the Chôla king Râjarâja I., after whom the Pândya country was itself called Râjarâja-maṇḍalam.⁶

During the field season of 1904-05 I copied eight inscriptions in the temple of Erichcha-Udayâr, of which two belong to the early Pândyas,⁷ two to the Chôlas,⁸ one to the Chôla-Pândyas⁹ and two to the later Pândyas,¹⁰ while the eighth does not mention any king.¹¹ One of the early Pândya records¹² seems to belong to the reign of Vira-Pândya, 'who took the head of the Chôla.' The Chôla king with whom he fought must be Âditya (II.) Karikâla,¹³ who, according to the large Leiden plates, fought in his youth against Vira-Pândya.¹⁴ The newly discovered¹⁵ Tiruvâlangâdu plates of Râjendra-Chôla I. do not mention the name of the Pândya king against whom Âditya II. fought, but report that the latter "killed the Pândya king in battle and set up his lofty head as a pillar of victory in his city."¹⁶ Accordingly, Vira-Pândya reigned in the

TRANSLATION.

(Lines 1 to 8) Hail ! By the grace of the blessed lord (bhāṣārar) ! Varaguna-Mahārāja, being encamped² at Araśūr on the bank of the (river) Peṇnai in Tondai-nādu, gave into the hands³ of the members of the assembly of Ilangōkkudi two hundred and ninety kāṣu, from the interest of which—the capital remaining unspent⁴—offerings had to be provided for four times

² Vēṟṟirundu means literally 'being seated majestically'

⁴ Literally 'taking interest (in such a way) that the capital is not destroyed,' see note 1 on page 90 above

(a day) to the lord of the glorious temple¹ of Tiruppôttudaiyâr at Ilangoikkudî in Mulli-nâdu

(Ll 8 to 10) For this (amount) the members of the assembly have to measure out five hundred and eighty kalam of paddy per year (as) interest, at the rate of two kalam for each kâsu

(Ll 10 to 14) Out of this (income) the servants of the lord (bhaṭṭarar) and the committee of the assembly of Ilangoikkudî shall jointly pay for offerings four times a day,² commencing from the month of Tula in the twelfth year opposite to the fourth year of the reign of Varaguna-Mahârâja, (according to the following) scale:—

(Ll 15 to 27) (The following) are the requirements for a single offering³— four nâli of clean superior rice,⁴ (one) uri of split green gram for the kummâyam,⁵ (one) ulakku of cows' ghee of the best quality to be offered⁶ (by itself), (one) uri of cows' curds, four black plantain fruits, one palam of sugar; ten palam of vegetables (for) the vegetable offering (kari-amirdu), (viz) one kâykkar,⁷ two pulṇṇagar,⁸ one *pulukkukkar*⁹ (and) one porikkar—in all, five (kinds of) curry, (one) ulakku of cows' ghee of the best quality for seasoning¹⁰ and frying vegetables; (one) uri of cows' curds for the compound curry (kāṭṭu),¹¹ two sevitṭu of asafoetida; two bundles of betel-leaves,¹² ten areca-nuts (and) one sevitṭu of lime (nâru) for the leaves offering.

(Ll 27 to 73) The aggregate requirements for (the offerings) four times a day¹³ (are):— At the rate of sixteen nâli of clean superior rice (a day), sixty-four kalam of clean superior rice

² The word ngad occurs again in line 27

⁴ With sennel compare tiruchchennadai-nel in a Chôla inscription from Conjeeveram; South-Ind Inscr. Vol I p 117

⁷ According to one of the Tanjore inscriptions of Râjarâja I (South-Ind Inscr Vol II, No 26) pepper, mustard, and perhaps also salt were required for this preparation. Some vegetable must also have been added, though the fact is not specifically mentioned. Old rice, pulse, pepper, mustard, cumin, sugar and ghee were required for a similar preparation called appaṭṭakâykkar.

¹² The word for betel-leaves both here as well as in the Tanjore inscriptions is veṭṭilai, 'white leaf,' while the modern Tamil form is veṭṭilai, 'empty leaf.'

¹³ Worship at six periods of the day is the rule at present in big temples. In the case of a minor shrine in the Tanjore temple, provision was made for offerings only three times (morning, midday and night, South-Ind. Inscr. Vol II, p 146) and twice in the case of two other shrines (ibid pp 70 and 71).

for a year. At three kalam of paddy for one kalam of rice,¹ this (comes to) one hundred and ninety-two kalam (of paddy) The split green gram (required for a day) is two nāl. At the rate of three nāl of paddy for (one) nāl of split (green gram),² twenty-four kalam of paddy per year (have to be allotted) for this (item) Cows' ghee of the best quality (required for a day) is (one) nāl and (one) uri At the rate of thirty nāl of paddy for (one) nāl of ghee,³ this (comes to) one hundred and eighty kalam of paddy for a year. (The quantity of) cows' curds (required for a day) is four nāl At the rate of three nāl of paddy for (one) nāl of curds,⁴ this (amounts to) forty-eight kalam of paddy annually. (The number of) black plantain fruits (required for a day) is sixteen. At the rate of (one) nāl of paddy for two (fruits),⁵ these (cost) thirty-two kalam of paddy annually The sugar (required for a day is) four palam At the rate of (one) nāl and (one) uri of paddy for every palam,⁶ this (item costs) twenty-four kalam of paddy per year (The daily consumption of) vegetables being forty palam, sixteen kalam of paddy (have to be allotted) for this (item) every year—at the rate of (one) nāl of paddy for ten *palam*⁷ (One) ālakku and three sevittu of asafetida (being required daily), nineteen kalam and three *kuruni*⁸ of paddy (have to be allotted) for this (item) annually—at the rate of six nāl of paddy for (one) ulakku of asafetida⁹ (For) the leaves offering (are required) two bundles¹⁰ of betel-leaves (daily), which, at the rate of two nāl of paddy for one bundle, (come to) sixteen kalam of paddy for a year, forty areca-nuts (daily), which, at the rate of three nāl and (one) uri of paddy for 20 areca-nuts, (cost) twenty-eight kalam of paddy annually,¹¹ (and) four sevittu of lime (daily), which, at the rate of two nāl (of paddy) for (one) nāl (of lime), (cost) twelve *kuruni*¹² of paddy per year

(Ll 73 to 81) Altogether, the (quantity of) paddy required annually is five hundred and eighty *kalam*¹³ The glorious Varaguna-Mahārāja thus deposited (this money), in order that

² Pulse was exchanged at this rate during the time of Rājārāja I at Tanjore

³ In Tanjore ghee and paddy were exchanged in the proportion of 1 to 32 at the time of Rājārāja I

⁴ The same rate obtained in Tanjore during the reign of Rājārāja I

⁵ There seem to have been three varieties of plantain fruits available in Tanjore and its vicinity about the beginning of the 11th century A D Two fruits of the first kind could be had for one nāl of paddy (South-Ind Inscr Vol II pp 75 and 77), five nāl of paddy had to be given in exchange for 18 fruits of the second variety (ibid p 127), the third was sold at the rate of 1200 for each kāṣu (ibid p 151)

⁶ Two kinds of sugar were apparently available about the beginning of the 11th century A D in the Chōla capital and the country surrounding it Of the cheaper kind 3½ palam could be purchased for 2 nāl, 1 uri, 1 ālakku and 4 sevidu of paddy (South-Ind Inscr Vol II p 127), while the more costly variety exchanged at the rate of 1 nāl and 1 uri of paddy for ½ palam (ibid pp 70 and 71)

¹¹ Provision is made for the supply of areca-nuts and betel-leaves in three of the Tanjore inscriptions, where only the aggregate cost of both is given (Nos 6, 26 and 35 of South-Ind Inscr Vol II) 1 nāl of paddy for 8 areca-nuts and 32 betel-leaves (No 6); 4 nāl and 1 uri of paddy for 80 areca-nuts and 60 betel-leaves (No 26), and 1 nāl and 1 uri of paddy for 12 areca-nuts and 24 betel-leaves (No 35)

¹² The actual calculation yields 36 nāl of lime annually, costing 72 nāl of paddy, i.e. 18 nāl less than a kalam (= 90 nāl according to this inscription) or 12 kuruni But it has been pointed out that a kalam was made up of 15 kuruni (note 8 above) Thus the kuruni was equal to 6 nāl, instead of the more common 8 nāl With this equivalent of the kuruni the calculation in the text would be correct

(the members of the village assembly) might provide (the requirements) day by day¹ for a long time² without (any) obstruction.

No 11 — MADRAS MUSEUM PLATES OF VAJRAHASTA III ;
SAKA-SAMVAT 984

By STEN KONOW, PH D , CHRISTIANIA.

THIS inscription is found on a set of copper-plates which have been deposited in the Madras Museum. I do not know where they have been originally found. I publish the inscription from excellent ink-impressions³ supplied by Rai Bahadur V Venkayya, M A , who describes the plates as follows —

“The plates are five in number. The first bears writing on the inner side only. The last is completely blank, it was evidently put in to protect the single line of writing on the second side of the fourth plate. The plates have slightly raised rims (though in certain places these are either beaten down or worn away) and are strung on a ring, the ends of which are soldered into the lower part of a round seal. About the middle of the seal is a seated Nandin, whose tail extends to the bottom of the seal. From either side of the hind part of the Nandin proceed what may be taken for lotus buds. On the proper left of the Nandin are two flag-staffs placed one by the side of the other, with a bowl above them, and on the proper right of it are a conch, a lampstand and a dagger. The ring was cut by me. It is not quite circular. The diameter varies between 5” and 4½”. The thickness of the ring is ½”. The seal is roughly 2½” in diameter. The following measurements of the plates show that, as regards breadth, they are slightly bigger in the middle than at the ends, while, as regards height, the reverse is the case —

Average breadth of plates	9½”	9½”	9½”
Average height of plates	4½”	4”	4½”

The fourth plate is comparatively small in height, measuring 4½” at the ends and almost 4” in the middle.”

The inscription consists of 54 lines. The greater part is in a good state of preservation. The fourth plate, however, is rather corroded, and some passages of it can only be read with difficulty.

The alphabet is Nāgarī of the same kind as in the Nadagām plates of Vajrahasta of Śaka-Samvat 979.⁴ The class nasal, and not the Anusvāra, is used before class mutes. Exceptions from this rule are °चोच्चु° in l 9, and °च° in l 48. Consonants are doubled after r, except in °निर्जिता°, l 26. व is written for व throughout. स has been substituted for श in नहीस, l 25, and °सत°, l 49. On the other hand, we find श for स in °द्योतशक., l 21, चाशीन, l 39, and °रवश्य, l 54. A nasal with a following guttural or palatal is written in the same way as in the Nadagām plates. Note further such writings as समुक्कल, ll 7 and 24, प्रच्छालित instead of प्रचालित, l 3, and प्रद्योतन्मद° instead of प्रद्योतन्मद°, l 19.

² In later inscriptions the phrase nedan-gālamum is replaced by the Sanskrit chandrādityavat, ‘as long as the moon and the sun (endure)’.

The language of the inscription is Sanskrit. It contains the same twelve verses as the Nadagām plates of Śaka-Samvat 979. The remainder of the inscription is in prose. The first 41 lines are almost identical with the corresponding portion of the Nadagām plates. They are, however, more carefully engraved and give several passages in a more correct form.

The inscription is one of king Vajrahasta (III), the son of Kāmārṇava (II.) of the Gāṅga lineage, and of Vinayamahādēvi of the Vaidumba family. His genealogy is given in the same words as in the Nadagām plates, from Gunamahārṇava downwards, including the date of Vajrahasta's coronation¹. The inscription then goes on to state (l. 40 ff.) that 'the devout worshipper of Mahēśvara (Śiva), the Paramabhaṭṭāraka Mahārājādhirāja, the lord of the three Kalingas, the glorious Anantavarman Vajrahastadēva, being in good health, issues the following order from Kalinganagara, having called together all the subjects, headed by the ministers'—"Be it known to you (that), for the increase of the religious merit and fame of (Our) mother, father, and Ourselves, the village named Tāmaracheru in Varāhavartanī, combined with the Chikhali hamlet (vāṭaka), circumscribed by the four boundaries, including water and land, free from all molestation, to last as long as the moon, the sun, and the earth, has been granted by Us, with libations of water, as an Agrahāra, to five hundred learned Brāhmanas who delight in the six acts of sacrificing, conducting sacrifices, studying, teaching, [giving] and accepting, (and) who are well versed in sacred lore, in the Śaka year of the dice (4), the Vasus (8) and the treasures (8), on the occasion of an eclipse of the sun. Therefore (Our gift) should be preserved by future kings in compliance with the law proclaimed by Manu. Moreover, land with the produce of two hundred Murakas of grain has been given, to last as long as the moon and the sun, free from hindrances, to the god Kōtīśvara² for (the maintenance of the rites of) Bali, Oharu, Nawēdyā, Dīpapūjā, and so on. And the repairs of what is broken and torn in this (temple) should without fail be effected by the Brāhmanas living there."

The inscription does not add anything to our knowledge of the history of king Vajrahasta III. We only learn that he also had the name Anantavarman, like his grandson Chōdagangadēva.

Of the localities mentioned in the inscription, Kalinganagara has been identified by Mr Ramamurthi³ with the villages Mukhalngam and Nagarakatakam in the Ganjam district. Varāhavartanī occurs in several Gāṅga grants⁴. The village of Tāmaracheru is also known from Gāṅga inscriptions. Its boundaries are given in the Chicacole plates of the Mahārāja Dēvendravarman,⁵ in which the village Tāmaracheru is granted to three hundred Brāhmanas on the occasion of an eclipse of the sun. The Chicacole plates of the Gāṅga Mahārāja Indravarman, issued from Kalinganagara in Gāṅgēya-Samvat 128,⁶ further state that the village of Tāmaracheru was granted to certain Brāhmanas on the occasion of an eclipse of the moon on the full-moon day of Mārgaśīra. The latter inscription mentions Tāmaracheru-grāmaṁ bā(vā)ṭakā(ka)-sahita[m] (l. 8 f.). This vāṭaka is perhaps identical with the Chikhali-vāṭaka of our inscription. The village of Tāmaracheru has not as yet been identified. It should be looked for in the neighbourhood of Chicacole.

The date of the grant is found in a part of the inscription which has not been so well preserved as the rest. The first word is scarcely legible in the ink-impression. After a careful examination of the original, however, Mr. Venkayya and myself find that the reading kṛta is certain. The date of the inscription is accordingly the Śaka year 984. If we take this to be

the current Śaka year, the date would correspond to A.D. 1061-62. Professor Kielhorn has been good enough to inform Professor Hultzsch that the only eclipse of the sun which was (slightly) visible in Ganjam between the Śaka years 980—989 took place on the 20th June A.D. 1061. This would therefore be the date of our inscription.

No. 12 — TALAMANCHI PLATES OF VIKRAMADITYA I.; A.D. 660.

By PROFESSOR E. HULTZSCH, PH.D., HALLE (SAALE)

This inscription was first published by Messrs A. Butterworth and V. Venugopal Chetti in their Nellore District Inscriptions, p. 189 ff. According to p. 192 of the same work, the plates were "discovered about 12 years ago by a servant of Adapalli Venkata Reddi of Párlapalli

⁴ Read "नगरावरम".

² Read "खानयोः".

³ Read आसीने.

⁶ The engraver had originally written "वाटकेन".

⁵ Read "मात्य".

⁸ Read "शकाब्दे".

¹¹ Read "भूमिपालैर्भूमुनोधर्मागो".

¹³ Read बलि.

¹⁴ Read "उपरया".

¹⁵ The engraver seems to have begun to write तत्र, but the द-stroke has been left unfinished, read "तत्रस्थवाङ्मणेरवस्य".

while ploughing some land known as Talamanchipádu in Talamanchi of Nellore taluk¹ where a flourishing village is said to have once stood " They "have been sent to the Madras Museum at the request of the owner" I re-edit the inscription from three sets of ink-impressions, kindly prepared at my request by Rai Bahadur V. Venkayya, M.A., who describes the original as follows—

"Three copper-plates, of which the first and last are engraved on their inner side only. They measure $7\frac{1}{2}$ " in breadth The height of the plates is not uniform. Generally they are higher in the margins than in the middle

	Height in the margins	Height in the middle
1st plate:	$3\frac{1}{4}$ "	$3\frac{1}{8}$ "
2nd plate:	$3\frac{3}{8}$ "	$3\frac{1}{4}$ "
3rd plate:	$3\frac{1}{4}$ " & $3\frac{3}{8}$ "	$3\frac{1}{4}$ "

Through circular holes bored on the left margin of each plate passes an oval ring measuring $2\frac{3}{4}$ " by $3\frac{1}{8}$ ". It is nearly $\frac{1}{4}$ " thick. The ends of the ring are secured in the base of a seal, which is also oval and measures 1" by $\frac{3}{8}$ ". The emblems on the seal, which appear to have been engraved on a countersunk surface, are much worn, but show a lump in the middle—perhaps meant to represent a boar The total weight of the plates with ring and seal is 80 tolas."

The writing on the plates is well preserved, excepting a few letters near the margins of plate i. and plate ii. a The alphabet resembles that of two other grants of Vikramāditya I² The upadhmanīya is used once (l. 24), a final form of m twice (ll 24, 27), and one of n once (l 17) The three Dravidian letters l, ḷ and ṛ, the second of which has the same shape as the upadhmanīya, occur in the two village names Elasatti (l. 23) and Koḷchumko[nṛa] (l 22) The language is Sanskrit There are four well-known Anushtubh verses . one at the beginning and three near the end; the remainder of the inscription is in prose.

The document was issued in the sixth year of the reign (l. 20) of the (Western) Chalukya (l. 5) Vikramāditya (L), the son of Satyāśraya (i.e. Pulakēśin II), grandson of Kirtivarman (L) and great-grandson of Polikeśin (I) Each of these four kings receives the same laudatory epithets as in other published grants of the same period. The new inscription records the grant of the village of Elasatti,³ north of Koḷchumko[nṛa], to Śrīmēghachārya (ll 22 and 31 f), the preceptor (guru) of Vikramāditya I, and was written by Vajravarman of the Vaidya family

The historical importance of the plates lies chiefly in the date of the grant (l 20 f), regarding which Prof Kielhorn kindly contributes the Postscript on p 102 below On the strength of the latter I have added the date "A D 660" to the title of this article and to the heading of the accompanying Plate

POSTSCRIPT.

By PROFESSOR F. KILLHORN, C.I.E., GÖTTINGEN

The inscription edited above by Prof. Hultzsch is dated in the 6th year of the reign of the W Chalukya Vikramāditya I, at the time of a solar eclipse in the month Śrāvana. From page 2 of Appendix II to Vol VIII. of this Journal it will be seen that this date must necessarily fall between A.D. 635 and 685, and from what we know to be the general rule regarding eclipses that are quoted in dates, we may conclude that the eclipse here referred to most probably was one that was visible at Bādāmi, the capital of the W Chalukyas, situated in about Long. 76° and Lat. 16°

Now it so happens that during the fifty years from A.D. 635 to 685 there was, in both the pūrṇimānta and the amānta month Śrāvana, only a single solar eclipse that could have been at all visible at Bādāmi, viz. the eclipse which took place 3 h 5 m after mean sunrise of Monday, the 13th July A.D. 660. That eclipse, an annular one, was fully visible at Bādāmi, and the 13th July A.D. 660 was the 15th of the dark half of the pūrṇimānta Śrāvana. We may compare especially the solar eclipse in the date of the Pattadakal duplicate pillar inscription of the reign of the W Chalukya Kirtivarman II. (No. 48 of my Southern List), of the 25th June A.D. 754, which likewise took place in the pūrṇimānta Śrāvana, and to show that in early times the pūrṇimānta scheme of the months was prevalent in Southern India, we may also cite the solar eclipse in the date of No. 9 of the List, which took place in the pūrṇimānta Bhādrapada, and the solar eclipse in the date of No. 551 of the List, which took place in the pūrṇimānta Phālguna.

Monday, the 13th July A.D. 660 (in Śaka-saṁvat 582) would thus be in every way a suitable equivalent of our date; that it is its true equivalent is rendered more than probable by the date of the Nerūr plates of the queen Vijayaabhaṭṭārīkā (No. 23 of my Southern List). That date corresponds to the 23rd September A.D. 659, and is of the 5th year of a reign of which hitherto it appeared doubtful whether it was the reign of Vikramāditya's eldest brother Chandrāditya or of Vikramāditya himself. Since we now have a date in A.D. 660 which would be a most proper equivalent for a date of the 6th year of the reign of Vikramāditya I, the date in A.D. 659 must surely be definitely assigned to the 5th year of the same reign, and the two dates in my opinion must be taken to prove that Vikramāditya I. commenced to reign between some time in September A.D. 654 and July A.D. 655.¹

NO 13.—MANDHATA PLATES OF DEVAPALA AND JAYAVARMAN II. OF MALAVA.

By PROFESSOR F. KIELHORN, CLE ; GÖTTINGEN.

Of the Paramāra kings, who ruled over Mālava for more than three hundred years, there have been published hitherto the texts of twelve copper-plate and three stone inscriptions. We have besides short notices of about half a dozen other stone inscriptions, generally of small extent or importance. Of the copper-plate inscriptions, three were first edited by Colebrooke in 1824, two by L. Wilkinson in 1836 and 1838, one by Rajendralal Mitra in 1850, and three by FitzEdward Hall in 1860 and 1861. Of the stone inscriptions, the largest was first edited by Bal Gangadhar Shastri in 1843, and another by FitzEdward Hall in 1859. And from these editiones principes the genealogy of the Paramāras of Mālava, with most of their dates, might have been drawn up, about fifty years ago, very nearly as I have given it above, Vol. VIII. App. I. pp. 14 and 15. Moreover, of so important a king as Udayāditya we even to-day hardly possess more than that 'wretched scrawl,' made known in 1840, of a person 'who knew nothing of Udayāditya's family.' I mention this to show how little that is really new we have learnt about Mālava, from its own records, for half a century, and to indicate what chances are open to the officials of the Archaeological Survey of India to enrich our knowledge of the history of that country. For, in my opinion, a systematic search for inscriptions in the ancient Mālava country will be sure to bring to light numerous documents of importance. Even now such a search has been well inaugurated.

In 1903 there were discovered at Dhār the inscriptions published above, Vol. VIII p. 96 ff. and p. 241 ff., highly interesting from a literary point of view. And in 1904 and 1905 were found, at or near Māndhātā, the two copper-plate inscriptions now here edited. These plates are of some value inasmuch as they show how Dēvapāla, one of the later kings of Mālava who was already known to us, was related to preceding rulers, and as they give us the names of two sons of his, Jaitugidēva and Jayavarman [II.], who, one after the other, succeeded him.

A.—MĀNDHĀTĀ PLATES OF DĒVAPĀLA ; [VIKRĀMA]-SĀMVAṬ 1282.

These plates were found, in May 1905, near the temple of Siddhēśvara at Māndhātā, an island in the Narmadā (Narbada, Nerbudda) river attached to the Nūmār district of the Central Provinces.¹ They were discovered enclosed in a chest made of two stones, 1' 8½" long by 1' 5½" broad. They are now in the Provincial Museum at Nāgpur, to which they have been presented by Rao Jaswant Singh of Māndhātā. The first account of them was given by an old pupil of mine, Mr. Lele, Director of Education in the Dhār State,² and a transcript of the inscription engraved on them, with a translation and notes, was afterwards furnished to the authorities by Mr. Pyari Lal Ganguli, pleader of Nūmār. The text and a translation, with an introduction, have also been sent to the Government Epigraphist by Pandit Hiranand Shastri, Curator of the Nāgpur Museum. At Prof. Hultzsch's request, I edit the inscription which is on these plates from impressions kindly supplied by Mr. Cousens.

The inscription is on three plates, which are stated to measure about 1' 5½" broad by 1' high, and of which the second is inscribed on both sides, while the first and third plates are

² Mr. Lele at the time most kindly offered to send me impressions of the plates, but was somehow or other prevented from doing so. I take the opportunity of thanking him here also publicly for the generosity with which he has made over to me his valuable impressions of the Dhār inscriptions published in Vol. VII. of this Journal.

TRANSLATION OF VERSES 1-22

Om ! Om ! Obeisance to dharma,⁷ the crest-jewel of the aims of man !

(Verse 1) May (the Moon), the Lord of the twice-born, gladdener of the world, after having openly accepted the earth in the guise of its reflection,⁸ bestow blessings on you !

(V 2) May that Paraśurāma be victorious, for whom, when he granted the earth (to the Brāhmins), the very orb of the twilight-sun, pierced by the Kshatriyas slain (by him) in fight, became the copper-plate⁹

(V 3) May Rāma minister to your welfare, he who in battle quenched the fire of separation from his life's mistress by the water of Mandōdari's¹⁰ tears !

(V 4) May Yūdhishthira be victorious, whose feet even Bhīma placed on his head, (and) whom the Moon, the progenitor of his race, framed as it were equal unto himself !

(V. 5) There was a king, great like Kamsa's conqueror,¹¹ an ornament of the Paramāra family, the glorious Bhōjadēva, who occupied the surface of the earth by the van of his army.¹²

³ Read buddhvā

⁴ I.e. dūtakah or dūtah (as in the inscription B)

⁶ This sign of punctuation is superfluous

⁸ The spot (kalanka) in the moon is by poets taken to be the reflected image of the earth. Prof. Jacobi, who first drew my attention to this notion, quotes Raghuvamśa XIV 40, and especially Haravijaya XII 64, and I find that the idea is clearly expressed in verse 1982 of the Subhāshitāvalī, according to which 'others have said' that the spot in the moon is 'the reflected image of the earth' (bhūmēt=cha bimbam parē), compare also ibid v 2594, śaśalakehmanah parinatā pṛīhōt kalankāyatē. With pratibimba-nibhātī compare pratibimba-mishātī in the Pārijātaṃjari, above, Vol VIII p 110, line 60, and with jagad-āhlādayan, as applied to the moon, āhlādayan=viśvam in Ind Ant Vol XVI p 208, line 1 — The Moon being a devya (or Brāhman), one of his privileges is to receive gifts (prati-graha), just as it is his duty to make them (dāna)

⁹ The verse has been called awkward, because it has not been understood. Since warriors slain in battle enter heaven through the sun, this luminary, covered with their blood, assumes the reddish hue of copper. In this state it appears in the twilight sky, and is thus represented to be the very copper-plate charter (idmra) by which Paraśurāma granted the earth to the Brāhmins. For the idea of warriors who are slain in battle splitting the sun compare, e.g., Ep Ind Vol II p 192, v. 33, Subhāshitāvalī, v 2274, and the pretty verse, given to illustrate the figure of sākshma, in Ēkānālī, Bombay ed., p 325 Navēshu kāntēshu kṛtābhīlāshāh svargāngandh prākshya marīchīmālī | Nṛsimha bhūpāla tav=āharēshu kampākulam darśayati svalimbam ||, afraid of being split, the sun trembles

¹¹ I.e. the god Kṛṣṇa

¹² The word nāstra (i.e. śind-mukha) occurs in the Pārijātaṃjari, above, Vol VIII p 116, l. 78, also, e.g., in the Naishadhīyacharita, XII 73 and XIII 23

(V 6) When the lustre of the moonlight of his glory overflowed the lap of the regions, there closed the day-lotuses of the glory accumulated by hostile kings

(V 7) Then came Udayāditya, whose one desire was constant enterprise, who, of unequalled glory as a hero, made inglorious his adversaries

(V 8) As lofty mountains, abounding in ridges, at the end of a mundane period are uprooted by impetuous winds, so in fierce contest how many rulers of the earth, abounding in armies, were not uprooted by his irresistible arrows!

(V 9) From him sprang king Naravarman, who cleft the vital parts of adversaries, the acme of kings, wise in upholding religion

(V 10) At every dawn freely granting shares of villages to Brahmins, he made religion, one-footed though it is (in this Kali age), possessed of several feet¹

(V 11) His son was Yaśōvarman, the chaplet of Kshatriyas, (and) from him sprang his son Ajayavarman, renowned for the glory of victory

(V 12) His son, of auspicious birth, the foremost of heroes, was Vindhavarman, long of aim, eager to extirpate the Gūjaras.

(V 13) The sword of this (king) skilled in war, with Dhārā rescued by it, assumed three edges,² to protect as it were the three worlds

(V 14) Then the son of that illustrious one, king Subhatavarman, abiding by religion, ruled the surface of the earth, glorious like India

(V 15) The fire of prowess of that conqueror of the quarters, whose splendour was like the sun's, in the guise of a forest-fire even to-day blazes in the town³ of the blustering Gūjara⁴

(V 16) Now⁵ that he has attained unto godhead, his son king Arjuna supports with his arm the circle of the earth like a bracelet

(V 17) When in the battle which was his childhood's frolic Jayasimha took to flight, his fame spread in the quarters in the guise of the laughter of the quarters' guardians

(V 18) A treasure-house of the stores of poetry and song, he now has relieved the goddess (Sarasvatī) of the burden of her books and lyre

(V 19) This triple hero⁶ made his fame triply sprout How otherwise did the three worlds acquire their whiteness?

² By itself the sword had two edges (dhārā), the town of Dhārā, retaken by it, became its third edge (dhārā) The author suggests that the sword became like the tridhārā, i.e. the 'three-streamed' Gaṅgā, which flows through, and purifies, heaven, earth, and the lower regions

⁵ This 'now' is really inappropriate in inscriptions of Arjunavarman's successors, but the verses 16-19 have been taken over unchanged from that king's own grants

(V 20) Then, through the want of merit of suppliants and through the merit of the lovely-browed damsels of paradise, he who was both marvellously bountiful and amorous went to heaven

(V. 21) Then Dēvapāla, full of prowess—the son of Hariśchandra, the moon of the Pramāras—came to rule the Mālava country

(V 22) Because of the pouring out of the water of donations by him who holds kūśa grass in his lotus-hand, we know no difference between Dēvapāla and the guardian of the gods [whom the exploits of the enemy of the Dānavas caused to take the argha in his lotus-hand (to make a respectful offering)]¹

¹ The king Dēvapāla and the guardian of the gods (dēvapāla, i.e. the god Indra) are alike because either of them is dānavāri-vijimbhitāḥ pavitrakarapadmah. About the exact meanings of the first of these two words there can be no doubt, it means both 'the pouring forth of the water of donations' (dāna-cāri), and 'the exploits of the enemy of the Dānavas' (Dānava-ari, i.e. the god Viṣṇu-Krishna). I am not so sure about the two meanings of the second word. Referred to the king, it means 'holding pavitra (i.e. kūśa or darbhā grass, which is taken up by the person who is about to make a donation) in his lotus-hand.' Applied to Indra, I take it to mean that Indra, pleased with the exploits of the conqueror of the Dānavas, took up the pavitra (i.e. the argha vessel) to make a respectful offering to Viṣṇu. In support of this explanation I would quote Ep Ind Vol I p 124, v 2, where Brahman offers to Viṣṇu the argha-salila, when he sees how the latter has cheated Bal. But I am myself not quite satisfied with this explanation, because I suspect the word padma to have been used in two different senses in the compound.—From inscriptions we may compare with our verse especially the verse in Ind Ant Vol. XVIII p 218, ll. 19 and 20 Śrīyam babhāra vidhivad=dānavārātītōshitah | Mahēndravād=divyatrēshthavarggas=tat-saṃgam-āgatah ||, where dānavārātītōshitah means both 'excessively pleased by the water of donations' and 'pleased by the enemy of the Dānavas'. Dānavār also has a third meaning, 'the rutting-juice of elephants' (mada-jala), and in that sense as well as in the sense of 'the enemy of the Dānavas' the word is used in the Naishadhiyacharita, XIII vv 3 and 23, the first of which, in so far as it is applicable to Indra, seems to have suggested the śrīyam babhāra . dānavārātītōshitah Mahēndra[h] of the verse quoted above from an inscription. (Incidentally I may mention that Pañchanallya is not 'the title of a work,' but a name of the 13th sarga of the Naishadhiyacharita) In Ākāvali, p 200, the hand of a king is compared with the ocean, because both hold the dānavāri.

² All these names have the word śarman attached to them.

³ With the exception of Madhyadēva and Rastināpura, these names have the word sthāna attached to them.

B.—MĀNDHĀTĀ PLATES OF JAYAVARMAN II. ; [VIKRAMA]-SAMVAT 1317.

These are two plates which were found by Mr. Lele,¹ some time in 1904, at the village of Godarpura opposite the island of Māndhātā, on the southern bank of the Narmadā in the Nimâr district of the Central Provinces. They were sent by the Deputy Commissioner of Nimâr to the Provincial Museum at Nāgpur, where they are now deposited. They measure about 1' 5½" broad by 10¾" high, and are held together by two rings, now cut, for which there are two holes in either plate. I edit the inscription which they contain from impressions sent to me by the Government Epigraphist.

The first plate is inscribed on one side, and the second on both sides. The writing both on the first plate and on the first side of the second plate covers a space about 1' 4" broad by between 9½" and 10" high, that on the second side of the second plate 1' 4½" broad by 8" high. The three sides together contain 53 lines of well-engraved writing which throughout is in a perfect state of preservation. On the proper right of the second side of the second plate, between lines 42 and 50, a vertical line marks off a space 3" broad by 4" high, which contains an engraving of Garuda, with, below it, the words sua-hastô-yam mahārājasya ||, in smaller characters than those in the body of the inscription. The bird is represented in human form, kneeling towards the left, but with the head turned towards the right, and with four hands, the two inner ones of which are joined over the breast, while the two others are lifted up on either side, the one on the left holding a snake, the head of which looks like a bird's head. The size of the letters is about ¾". The characters are Nāgarī, closely resembling those of the inscription A., and the language is Sanskrit. The inscription is so carefully written that in respect of orthography only few remarks are necessary. The sign for v denotes both b and v, the dental sibilant is used for the palatal only in sata-, I 25, as is often the case elsewhere, dy, dv and dhv are employed instead of ddy, ddv and ddhv, Janārdana is written Janārjjana- in line 34, and shadbhr- as shaṭbhvr- in line 37. The sign of avagraha is employed seven times; and, excepting in sāṃpratam, I 16, m at the end of a verse or half-verse is denoted by the sign for m, not by that of anusvāra.—In lines 1-23 the inscription has 23 verses, chiefly containing genealogical matter, 21 of which are already known to us from the inscription A, and in lines 25-27 we again find the verse commencing with Vātābhra-vibhramam=īdam vasudh-ādhipatyam, and in lines 42-48 five benedictive and imprecatory verses, the last of which here too is the verse commencing with Iti kamaladalāmbuvindu-lōlām. There are besides two verses in lines 50-52, which record the names of persons who had to do with the writing of the grant. In the prose part of the text, attention may be drawn to the peculiar construction in lines 25-28, asmābhūh . Gāṅgadēva-pārsvāt . grāmō=yam tribhyō brāhmanābhīyō dāpitah, 'we have caused Gāṅgadēva to give this village to three Brāhmins' ¹

The inscription records an order by the Paramāra Mahārājādhirāja Jayavarman [II] of Mālava, dated, as will be shown below, in A D 1260 and 1261. Of the 23 verses with which it opens, verses 1-21 are identical (except for two various readings²) with the same verses of the inscription A, and contain therefore the same list of kings from Bhōjadēva to Dēvapāla. The two new verses, 22 and 23, may be rendered thus —

"When³ that king, the glorious Dēvapāla, had joyfully resorted to Indra's abode, his son, a death-dealing god to enemies (while) ever pleasing the people by his good qualities, the wise king Jaitugidēva, the glorious Mālava chief, ruled this land, by his noble exploits a young Nārāyaṇa" ⁴

"Now that he, after enjoying the delights of royalty, has gone to the habitation of the gods, his younger brother, king Jayavarman, rules the land"

Dēvapāla, therefore, was succeeded by his son Jaitugidēva, and he by his younger brother Jayavarman [II] — Jaitugidēva was known already from the prasasti in Āśādihara's Dharmāmṛita, referred to above,⁵ according to which the commentary on that work was completed during the reign of the Paramāra Dēvapāla's son Jaitugidēva, on a date which corresponds to Monday, the 19th October A.D. 1243. In my Northern List, No. 223, I have assumed that Jaitugidēva is identical with a king who is mentioned in a Rāhatgadh inscription of the 28th August A.D. 1256, noticed by me in Ind Ant Vol XX p. 84, where I have given the king's name as Jaya[simha]dēva. But with what we now know from the present inscription, I am not sure whether Sir A. Cunningham⁶ was not right in reading the same name as Jaya[varma]dēva, and would therefore suspend my judgment on the matter till we possess proper impressions of an inscription at Udaypur in Gwālor,⁷ which seems to be of the reign of a king Jayasinghadēva and to be dated in the [Vikrama] year 1311 (in Jan-

⁷ I am writing this with Sir A. Cunningham's rubbing of the inscription before me.

nary 1255) For the present, what is certain is, that Jaitugidêva¹ was reigning in A.D. 1243 and his younger brother Jayavarman in A.D. 1260-61

In lines 23 ff of our inscription Jayavarman informs all king's officers, Brâhmanas and others, and the Paññakā and other people dwelling at the village of Vadauda in the Mahuada pathaka, that, while staying at Mandapadurga, in the year 1317 (given in words), he caused the *Pratihāra*² Gāngadêva to give the village of Vadauda to three Brâhmanas

And, according to lines 28 ff, the Pratihāra Gāngadêva, on Sunday, the third tithi of the bright half of Âgrahânyana (Mārgasīrsha) of the year 1317, while the nakshatra was Pūrvāshādhā and the yōga Śūla, at Amarēśvara-kshētra on the southern bank of the Rêvā (Narmadā), after bathing at the confluence of the Rêvā and Kapilā and worshipping the holy Amarēśvaradêva (Śiva) with the five offerings,³ gave the village of Vadauda, divided into six shares (vanṭaka) so that—four shares (pada) were assigned to the *agnihōtrīn*⁴ Mādhanāśarman—a son of the pāñhaka Hariśarman and grandson of the divēda Vēda—a Brâhman of the Bhargava *gōtra*⁵ and student of the Mādhyamdina sūkhā, who had come from Navagāmva,⁶ one share (pada) to the chaturvēda Janārdana—a son of the divēda Līmadêva and grandson of the divēda Līshū—a Brâhman of the Gautama gōtra and student of the Āśvalāyana sūkhā, who had come from Takāri, and one share (pada) to the divēda Dhāmadêvaśarman—a son of the dikshita Divākara and grandson of the dikshita Kēkū—a Brâhman of the Bhāradvāja gōtra and student of the Mādhyamdina sūkhā, who had come from Ghatāushari

From line 37 to line 48 the text contains so well-known phrases that it may be passed over here. The remaining part of the inscription yields the following information —

On Thursday, the 11th of the bright half of Jyēsthā of the year 1317, this king's order (rāja sāsana) was written 'here, at Mandapadurga,' by Harshadêva, a son of the learned Gavīśa, with the approbation of the sāndhivigrahika (or minister of peace and war), the pandita Māladhara, an official of the Mahārājādhirāja, the glorious Jayavarmadêva; and the king's document was corrected by the grammarian (sābdika) Āmadêva, a disciple of the learned Gōsēka (Gosē),⁷ who knew the boundless essence of legal science. The grant was engraved by the rūpalāra Kānhada. The dūta was the great minister (mahāpradhāna), Rājā Ajayadêva

The words 'this is the own hand (i.e. the sign-manual) of the Mahārāja' are engraved, as has been already stated, under the engraving of Garuda on the second side of the second plate

The dates contained in this inscription are both correct. The first date, in lines 28 and 29, for the expired (Chaitrādī or Kārttikādī) Vikrama year 1317 corresponds to Sunday, the 7th November A.D. 1260. On this day the third tithi of the bright half ended 16 h 13 m; the nakshatra was Pūrvāshādhā, by the Brahma-siddhānta for 17 h 4 m, according

² Given in the abbreviated form pratī. The word pratihāra means 'a door-keeper', but denotes a high official

⁵ In the original the *pravara*s also are given to Garga for 22 h 20 m, and by the equal space system from 10 h. 30 m.; and the yōga was Śūla for 20 h 46 m, after mean sunrise. And the second date, in lines 48 and 49, for the expired Kārttikādi Vikrama year 1317 corresponds to Thursday, the 12th May A.D. 1261, when the 11th tithi of the bright half ended 10 h. 46 m. after mean sunrise. The dates show that the year 1317 of the inscription was a Kārttikādi year.

Of the localities mentioned in the inscription, Mandapadurga, from where the king's order was issued, is Mandogari (Māndū), a deserted town in the Dhār State, in Long 75° 26' and Lat 22° 21' (Constable's Hand Atlas, Plate 27, B d). From the same place was issued the order in the Piplānagar plates of king Arjunavarman.¹ On Mahuada, see above, p 106. Vadauda perhaps is the village of 'Burud' which according to the Indian Atlas is about three miles north-east of 'Satajana,' the village granted by the inscription A. I have already pointed out that Mahuada-pathaké of this inscription is equivalent to Mahuada-pratijāgarana of the inscription A, and I may state that a (or the ?) village of Vadaūda is mentioned also in the plate of the Paramāras Yaśovarman and Lakshmi-varman, in Ind. Ant. Vol. XIX. p 352, ll. 5 and 13. Amarēśvara-kshētra is the Amarēśvara-tirtha from which the grant of Arjunavarman in Journ. Am. Or. Soc. Vol VII. p 27 was issued, and the Amarēśvara mentioned in the plates of Jayasimha, above, Vol III. p. 47; it is near the island of Māndhātā, on the southern bank of the river Narmadā. The grant in Journ. Am. Or. Soc. quoted just now also mentions the confluence of the Rēvā and Kapilā, which is now called 'Kapila Sangam, where a small stream joins the Narmadā'.² Of the places of origin of the donees, Takāri-sthāna is one of the places mentioned in A; Navagāmva-sthāna may be the town of Nawegāon in the Chāndā district, mentioned in the Gazetteer of the Central Provinces, p 370, but there is at least one other place of the same name in the Central Provinces, Ghatāushari-sthāna I am unable to identify.

No 14.—KANKER INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF BHANUDEVA,
THE [SAKA] YEAR 1242

By HIRA LAL, B A , NAGPUR

This inscription or prasthiti, as it is called in line 19, is lying in the veranda of the school house at Kanker, the capital of the Feudatory State of that name in the Central Provinces, and was brought away from the ruins between the Diwân and Śitalâ tanks in that town. It was first brought to my notice by Mr. Bajnath, B A, Superintendent of the Bastar State, who kindly furnished me with an inked estampage, and further estampages were supplied to me by the Diwân of the Kanker State and the Agency Inspector of Schools, Chhatûsgarh Feudatories.

The stone is a cubit square and half a cubit thick, and the writing covers a space of 18" by 17" in 19 lines. The letters are bold and well formed, the average size being $\frac{3}{4}$ ". The characters are Dêvanâgarî, and the language is Sanskrit. The whole of the inscription is written in verse, except the commencement (ôṃ siddhîh) in line 1, and the concluding portion (ll 18 and 19) containing the date and the names of the erector and the writer of the inscription. There are altogether eight verses, of which six are in the Śârdûlavikrîdita metre, and the first and the last in Sragdharâ and Anushtubh respectively. The principal orthographical peculiarities are the indifferent use of ś for s and vice versa (ll 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 15, 17, 19) and the use of b for v (ll 2, 12, 14). Some of the letters with a superscribed rêpha have been doubled (especially m and t), others not. The sign of avagraha has not been used at all. Final forms of t occur in ll. 12 and 18.

The inscription is an eulogy of the Nāyaka Vāsudēva, the minister of king Bhānudēva of Kākaira.¹ It states that he constructed two temples of Mahādēva, and another in honour of the local deity of the fields, besides a building with a gateway, and excavated two tanks. It is dated in the [Śaka] year 1242 bearing the name Raudra, on the 5th tithi of the dark fortnight of Jyāishṭha, corresponding to (Tuesday), the 27th May A.D. 1320. Unfortunately the week-day is not mentioned, and hence the date does not admit of verification. It is also possible that it may have been Wednesday, the 28th May, as there was a repetition of the Hindū date pañchamī in that fortnight and month. The record gives the genealogy of the minister for four generations, and that of his sovereign for seven generations. It is stated that Vāsudēva's ancestors were elephant-catchers (?) Though in the Kanker State wild elephants are not now found, they are still to be met with in the division in which it is included.² The most important part of the inscription is that which gives the genealogy of the Kākaira chiefs, mentioning in order the following — Simharāj, Vyāghra, Vōpadēva, Kṛishna, Jaitarāja, Sōmachandra and Bhānudēva. The dynasty is stated to be lunar, and the want of any epithet indicating paramount sovereignty postulates a subordination to another power. The epithets applied to them — avanīśa (l. 1), nripa (ll. 2 and 5), dharaṇidhara (l. 6), bhūpāla (l. 7) and nripati (ll. 10 and 13), are all synonyms of the word 'king.' In two copper-plate grants of Pamparājadēva found in the Kanker State³ the king is styled Sōmavamsānvaya-prasūta-mahāmandalīka (feudatory chief of the lunar race), which supports the above statement. The present Rāj family of Kanker is doubtless connected with these kings. It belongs to the lunar race and has always claimed to be a very ancient family.⁴ According to its own traditions it claims to have come from Orissa. Its original ancestor was ruling at Jagannāthapurī, but, on suddenly becoming a leper, in which state he could no longer occupy the throne, left the place and went out in search of a cure. At Sihāwā, close to Kanker and now in the Dhamtarī tahsil of the Raipur district, a spring was found, by bathing in which he got rid of the loathsome disease. The local people⁵ persuaded him to stay on at Sihāwā and installed him king, and he and his descendants continued to rule there. There can be little doubt that Sihāwā was once the capital of this dynasty, as its ruins and temples testify. There is still an inscription there, which is dated in the Śaka year 1114. The capital was finally removed to Kanker. This must have been done prior to Bhānudēva's times. For in line 12 we read: Kākairē nripa-Bhānudēva-nagarē (in Kākaira, the town or capital of king Bhānudēva), and in lines 3 to 5: Kākairē . . . śrī-Jaitarājō=bhavat (there was the illustrious Jaitarāja in Kākaira). This Jaitarāja was the grandfather of Bhānudēva. Thus Kākaira has been the capital of the State for over 600 years. Kanker once included the rich Dhamtarī tahsil of the Raipur

² The Central Provinces, called Gondwānā by the Musalmāns, were so infested by these animals that even revenue was levied in elephants. Even places like Jabalpur, which were and are far less jungly than Kanker, had their quota of wild elephants. See Jarrett's Annals, Vol. II p 196, where the following occurs:—"Garha (2 miles from Jabalpur) is a separate State abounding with forests in which are numerous wild elephants. The cultivators pay the revenue in mohurs and elephants." About a dozen years ago 40 elephants were captured in Bairākhōl, a State now transferred to Bengal, and I had once an occasion of riding one of them.

⁵ It is said that the installation of the Kanker chief is up to this day confirmed by the Halbās by anointing the Rājā before the shrine of Maulidēvī. The Halbās are an aboriginal tribe mostly living in that State and the adjoining tracts. These Halbās claim to have come from Orissa along with the leper king and are still the chief domestics of the Kanker chief. They speak a dialect which is a curious mixture of Oriyā, Chhattisgarhi (a form of Eastern Hindī) and Marāṭhi, see Dr Grierson's Linguistic Survey of India, Vol. VII. p 331.

district, but is now limited to an area of 1,429 square miles lying between 20° 6' and 20° 34' N. and 80° 41' and 81° 40' E

As regards the buildings and tanks mentioned in the inscription, there can be no doubt that the two tanks are identical with the present Diwān and Śitalā talāos, between which the ruins of the temples may still be seen. It is very probable that the Śitalā talāo—a name which gained currency since a hut dedicated to the goddess Śitalā was constructed on its bank—is the Kaudika-bandha of the inscription, the unnamed tank being called Diwān talāo or 'minister's tank,' thus keeping up the memory of its original constructor, who by calling it a taḍāga apparently distinguished it from the bandha, i.e. the tank formed by merely damming up a stream. The very name Kandika-bandha indicates its secondary importance. In the first place it was merely a bandha (dam), and secondly it was probably constructed by the payment of kaudikas,¹ a Sanskritised form of kaudīs (cowries) or shells, a currency of the lowest value

The temples and buildings have all fallen or been pulled down, and from the materials a fresh temple was constructed by the predecessor of the present chief. The old temples were seen by Mr. Fisher, who was Deputy Commissioner of the Raipur district (to which Kanker was formerly attached) about 1873 A D, and he alludes to them in his private Journal² thus:—“Saw some very curious old temples to the west of the village; one has a bījak giving, as I was told, some particulars of its history. They are very old and utterly neglected now.” This bījak was seen on the gate of the Mahādēva temple about the year 1825 as recorded in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV. p 505, where its date is also stated, which is the same as that of our inscription in all details. A noteworthy point in our inscription is the mention of the construction of a puratōbbhadra with a pratōli, about which latter Dr Vogel has written an article in the Royal Asiatic Society's Journal, July 1906, p 539. He has proved that pratōli really meant a gate-way, evidently strongly built and of considerable height. It was sometimes provided with a flight of steps.³ I have not been able to find puratōbbhadra in the Kōśas to which I have access, but sarvatōbbhadra is described as a kind of house with 4 doors facing the 4 quarters.⁴ From this I infer that a puratōbbhadra was a building with only one door in front. And the Kākara puratōbbhadra was actually furnished with a gate-way (pratōli).

¹ In this part of the country a good deal of transactions were done in cowries (shells, Sanskrit kapardika), which are still used as currency by the poor people. It must not however be supposed that there were no coins here. In the copper-plates of Pamparājādēva alluded to before, the coin tanka of local mint finds a mention. It is still a practice in some places to get work done, chiefly digging and throwing of earth, by what is called kaudīkar, a mode of piecework payment, 2 or 4 cowries or more according to the labour involved being paid for each basket of earth thrown out. A man with cowries stands at a place where the earth is to be thrown, and as each labourer turns up and throws down the earth, he receives immediately the fixed number of cowries each time. This mode of labour automatically punishes the idlers and saves a good deal of supervision and account-keeping where a large number of labourers are engaged simultaneously on such a work.

⁴ The idea seems to have been taken from a sarvatōbbhadra village, which is described in the Mānasāra, a book of the highest authority on Hindū architecture, as “a town or village of quadrangular form, containing in the middle a temple dedicated to one of the triad, Brahmā, Vishnu or Mahēśvara. It has 4 streets of equal length on the 4 sides at right angles, and 2 more crossing each other in the middle. Between these may be formed 3, 4, 5, or as many more streets as the extent of the village will admit, on each side, parallel to the middlemost street. Without the walls should be placed the shrines of the deities who preside over and defend the several quarters of the village, at the angular points should be erected halls, porticoes, colleges and other public edifices, and towards the quarter of Agni (south-east) a watershed for the accommodation of travellers and passengers. The whole village should be secured by a quadrangular wall and a ditch around it, with 4 large and as many small gates in the middle of the sides and at the angular points. Without the northern gate should be erected a temple for the worship of Mahākālī, and the huts of Chandālas or outcastes should be a krōśa distant from the village. A tank or reservoir should be constructed either on the south or north side or near either of these 2 points for ablutionary and culinary purposes.”—See Ram Raz's Architecture of the Hindus, 1824, p 43

TRANSLATION.

Om Success! (Verse 1) In the race of the Moon there was (born) Simharāj, a (very) lion to enemies, (and) praised as possessing numerous virtues. From him was born king Vyāghra, of unequalled fame, who outshone the sun by his splendour. He also begot an ornament of kings befitting his own manliness Vōpadēva; and the latter, likewise, (had a son) named Kṛi[shna], who was given to destroying crowds of hostile kings, (and) who dominated the universe by (his) valour.

(V 2) (Then) there was in Kākaira the illustrious Jastarāja, the lustre of the nails of whose lotus-feet was rendered (still more) brilliant by the light emanating from the shining diamonds in the diadems on the heads of kings (prostrating themselves before him) to the ground, (and) who had the merit of conquering heroes on the battle-field. From him who owned the glory of wonderful great valour (was born) the illustrious king Sōmachandra.

(V 3) From him, the glorious ocean of virtues, (was born) a young king the illustrious Bhānu, who was brilliant by (his) whole body and apparel, who acquired honour and prosperity, the destroyer of the party of opponents, a crest-jewel of kings (He) is (now) protecting the earth. While he is ruling, the people are (all) virtuous (and) well-intentioned.

(V 4) The country is replete with permanent wealth and virtue and is devoid of (all) calamities, the twice-born are devoted to good actions, the subjects are intent on performing sacrifices and doing charitable acts. What more? The citizens are very virtuous (and) refined, (and) their minds are purified by the study of the Śāstras. What wonder does not (happen) in (this) iron age, while king Bhānudēva, the incarnation of virtue, is ruling the kingdom?

(V 5.) In a family which abounded in men subsisting on (catching?) groups of elephants there was the Nāyaka Pô[lū], of brilliant fame, a leader of men, the son of the illustrious Dāmōdara. His famous, straightforward son was called Bhīma. His son was the illustrious Vāsudēva, (who resided) in Kākaira, the town of king Bhānudēva.

(V. 6) This illustrious Vāsudēva, the pillar of the city, the chief gem (shining) with priceless splendour amongst (his) caste fellows, famous, devoted to the lotus-feet of king Bhānudēva, known to be very valorous before the array of knights on the battle-field, great, of wonderful power (and) patience, is (now) administering the country.

(V 7) (This) clever (minister) caused to be built two temples of the god whose ornament is the moon (viz Mahādēva), together with halls, a puratōbhadrā with a gate-way, and an excellent temple (dedicated) to the guardian deity of the fields. Moreover (he) caused to be dug a large pond (taḍāga) and a long tank (bandha) called Kaudika, which contained a great quantity of water.

(V 8) The moon-light of the true fame of Vāsudēva, devoted to sacrifices and charitable works, has expanded (and) become established so long as the moon, the sun and the stars endure.

(Lane 18.) Samvat 1242, in the Raudra year, on the 5th (tīthi) of the dark (fortnight) of Jyāishtha, (this) pratasti was erected by the Nāyaka Vāsudēva. Written by Śaktikumāra. Hail!

POSTSCRIPT.

By PROFESSOR F. KIELHORN, C.I.E ; GÖTTINGEN.

Prof Hultsch has asked me to express an opinion on the date of the stone inscription published above, of which he has sent me an impression. He also, at the instance of Mr Hira Lal, has requested me to give my readings of, and, if possible, to verify, the dates of two copper-plate inscriptions of the Kākairā (Kanker) chief Pamparājadēva, which are about to be published by Mr Hira Lal, and of which impressions have been forwarded by him.

The date of the stone inscription clearly is, as given by Mr Hira Lal Samvat 1242 Raudra-samvatsarē | Jyēshṭha-vadi pañchamyām |. It does not admit of exact verification, and the only question concerning it is, to which era the year 1242 should be referred so that the date may fall in a Raudra-samvatsara. A priori the expression samvat 1242 would be taken here to denote the Vikrama year 1242; but there is no Vikrama year 1242 that could be called a Raudra year. Nearest to V 1242, Raudra, by the southern system, would be the expired Chaitrādī Vikrama year 1257, and by the northern mean-sign system it would indicate the time from the 13th November A.D. 1195 to the 8th November A.D. 1196, in the expired Chaitrādī or Kārttikādī Vikrama years 1252 and 1253. If the year of the date were 1252 instead of 1242, it might be taken to be the expired Kārttikādī Vikrama year 1252, in which case the 5th of the dark half of Jyāishtha would undoubtedly fall in a Raudra year; but there is nothing to prove that the writer erroneously put 1242 instead of 1252.

Assuming, then, the figures for the year and the Jupiter's year to have been correctly given, it would only remain to take the expression samvat 1242, as has been done by Mr Hira Lal, to denote the expired Śaka year 1242, which by the southern system was a Raudra year. But here we are at once met by a difficulty. In my paper on the dates of the Śaka era in inscriptions I have shown¹ that among 400 Śaka dates of inscriptions only five do not contain the word Śaka or Śāka, and that of even these five dates three are spurious or suspicious, while the two others are in verse. There is therefore every reason to assume that the writer of the inscription would have denoted the Śaka year 1242 by some such expression as Śakē 1242, not by samvat 1242. And there might be the further objection that in the Central Provinces, where the date comes from, the system of Jupiter's years ordinarily followed seems to have been the northern system, not the southern system by which alone the Śaka year 1242 can be described as a Raudra year.

As the date cannot be verified, it would be useless to indulge in further speculations¹ To me the wording of it seems certainly to be suspicious And I can only say that, assuming the figures for the year to be correct and the date to be really a Śaka date, it would correspond to the pūrnimānta Jyāishtha, to Monday, the 28th April A.D. 1320, and for the amānta Jyāishtha as stated by Mr. Hira Lal, to Tuesday, the 27th, or Wednesday, the 28th May,² A.D. 1320

Of the two copper-plate inscriptions of Pamparāja, one is clearly dated as follows —

[L 10] samvat 966 . . .

i.e. "in the Īśvara year, at an eclipse of the sun on a Sunday, in the nakshatra Chitrā in the month Kārttika, . . . in the year 966"

I have no doubt that the year 966 of this date must be referred to the Kalachuri era

In Festgruss an Roth, p 53 ff, I have tried to prove from the 12 dates between the years 793 and 958, which hitherto have been available, that the Kalachuri (Chêdi) era commenced on the 5th September A.D. 248, that the years were Āsvinādi years and the months pūrnimānta months, and that therefore, to convert an expired Kalachuri year into an expired year of the Kaliyuga, we must add 3349 when the date falls in the bright half of Āsvina or in any month from Kārttika to Phālguna, and 3350 in all other cases Applying this here, we find that our date, for the pūrnimānta Kārttika of the expired Kalachuri year 966 = Kaliyuga expired $966 + 3349 = 4315$, regularly corresponds to Sunday, the 5th October A.D. 1214, when the 15th tithi of the dark half ended 3 h 33 m, and when the nakshatra was Chitrā, by the equal space system and according to Gaiga for 2 h 38 m, after mean sunrise On the same day there was a total eclipse of the sun, the greatest phase of which at Kanker (in about Long. 82° and Lat 20°) was four digits³

It will, I think, be generally admitted that Sunday, the 5th October A.D. 1214, undoubtedly is the proper equivalent of our date, but, in connection with this date, the writer apparently has wrongly quoted the year Īśvara instead of the immediately following year Bahudhānya. By the northern mean-sign system Īśvara lasted from the 2nd September A.D. 1212 to the 29th August A.D. 1213 By the northern luni-solar system therefore Īśvara was the proper name of Kaliyuga 4314 expired, and not of the year of our date, viz Kaliyuga 4315 expired, which according to the northern luni-solar system, as already intimated, would have received the name Bahudhānya For the present, I can ascribe the error only to the writer's carelessness, but the error is of such a nature that it confirms rather than invalidates our general result⁴

The date of the other copper-plate of Pamparāja I read thus —

[L 10] Mriga-rikshē Sô[ma]-dinē |

Here everything is perfectly clear and certain in the impression excepting the number of the tithi and the second akshara of the name of the weekday As regards the latter, it appears to

² The 5th tithi commenced 1 h 4 m before mean sunrise of the Tuesday and ended 0 h 30 m after mean sunrise of the Wednesday

³ Between A.D. 1201 and 1250 this is the only solar eclipse in the month Kārttika that could have been visible at Kanker

mo evident that the engraver after the akshara sô in the first instance by mistake engraved the letter d (of dinê), and that he then altered this d to ma. Under any circumstances there could be no doubt that the intended weekday is Sôma-dina or 'Monday.' Nor can there be any real doubt about the number of the tithi. The date clearly gives us the dark half of the month Bhâdrapada and during it the nakshatra Mriga (Mṛgaśīrsha). Now in the dark half the nakshatra will ordinarily be Mriga about the 8th tithi of the amānta and the 10th tithi of the pûrṇimānta Bhâdrapada, and a careful examination of the impression shows that the word vadi is actually followed by 10, the 0 of which is engraved quite on the margin of the plate. I therefore take it that the date gives us for calculation "the year 965, the 10th tithi of the dark half of (the pûrṇimānta) Bhâdrapada, with the nakshatra Mriga and a Monday." And treating the year again as a Kalachuri year, I find the following equivalents.—

For the expired Kalachuri year 965 = Kalyuga expired 965 + 3350 = 4315. Saturday, the 2nd August A.D. 1214, when the 10th tithi of the dark half of the pûrṇimānta Bhâdrapada ended 18 h 25 m, and the nakshatra was Mriga, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 21 h 40 m, and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 20 h. 21 m, after mean sunrise.

For the current Kalachuri year 965 = Kalyuga 4315 current Monday, the 12th August A.D. 1213, when the 10th tithi of the dark half of the pûrṇimānta Bhâdrapada commenced 7 h, and when the nakshatra was Mriga, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 15 h 46 m, and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 14 h 27 m, after mean sunrise.

Of the two, I do not hesitate to accept Monday, the 12th August A.D. 1213, as the true equivalent of our date. That the tithi of the date was a current tithi can cause no difficulty. And the fact that Kalachuri years, occasionally and exceptionally, are quoted as current years is proved by another date, in an inscription of which Mr D. R. Bhandarkar some time ago has been good enough to send me a photograph. The inscription referred to is one at Scrinārāyan which the late Sir A. Cunningham had stated to be dated—

Kalachuri-samvatsarê || 898 || Āsvina-sudî 2 Sôma-dinê.

According to the photograph the date really is—

Kalachuri-samvatsarê || 898 || Āsvina-sudî 7¹ Sôma-dinê, and with this reading the date regularly corresponds, for the current Kalachuri year 898, to Monday, the 21st September A.D. 1145, when the 7th tithi of the bright half of Āśvina ended 20 h. 57 m. after mean sunrise.

NO. 15 —NOTE ON THE TWO COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTIONS OF THE TIME OF MAHENDRAPALA OF KANAUJ.

By PROFESSOR F. KIELHORN, CIE, GÖTTINGEN.

While I was reading the final proof of my paper on the two copper-plate inscriptions of the time of Mahendrapāla of Kanauj, published above p. 1 ff, I received from Prof. Hultzsch excellent ink-impressions of the two inscriptions which had been supplied to him by Rai Bahadur V. Venkayya. The impressions enabled me to make one or two slight corrections in my texts, but it was impossible to insert in my article Mr. Venkayya's description of the original plates, and to get ready in time the collotype facsimile of the second of the two inscriptions, the plates of Avanivarman II Yôga, which Prof. Hultzsch had at once ordered to be prepared and which is now published herewith.

On the plates A, those of Balavarman, Mr. Venkayya writes as follows —

"The two plates are about 13" broad and about 9½" high, somewhat less in the middle. They are strung on an almost circular ring, 2½" in diameter. The ends of the ring are secured below a circular seal, which is slightly damaged and measures nearly $1\frac{3}{4}$ " in diameter. It is about $\frac{1}{8}$ " thick, and bears in relief a squatting figure, perhaps representing a god, the right hand of which seems to be raised, as if to indicate the abhaya-hasta Either plate near the top has a ring-hole which is about $\frac{7}{8}$ " in diameter "

On the plates B, those of Avanivarman II Yôga, Mr Venkayya writes —

"The three plates are between $12\frac{1}{8}$ " and $12\frac{1}{4}$ " broad and between $8\frac{3}{8}$ " and 9" high. They are strung on an oval ring which measures $2\frac{1}{2}$ " by $2\frac{1}{4}$ ". The ends of the ring are secured below a circular seal, which is slightly mutilated and measures nearly 2" in diameter. The seal bears in relief a squatting figure, similar to the one on the seal of the other plates. Each plate contains a ring-hole which is about $\frac{5}{8}$ " in diameter."

On the excellent facsimile published herewith I have to say only a few words. It will show that the inscription in some places is not very easy to read. As regards individual signs I would merely draw attention to the forms of the initial z and é, e g in zha, l 33, and élam=, l 45, to the sign for ry, e g in 'auryasya, l 11, to the final t, e g in =bhât, l 32, and to the numeral figures, especially that for '9', in line 68.

In my text of the inscription the word śrī- has by an oversight been omitted before Ta[ru]nā-, above, p 10, l 57.

No. 16 —VANDRAM PLATES OF AMMARAJA II

By PROFESSOR E. HULTZSCH, PH D.; HALLE (SAALE)

These plates were found in the backyard of Buddharraju Venkataraju of Vandram, a village in the Bhimavaram taluka of the Kistna district, and were forwarded by the Head Assistant Collector of Narsapur through the Collector of Kistna to Rai Bahadur Venkayya, who sent me two sets of ink-impressions of them, with the following remarks. —

"These are five copper-plates, measuring $7\frac{3}{4}$ " in length and $3\frac{5}{8}$ " in height. They have high rims more than $\frac{1}{8}$ " thick. The ring on which the plates are strung was cut by me for the first time and soldered subsequently. It is oval, measures $3\frac{1}{8}$ " by $3\frac{1}{8}$ ", and is nearly $\frac{1}{8}$ " thick. The ends of the ring are secured in an expanded eight-petalled lotus at the bottom of a circular seal, which measures $2\frac{3}{8}$ " in diameter. The seal is much damaged, but bears, in relief on a countersunk surface, the legend Śrī-Tribhu[vanāmkṣa], with a boar facing the proper left over it and a floral device below. The other symbols cut in the seal are not quite distinct. Traces of the sun over the boar, of the crescent of the moon behind his tail, and of an elephant goad in front of him are visible."

The first and last plates bear writing only on one side, and the three remaining plates on both sides. The plates are in a bad state of preservation. Of plate i a small portion is missing. Plate ii b is a palimpsest, and part of its writing is effaced. The two first lines of plate iii b and some letters of the two last lines of plate iv a are damaged by corrosion. Of plate iv b the two first lines and part of the third are in a still worse condition. On the last plate (v) some letters are more or less doubtful.

After the MS of this article had gone to the press, I received from Mr Venkayya the original copper-plates, with the help of which I was able to improve my readings of several indistinct words.

The alphabet is ancient Telugu of the usual type. I would only draw attention to the peculiar form of the secondary ā in -mūrtīr=, l 18, and samāhūya, l 36 f. The language is Sanskrit, but the four first lines of the last plate contain some Telugu words. The Sanskrit portion consists of both prose and verses.

The inscription opens with the genealogy of Ammarāja (II) of the (Eastern) Chālukya (15) dynasty. Ll. 1-17 are practically identical with ll. 1-23 of the Elavayya grant of the same king¹ But Vikramāditya (I) receives the title Yuvarāja (l. 13), and the name Kollabiganda is twice (ll. 14 and 17) spelt with b, not with bh.

Ammarāja II is then praised in seven verses, all of which occur in his Padankalūru grant,² where they are however differently arranged.³ The two verses (5 and 6) recording the date of his coronation are also found in the Mahayapūndi grant⁴ It is a curious fact that the major portion of plate ii b (consisting of verses 3-5 and nearly the whole of verse 6) of the Vandram plates is engraved over another grant of Ammarāja II, which seems to have been partially effaced by the writer, but of which distinct traces are still visible⁵ I subjoin a transcript of those lines of the original inscription on plate ii.b which can still be made out.

The poetical description of Amma's reign is followed by a prose passage (ll. 30-37) which is worded in nearly the same manner as ll. 30-36 of the Elavayya grant⁶ Ammarāja II., who is here styled 'Samastabhuvanāśraya, the glorious Vijayāditya (VI.) Mahārājādhirāja-Paramēśvara Paramabhāṭṭāraka, the very pious one, who meditates at the feet of (his) mother and father, thus commands, having called (them) together, the ryots, headed by the Rāshṭrakūṣas, inhabiting the twelve villages (the chief one of which is) Prāndorū in the Pāvunavāra district (vishaya)'

So far the text can be easily transcribed and understood. But the remainder of the inscription cannot be deciphered in full, as a number of words in the damaged portions are doubtful or quite illegible. Besides, the author of the long metrical passage describing the doings (ll. 37-61) knew so little Sanskrit, or got his draft copied in such an imperfect way, that I am unable to propose satisfactory corrections even of some of the well-preserved portions of it. The whole of this passage seems to be in verse. Making allowance for the damaged and lost lines I number the verses as 8-23. Verse 8 praises the family (gōtra) named Mitrāyu. A descendant of it was Tūrkkaya-Peddiya⁷ (v. 9), who lived in the large village Rāviparū (v. 10), his son Vijayāditya (v. 11) and his grandson Tūrkkaya-Yajvan (v. 12). The last had by Kandamāmbā a son named Kuppanayya (v. 14), who seems to have enjoyed the titles of minister (amātya, v. 15) and vassal (sāmanta, v. 16). He had the surname Vipranārā[yaṇa] (v. 21) and founded a shrine of Śiva at Drākshārāma.⁸

"To this Kuppan[ā]mātya, who is devoted to Me, the village named Tānderū has been given by Us, having made (it) an Agrahāra; to whom (the village) named [Beṭi]pūndi (in the neighbourhood) of Prāndorū⁹ in your district¹⁰ (vishaya), together with the share of gold,

was given with exemption from all taxes, having made (it) an Agrahāra'' I subjoin my reading of this passage, which is so peculiarly worded, that it remains doubtful whether the present grant refers to Tānderu or to Betipūndi or to both, and whether only the second or both of them belonged to the Pāvunavāra-vishaya

Of the subsequent description of the boundaries of the village granted (II 64-67) I am unable to furnish a satisfactory transcript. The remainder of the inscription (II 67-72) is nearly identical with II 57-60 of the Elavayru grant⁴. The last line (72) seems to read —

No. 17.—THE INSCRIPTIONS ON THE MATHURA LION-CAPITAL.

By F. W. THOMAS, M.A., LONDON

The Mathurā lion-capital was discovered by the late Dr. Bhagvanlal Indraji under circumstances detailed in his article on The Northern Khatrapas edited and published by Professor E. J. Rapson the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, N. S., Vol XXVI 1894, pp 541-554; see in particular pp 542-4. It was found embedded in the steps of an altar devoted to Śitala on a site belonging to some low-caste Hindus at Mathurā, but not more definitely located. Having been with difficulty secured by Dr. Bhagvanlal, the capital was conveyed to Bombay, subsequently, on his death, it was despatched to England, and it can now be seen in the Buddhist Room at the British Museum.

The inscriptions incised on the capital were transcribed and translated by the discoverer himself; but owing to his death the task of publishing the MS. was entrusted by the Council of the Royal Asiatic Society to the late Professor Buhler, who was able to compare the readings with the stone itself and with paper impressions presented to him in 1889 by Dr. James Burgess. At the commencement of the published account, which appeared in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, N. S., Vol XXVI 1894, pp 525-540, Prof. Buhler observes that "the collation has made necessary some alterations in the transcript and in the translation, among which the more important ones have been pointed out in the notes. But I may confidently assert that all really essential points have been fully settled and explained by Dr. Bhagvanlal, whose great acumen and scholarship are as conspicuous in his interpretation of these inscriptions as in his other epigraphic publications. For convenience's sake, I have prefixed an introduction, summarising the chief results deducible from the inscriptions."

^१ Read यस्मिन्नासति.^२ The anuvāsa stands at the beginning of the next line^३ Read °रमीर्णिरीति°.^४ Read °माणी.^५ The El. argu grant (l. 32 f.) supplies the correct reading मानोन्नतो नतोदतसमनलोक.

While endorsing in the main these statements of so great an authority, from all points of view, as the late Prof Bühler I have endeavoured, in re-editing the inscriptions with Plates, which before were wanting, to give an unbiased reading based upon new impressions supplied by the kindness of the Department in the Museum (at the instance of Dr J F Fleet, who originated the suggestion of this article), and upon frequent inspections of the stone itself. The present versions will therefore be found to differ in some particulars from those of Dr. Bhagyanlal and Prof Bühler.

The shape and dimensions of the capital will be best realized from the accompanying Plates, but some particulars demand a verbal description. In the first place, the circular hole in the upper square surface, corresponding to a similar hole in the under surface, proves that the capital was surmounted by a shaft or some other continuation. Prof Bühler remarks that various representations on slabs from the Amarāvati Stūpa prove this shaft to have supported a Dharma-chakra, referring to the Archaeological Survey Plates published by Dr. Burgess (Plate xxxviii figs 1 and 6, and Plate xl figs 3 and 4). But it has already been pointed out by me in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1906, pp 216 and 464, that the use of lion-capitals of actual pillars was a common feature in Indian architecture, derived from Persian models. Examples may be seen in the Archaeological Survey publications relating to Bharhut (Cunningham, Plates vi, viii, x.), Sāñchī (Maisey, Plates xix, xxxiii), Mathurā (V A. Smith, Plates xliii-xlvi. and xlix-l), Amarāvati (Burgess, p 93, Plates xlix liii, liv, lv, and Burgess, 1882, Plate xiv), and elsewhere. The presumption, therefore, is that the lion-capital formed the crown of a real pillar.

Secondly, the state of the stone has been somewhat impaired by time and accident. In some cases, e.g. in the loss of the horn-like projections of the two heads, this has involved no curtailment of the text. The chippings at the two bottom corners have been, no doubt, equally harmless. But the front, which would be the most exposed portion of the stone, has in part so peeled away as to render some characters illegible. In the second line of the large inscription carved on the body of the lion to the spectator's left (J 1 1) the large rva is followed by traces of two or three aksharas of equal size leading to a partly visible sa (?), after which intervene three doubtful characters before we come to firm ground again in pul.¹

In size the aksharas vary considerably. We may distinguish five groups (1) the inscriptions B E F I J M on the front and back of the stone (among which I perhaps exceeds the others slightly in size), having characters about $2\frac{1}{2}$ in in height, (2) G N P E'', on the back and under surface of the stone, circa $2\frac{1}{2}$ in ; (3) A (on the unpolished top and back of the stone), K. L (on the breast of the left lion), O Q R (underneath), J' (front, on the leg of the left lion), circa $1\frac{1}{2}$ in ; (4) C. D E' (which may be estimated from E', slightly the largest, visible among the characters of E), circa 1 in ; (5) H H', slightly incised in small characters, of about $\frac{3}{4}$ in, at the places indicated on the front. In the same inscription the aksharas generally maintain a fair average size, but sometimes they become a little cramped by limitations of space. It is clear that the inscriptions in the larger characters (1), (2) and (3) were carved first, and those of a smaller size were afterwards crammed in wherever space offered.

In type, on the other hand, the characters present an uniformity which, like the subject-matter of the records, forbids any supposition of additions during the subsequent history of the stone. They have been compared by Prof. Bühler to those of the Shāhbāzgarhī and Mansehra versions of the Edicts of Aśoka. But the degree of similarity and dissimilarity may now be more exactly estimated from Bühler's Indian Palaeography, where the columns viii and ix of Plate No 1 are based chiefly upon these inscriptions. The type may be described as intermediate between the Aśoka forms and the cursive derivatives of the Dhammapada MS and those discovered by Dr Stein, to which approximate the vase scratchings from Māmkālā and other places and the inscription of Sue-Vihār (see the Plate given by Dr Hoernle in the Indian Antiquary, Vol X. facing p 325). It does not, however, appear to be quite identical with that exhibited in any of these or in the Taxila plate (see the facsimile above, Vol IV. facing p 56), where on account of the historical contiguity we should expect to find, and do find, a near congener. The inscriptions edited by M. Senart in the Journal Asiatique, Sér IX Vol XIII (1899), p 526 ff. and Vol IV. (1894), p 504 ff (No. 35), are also in similar characters (see the Plates).

The forms of the individual letters may be seen from Plate IV. Those of ṭha, sa, mu, ṣpa, the position of medial e and the looped form of u have been described by Bühler. Attention may be called to the rda in Q 1, the spa in A 7, the rna (?) in I 1, the curious form in J 1 interpreted by Bühler as shṭē, the archaic ma with the original angle beneath in A 2. A few points call for further consideration. The form of ta, which occurs many times, has in other records the value of tra (see the Plate). Although we have certainly one case (J 2, in kūrta), and perhaps two others (E" in krakārta?, and R 1 in Tachhilasa or Bachhlasa?), where the bottom curve is wanting, the character occurs so often that there can be no doubt as to what it denotes. In supposing it to be a da Bühler, who in his articles in the Z D M. G Vol XLIII pp 133 and 294-6 has read a similar character as tt (so also Johansson, Der Dialekt der Shāhbāzgarhi-Redaktion, I p 126), was influenced by finding it in pratésō (M 2) and similar cases. But the regular form of da is several times instanced, and the t for d in pratésō and elsewhere is a dialectical, not an orthographical, feature, found in other Kharōṣṭhī records.

The only question remaining, as concerns ta, is part of a larger matter. How do we find represented the conjunct r? In a number of cases the addition is made by a stroke inclined to the left attached to the lower curve. This occurs in A 1 (chhatra°), A. 6 (mātrā), A. 7 (putrā°). In these examples there was some slight danger of confusion with tō, which shows (see the Plate) a similar stroke attached to the upper curve. Perhaps for this reason another device is more frequently adopted, namely a dot in place of the stroke, see B 1 and 3 (chhatra°), B. 2 (putra), M 1 (chhatra°), Q. 2 (chhatra°). There remain A 3 (where te is written), A. 5 (where I can detect no clear indication of the r-stroke or dot), G. 1 (where there is nothing attached to the ta, though the reading may be chhratava, if not chchhatava), G 2 (chhatava), A. 9 (where we seem to have atraūrēna for atē°). In A 1 we have two strokes, both of which seem to be intentional; one of them, which resembles the downward stroke of the Aramaic and Pahlavi t, I have conjectured to denote a doubled t before the r. Of a cerebral (ṭa) I can find no trace, unless indeed it is contained in the mysterious third sign of A. 13.

With other consonants than t the r is regularly inserted where required. We may quote bhra in A. 7 (where it takes the form of a detached stroke), gra in A. 2 and N. 2, pra in A 10 (pradhraṭipra°), A 11 (prati°), M 3 (pratésō), N. 3, dhra in A 10 and M 2, chhra (chchha?) in G. 2 and I 1 (chhratava° and chhratrava). In the last example, as also in pradhraṭi (A. 10, paḍhrutī in I 2), it would seem to be even repeated; but this may be a feature of pronunciation rather than of writing. A really otiose r-stroke is found in mahēshri, A. 2, and probably in Pispasri, A. 7.

The case of kra is peculiar. If we disregard the doubtful inscription E", it is found four times, in bhakraṭatō (A. 12), nākraruasa (F 1 and N. 1), and sakrastānasa (P. 1), ie in places where we expect a simple ga. This can hardly be accidental; it would seem probable that in these cases the combination kra represents a spirantic pronunciation of ga, analogous to the Persian ḡ, more especially as in the name of Seistān (Pahlavi Saghashtān) this sound no doubt prevailed at the time.

A few further points remain to be noticed (1) In ateurēna and hōrahāparivārēna (A. 9 and 10) we find a perhaps intentional stroke diverging from the tail of the na, though not in both cases on the same side. Have we here na? The rather noticeable variations in the form of the nasal may be observed in Plate IV.

(2) Sa varies between the forms with and without the small adjunct near the centre (see Plate IV). In N 3 the addition of the r-stroke makes sum. In E 4 a slight curve at the foot may also indicate sum, anticipating as in the Stem documents, the following nasal. A writing sya is certainly to be seen in G. 1 and probably also in B 2.

(3) The two occurrences of kharaōsta (A. 4 and E 1) seem both to show a small diverging mark in the place where h is usually appended, a circumstance which, together with the probable derivation of the word, suggests a reading rha=hra.

(4) In A 2 a has a small stroke added as a sort of head.

(5) In A 13 we have the distinguishing mark of ś vertical and at the top, elsewhere it is horizontal and at the centre.

(6) The śē of A 11 has two small (head and foot) strokes differentiating it from the śē of the previous line,—apparently without reason.

(7) The complicated jo of C. 2 recalls the varieties on the coins (see Gardner, The Coins of Bactria, pp. 55, 83).

(8) Lastly we may mention that the stone presents a number of dots and other small marks which must apparently be ascribed to accident or wear. In some cases we might be tempted to trace the anusvāra, e.g. in J, where we should thus arrive at a reading Sarvāstivātannam.

The Prākṛit in which the inscriptions are composed has been described by Bühler and perhaps need not be discussed at length. It is distinguished by closeness to Sanskrit. Elision of medial consonants occurs, if we neglect the suffixal h (nāgarāa, kuśūlāa, māhāsānghia), only in ateurena (for °vurēna ī), saśpa[t]ē. In ayana and puya (= āchārya and pūjā) we have a weakening of ch to y. I have suggested (Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1906, p. 205) that the sound denoted by this y was that of the French j, and the matter will arise again in connection with the proper names. The changes apparent in the word chhatrava are not necessarily Indian. The hardening of g and d to kr and t has been already dealt with, on the other hand p appears in thūa and pratiṭhāvitō as v, never b as p. Conjunction s is, except in foreign and technical names (kharaōsta, sakastāna, sarvāstivāda), assimilated ([t] thūva, kadhavāra, prati[t] thārita, bhi[h] khu), r, on the other hand, remains both as prior (sarva, khadaa), and as posterior, member of a conjunction. The forms of the a and ā declensions are very well preserved. The nominative sing. masc. appears both as a (in thūva, etc.) and as o (kharaōstō, etc.), the neuter is in a[m] (śarīra[m]), the genitive singular in [s] sa, twice written sya. In -munsa the i declension shows the Prākṛit form, of the i inflexion we have several forms (instrumental -iā, etc.). The r-stems seem to be regular (dhite in A 3 being a miswriting for dhitrā), while in yuvarāṇa[h] in A 4 we have an ultra-Sanskrit use of the consonant paradigm. We may note the employment of sarvāstivāda in place of °vādin. The only pronouns occurring are imō, nominative masculine, and iśē, a locative, and the only finite verb bhūsavī (certainly not bhūsati, as Bühler read) presents a problem, see the note to A 13. The false concord śarīra pratiṭhāvitō is found elsewhere (see the note ad loc).

We now come to the historical matter, which has been discussed both by Bühler, pp. 529-33, and by Professor Rapson (p. 541 ff. of the same volume). The object of the chief inscription (A.) is to record a religious donation on the part of the Chief Queen of the Satrap Rājula, with whom are associated various members of her family and her whole court. In the other inscriptions we find honourable mention of (1) certain other members of the Satrap family at Mathurā, (2) other Satraps, and (3) a Buddhist teacher, or two Buddhist teachers, bearing the names Bddhila (or Bndhila) and Bu[d]dhadêva. The last named, who is termed an âchôrya and represented as a champion of the Sarvâstivâdin school against the rival Mâhâsâṅghikas, bears a name which cannot have been rare; one teacher of this name is mentioned by Târanâtha as a leader of the Vaibhâshikas (see Schiefner's translation, pp. 4 and 67, and the references in the St Petersburg Dictionary), and we have therefore no sufficient means of identification. It is different with some of the other names.

In the first place, the Great Satrap Râjûla himself and his son, the Satrap Śudâsa, have both been identified with rulers named on coins and in other inscriptions from Mathurâ (see Bühler, pp 531-2, Ep Ind. Vol. I pp 195-6, 199, Cunningham, Archæological Survey Reports, Vol. III p 30, and Vol XX pp 48-9, V. A. Smith, Mathurâ, p 21, Rapson, Indian Coins, p 9, § 33). These identifications were made by Cunningham, who also proposed to identify the Yuvârîja Kharaôsta with the Kharamôsta, son of Artas, known from coins, a suggestion which is scarcely tenable (Bühler, op. cit p 532). The further identification of the Great Satrap Kusûlaka Pâtika with Pâtika, son of the Satrap Lakka Kusûlaka, named in the Taxila plate, is important not only as supplying a date, though in an unknown era,—for the Taxila Plate is dated in the year 78, (in the time) of the Great King Môga,—but also as implying that the other Satraps mentioned may also have ruled in distant places. It appears therefore that the inscriptions make a point of naming with respect the chief representatives of the Kshatrapa dominion in Northern India, and this is a strong argument for retaining the evident interpretation of inscription P as 'in honour of the whole Saka realm' (Sakastâna). It is therefore important to ascertain what other indications of nationality the inscriptions supply.

In an article published in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1906 (pp 181-216, see also pp 460-4) I have endeavoured to prove (1) that Sakas inhabited the region now known as Seistan as early as the time of Darius the Great and Alexander, (2) that the inscriptions of the lion-capital exhibit a mixture of Persian and Saka nomenclature, and I have inferred that the Kshatrapas of Northern India were the representatives of a mixed Parthian and Saka domination. I think that all these propositions must be adhered to. Upon the first of them we need not dwell here. The second is strongly supported a priori by the fact that Pâtika of Taxila, who bears himself a distinctively Persian name, mentions as his overlord the Great King Môga, whose name is with equal distinctiveness Saka.

I may here refer to a small point in the Taxila inscription which is not without interest. The form of the phrase chhatrapasa Lakô Kusûlakô nâma tasa (for chhatrapasa Lakasa Kusûlakasa), which recurs in a second phrase, has been by Bühler compared with passages in two of the Jama inscriptions from Mathurâ. We may perhaps find something of the kind in later Sanskrit inscriptions and in the style of the Pañchatantra and Hitôpadêśa. But the turn of the phrase is so conspicuous a feature of the edicts of the Achæmenids that we are strongly tempted to regard it as, like the earliest Indian architecture, derived through the Satraps from a Persian model.

This is not the place for resuming at length the discussion of the etymology of all the names occurring in the inscriptions. A few points may be mentioned—

1. The name Kharaôsta or Kharha(hra)ôsta, as = khshathra, 'sovereignty,' + ôsta, 'blessing,' is practically certain. The initial kha, which reappears in khaharâta with variant kshaharâta, presents no difficulty, it recurs in the khapallâna (no doubt = khshathrapahlâna, 'defence of sovereignty,') of the new Sârânâth inscription (above, Vol VIII p. 173 ff). The variation in the initial consonant group, of which we find a third form in chhatrapa, is of the same nature as that in cavalier and chivalry, that is to say, it is due to historical and dialectical differences.¹

¹ On a coin given by Prof. Rapson, Indian Coins, Pl. III No 1, we have Kshaharâta in Brâhmî together with Chhaharâta in Kharoshthî, some of the Nâsik inscriptions have Khakharâta, etc.

The hra, from thra, arose (with other forms) on Iranian soil, Mihra (Skt Mihura) being a variant of Mithra,¹ of which a still more simplified form is found in Miraboyana of the Takht-i-Bahi inscription (see M. Boyer's article in the Journal Asiatique, Sér. X Vol. III. (1904) pp 463-4); the old Persian dialect had also s, concerning which it may be sufficient to refer to the grammars

2 Mévaki is no doubt a variant of the Scythian name Mauakes Μευακης, which we find attached to the king Manes and Môga (= Mauaka).

3 The two names Kâlûi, Kâmûiô show a Pahlavi suffix ûi, in the second case with addition of an Indian termination.

4 Naulûdo is no doubt for Naurûdô, 'New Growth,' with a Pahlavi or Afghan l for r.

5. The element Khala- appears in Khalama and Khalasamušo.

6 The termination -ûs in Kômûsâ and °samûšo seems to be Scythic

7. The element -si in Âyasi, Kômûsâ, Nandasikasa, Paspasi is certainly not the Sanskrit śrī, which would have been so written in these inscriptions. It is a derivative element, perhaps identical with the -cî, -zî (Pahlavi -cîk) which appears in many Iranian names

8 The y in Ayasi, Hayuarana, Ayimisa, found also on the coins as an alternative for z in Âyilisa, etc (see Gardner, op. cit pp 93, 173), most probably represents a j sound resembling the French j, for which reasons it must also remain undetermined whether the ayaria (= âchârya) and puya (= pûjâ) of our inscriptions were intended or not to represent a pronunciation with a y.

9 The name Abûhólâ doubtless consists of two members, Abû (of uncertain meaning) to be traced in Αβουλιτης (see Justi's Iranisches Namenbuch, s v) + hólâ, a variant of the hóra in Spâlahôra and the hórakâ of our inscriptions. That spâla is a Pahlavi form of O Pers. spâda = Zend spâda = Neo-Pers spâh is plain from its occurrence in Spalapati, which corresponds to the Persian Ispahbad, Pahlavi Spâhpat (see Justi, op. cit and Horn, Neupersische Etymologie, No. 699). As the Zend-Persian ahura is used in the sense of 'prince' and as the form hóra is to be traced in the common (Sassanian) name Hormisdas, there can be no reason to doubt that this is the meaning of the second part of the name of Abûhólâ and that her hórakâparivâra was a 'retinue of princesses (or ladies)'

10. As regards the term Kusûlâa (= Kusûlaka of the Taxila Plate), it seems to me extremely unlikely that the word is unrelated to the Kuyûla, Kuyûla, Κοζουλα applied to Kadphises and Kanishka, more especially now that the Sârânâth inscriptions have brought Kanishka into relation with the northern Satraps. The word seems to me to have been probably a title of the order of Ŝâhib, Bahâdur, and the like.

It will now be sufficient to enumerate the persons occurring in the inscriptions. These are —

(1) The family of Râjûla :—

(a) Râjûla himself with his sons Kharaôsta (Yuvarâja,² son of the Chief Queen Abûhólâ), Sudâsa (entitled Satrap), Khalama (entitled *Kumâra*³), and Maja (entitled Kanishka),—the two last also being possibly children of the Chief Queen Abûhólâ—and his daughter Hana

(2) Five other, probably princely, persons Kâlûi, Naulûdô, Kâmûiô, Âyimisa, Khalasamušo. These were perhaps relatives of Râjûla

(3) Friendly satraps, namely Kusûlâa Pâdika, Mevaki Miyika,³ K(r)ônina, Khaddaa, Tachhila (Rachhila).

(4) A Buddhist âchârya, named Buddhila (Budhila), and a second (perhaps identical with the former), named Buddhadêva

² On this and other similar titles see M. Lévi's article in the Journal Asiatique, Sér. IX Vol XIX p 95 ff

³ The name of a satrap Meraza is traced by Prof. Rapson on a coin (J. R. A. S 1894, p 548)

The inscriptions supply in themselves no means of dating. But the style of the monument of which they celebrate the foundation seems to have been strongly Persian. This is in favour of an early date; but for a definite determination of it we must continue to rely upon the more or less contemporary Taxila plate belonging to the year 78 (in the reign) of the Great King Mōga, who is usually placed (see Rapson, Indian Coins, § 29) as early as 120 B. C.

TRANSLATION.

By the Chief Queen of the Great Satrap Rājūla, daughter of Āyasi Kômūsā, mother of the Heir Apparent Kharaōsta, Nandasi-Akasā (by name), together with her mother Abûhōlâ, her paternal grandmother Pispasi, her brother Hayuarâ (?), her daughter Hana, her household and court of horakās (ladies), a relic was deposited in this piece of land in a stûpa with the thought : 'May it be for the eternal of the Holy Śākya sage Buddha.' And the stûpa and the monastery are for the acceptance of the universal Sangha of the Sarvāstivādins.

NOTES.

Genealogy.—The scheme appears to be as follows :—

Readings.—L 1. The additional stroke in the tra, if not accidental, may denote a doubling. At least I learn from Prof. Rapson that a (cross) stroke is used in the Stein documents for that purpose.

L 2, agga with a cross stroke; ma in mahēshi has the original form with a subscribed angle, shri has the otiose r-stroke found elsewhere.

L 3, te in dhite is quite clear; it must be due to an error, as the regular form of tra occurs several times in the inscription.

L 4 Is the side stroke in the r of kharaōstasa accidental, or does it possibly represent h? See p 138 above. It occurs in the place, though not with the shape, of aspiration in other consonants

L 5 No doubt namdasi should be read, on the analogy of the other names. But the lower stroke of the akshara is curtailed (being at the edge of the stone) in such a way as to produce the appearance of the cursive da in Bühler's Table, col viii. After sa nothing can be clearly seen on the stone. The analogy of the other names would lead us to expect -saā. On the ta in mātā see p 137 above.

L 8 From what nominative form the instrumental Hayuarānā is to be derived is not obvious.

L 9, a[m]teurēna presents a case, rare in these inscriptions, of disappearance of a medial consonant. The only other cases are (1) saīpāē for saīvatē, l 13 (if that is the correct reading), (2) k in nākraraassa and māhāsamghāna; and (3) kharaassa. As in general the medial consonants are sharpened rather than weakened, this seems to show a mixture of dialects. On the word hōrakā see p 140 above.

L 11, nisime Bühler takes this as denoting a stūpa, and he quotes Professor Pischel's view that it is a Prākṛit form of mhsama, used in the sense of 'high', hence = stūpa. The word is certainly a substantive and the name of a manufactured object, as appears from the phrase nisimō kārīta niyātītō in inscription J, but in point of etymology it may perhaps be related to the nissimamālaka of the Mahāvamsa, c xxxii rannō śarīram jhāpēsum yasmin nissimamālaka.

L 13 The last akshara is doubtful, and it is indeed possible to question whether any sign is intended after vi. Bühler's reading bhūsati is out of the question. We must apparently take bhūsā as a strange optative form.

L 12 The sign for tō is, owing to misplacement of the vowel stroke, that usually in these inscriptions denoting tra. I do not detect a sign for r.

L 6 Whether mātā or mātrā is inscribed I cannot determine.

L 7, tra is clear in pitra, and sri in Pispasri.

L 9 The second akshara resembles tra more than anything else, if it is really tō (which in any case must be meant), the sign for ē is added to the earlier form of ta.

L 13. Bühler's reading mukihitāya. The first akshara is certainly not mu, but might be mra, unless it is simply ma, and the third is far from being an ordinary hi, the expression Buddhasya mukihitāya does not present an orthodox appearance.

L 15, śē seems clear, compare śē in l 10.

Grammar and interpretation — L 1, ś in Rājūla is supported by the J, La, etc., of the coins.

L 2 It is doubtful whether mahēshi Āyasi° or mahēshiā Yasi° is to be read. In the former case we have an omission (or postponement) of the sign of declension, as in pitōmahī l 7. It would however not be entirely out of the question to take pratiḥāvitō as an active participle with the subject mātā in the nominative and a false concord. Bühler observes (p 535) that 'pratiḥāvitō is the nenter, as frequently in the śālagarhi version of the Rock-Edicts'. We may compare imam katarō in Edict XI. Generally however in cases parallel to the present (e.g. in

NOTES.

Bühler read Jalama^o in l 2, but the akṣhara seems to be a kha. He also regarded kumārā(t)maja as a single word. The last line is uncertain, but I may perhaps suggest that the cross stroke in mō is accidental, in which case we may understand the words samānā mātā as indicating that the three sons named were uterine brothers. Bühler's reading chha is by no means borne out by inspection.

He belongs to Nāgara, no doubt the famous city of Nāgarahāra (but see Watter's Yuan Chwang, Vol I. p 184 ff., 201 and ref.) Concerning the remaining persons see the introductory remarks. - 1 viya rva palishte (??) na
 2 nissamo karita niyatito [nissimo kārita niyyātītō].

These three inscriptions present the most difficult problems of all those inscribed on the capital. They are written in aksharas of approximately the same size. As M. has no verb (unless we here make use of the -krakārta (?) of E²), we should naturally expect it to be in connection with one of the others. It certainly seems to join the *vēya*³ of I 1. But here we enter upon a very obscure passage. Bühler with great ingenuity has elicited the reading vēya-udīno kadhavaro busaparo kadhavaro=vēgōdirnō skandhāvārō busaparō skandhāvārō, which he renders 'the army has started in haste, the army is intent on wealth'. But to this there are, apart from the inappropriateness of the sense, the following objections — (1) skandhāvāra does not mean 'an army,' but 'an encampment,' (2) the meaning 'riches' attached to busa is attested only by Wilson's Dictionary; (3) it is doubtful whether the third akshara is really u, it is unlike the other u's of these inscriptions and rather resembles am, while the bottom curve may even be a part of the accidental indentation in the stone (see the Plate), (4) a weakening of g to y in vēya is contrary to the tendencies of the languages employed in these inscriptions. On the other hand, the ro of I 2 plainly follows the pa of I 1, and a reading veyaamānān kadhavaro=varjayanīnām skandhāvārō appears but little promising. The viya which precedes the large rvā in J. 1 is in small characters and no doubt an independent addition. Can it possibly be an insertion to show that the large rva, which apparently joins on to nothing, is an error for vya=viya? The sign which Bühler renders by skś (reproduced in his Indian Palæography, Plate I col. xiii), is quite clearly inscribed; but its meaning is anything but clear. It is more like rdi, which seems very unlikely. With the preceding pali (Bühler puḥ) it composes no doubt a proper name. What came before pali, occupying a space sufficient for 7 or 8 aksharas, is quite obscure owing to the stone having peeled away. We seem to have the remains of a sa; but what is to be done with the large rva commencing the line? Even adopting the suggestion that it is an error for vya we have no ground for proceeding further. The words nissimō kārta niyyātītō, 'a stūpa was caused to be made and presented,' are quite satisfactory. We have already noted the older form of ta in kārta. With these remarks I must be content so far as these inscriptions are concerned.

L 1. Buddhīla is, of course, the bhikkhu already mentioned in the inscription F. The rendering 'of Nāgara' (Bühler) seems to be the most satisfactory among the meanings of Nāgaraka, for which see the St. Petersburg Dictionary. Concerning the place probably denoted see Watter's Yuan Chwang, Vol. I. pp 184 ff, 201 and reff.

Ll. 2-3 Of the sa which Bühler inserts after gra, in order to get the word prakāsamā I can see no trace.

L. 4 The reading seems certain, the only difficulty is the word khalula. Halāsyudha gives khadūrikā in the sense of 'a military exercise-ground,' and the Atharva-Vēda has khadūra with indeterminate sense. If the rendering given above does not seem quite acceptable, we may at least find in khalula some form from the root khand, so common still in titles of controversial works. That the Māhāsānghikas were opposed to the Sarvāstivādīns Bühler has already observed. I conjecture that pramāñāvitave=prāmānyavittvē

For the honour of all Sakastāna.

The objections raised by Dr Fleet (Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1904, pp 703-9, 1905, pp 154-6) to this rendering of Bühler seem to me ineffective. As regards the presence of Sakas at Mathurā, see the introductory remarks, where it is also shown that the form of the word exactly represents the name of Sakastāna. Nor is there any difficulty in the expression of honour to the 'whole realm of the Sakas,' since we find in the Wardak inscription (and elsewhere, e.g. in the inscriptions of Sue Vihār, Anyor, and various Mathurā inscriptions, which have regard to the 'good and happiness of all living creatures,' sarvasattvānām) even more comprehensive expressions, nor again is there any difficulty in the use of sarsa (uncompounded) with the meaning 'whole' (see the St Petersburg Dictionary). As regards svaka, 'one's own,' (a common word), and the Pāli sakaṭṭhāna, 'one's own place (home, etc),' it may be remarked that, while it is natural to say, as in the passages cited by Dr Fleet, 'he went to his own home,' etc., it seems less natural to inscribe on the stone 'honour to (somebody's) own home,' etc. [This inscription has been recently discussed by M Barth, Comptes Rendues de l'Académie, 1907, pp 384 ff, with his accustomed perspicacity. I am, however, unable to admit that the name of a donor is required here any more than in the inscriptions G and O. A pūjā addressed to a country is certainly unusual, but inscription G. contains a similar pūjā addressed to the chief representatives of the Saka dominion.]

No. 18.— MOUNT ABU VIMALA TEMPLE INSCRIPTION
OF [VIKRAMA-] SĀMVAT 1378.

By PROFESSOR F. KIELHORN, C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

In 1828 H. H. Wilson, in As. Res Vol XVI p 284 ff., published an account of the inscriptions on the mountain Arbuda, the modern Mount Âbū in the Sirohi State of Rājputāna, from copies presented to the Asiatic Society of Bengal by Captain Speirs, Political Agent at Sirohi. In that account Prof Wilson gave full translations of one of the two large inscriptions at the temple of Nēminātha, the texts of which were first published in 1883 by Mr. A. V. Kāthavate, and which have now been edited, with facsimiles, by Prof. Lüders, above, Vol. VIII. p 200 ff., of the Guhila inscription in the neighbourhood of the temple of Achalēsvara, edited by myself in Ind Ant Vol XVI p 347 ff.,¹ and of the Achalēsvara temple inscription of which I have treated above, p. 79 ff.² Of other inscriptions only short abstracts of the contents were given, apparently based on an account in Hindi that had been drawn up by a native scholar.

For many years afterwards little³ was done for the study of the Mount Âbū inscriptions. But in the cold season of 1900-01 Mr. Consens, Superintendent of the Archaeological Survey of India, Western Circle, while staying at Âbū, had impressions (or, in a few cases, eye-copies) prepared of all inscriptions which are now found on the mountain; and by sending them to the Government Epigraphist he for the first time has placed at our disposal trustworthy materials for a critical examination of these records. Most of these inscriptions are very short; none of them go back beyond the middle of the 11th century A.D.; and considering their great number, the data furnished by them for the political history of the country are disappointingly few. In other respects, some are of considerable interest and well deserve to be made more generally accessible, while a good many contain some name, or expression, or date, or perhaps only some mark or letter, which, unimportant as it may seem at first sight, may prove of use on a future occasion.

The number of the inscriptions in Mr Consens' collection, which has been sent to me by Prof Hultzsch, is 298, of which 270 are ink-impressions and 28 eye-copies only. Of the total number, 148 are from the temple of Rishabhā (Ādinātha) which was founded by Vimala,⁴ 97 from the temple of Nēminātha, founded by Tējapāla,⁵ 30 from the temple of Achalēsvara, and 13 from other localities. Of the Vimala temple inscriptions 126 are dated, the earliest date being of the [Vikrama] year 1119 (about A.D. 1062), in a short inscription (No 1780 of Mr Consens' list) of a minister of the Chaulukya Bhīmadēva I, and the latest (in No 1874) of the [Vikrama] year 1785 (about A.D. 1728), between the two, the years which most

² Prof. Wilson also gave a translation of the inscription of the Vikrama year 1265, published by Dr Cartallieri in Ind Ant. Vol XI p 221 ff., the original of which is now at the town of Sirohi, see Progress Report of the Archaeol Survey of India, W Circle, for 1905-1906, p 47.

frequently occur are the Vikrama years 1245 (22 times) and 1378 (25 times). Of the inscriptions at Têjahpâla's temple 77 are dated, and here the earliest dates are of the Vikrama year 1287 (about A D 1230), the very year in which the temple was founded, while the latest date (in No 1748) is one of the [Vikrama] year 1911 (about A D 1854), no less than 47 inscriptions are dated between the Vikrama years 1287 and 1297, and 9 between 1346 and 1389. Of the 30 inscriptions at the temple of Achalêśvara 22 are dated. Here the earliest inscription appears to be one (No 1950), unfortunately almost entirely effaced, of the [Vikrama] year 1186 (about A D 1129), and another (No 1941) seems to contain a date in the [Vikrama] year 1191. What I consider to be certain is, that No 1951 of Mr Cousens' List is dated in the [Vikrama] year 1207 (about A D 1150), in the reign of the [Paramâra] Mahâmandalêśvara Yaśôdhavaladêva (a feudatory of the Chaulukya Kumârapâla, an inscription of whom is dated in the same year)¹ Two other inscriptions (Nos 1945 and 1946) are dated in the [Vikrama] years 122[5] and 122[8], the rest in 1377 and later years. Regarding the 13 remaining inscriptions, it will suffice to say that the Guhila inscription mentioned above (No 1953 of the List) is dated in the [Vikrama] year 1342, and that the dates which occur in others are of later years.

Of the inscriptions at the temple of Nêminâtha, the two largest and most important, together with 30 shorter ones, have been edited from Mr Cousens' materials by Prof Lüders, above, Vol. VIII p 200 ff. I now give the text of an inscription of the [Vikrama] year 1378, which is at the temple of Rishabha, and the chief point of interest in which is the statement that that temple was founded in the Vikrama year 1088 (about A D 1031) by a certain Vimala, who had been appointed dandapati at Arbuda by [the Chaulukya] Bhîmadêva [I.]

Before I proceed to describe the inscription, I may state that the date here given for the foundation of the temple is known to us also from other sources. In Ind Ant Vol XI p 243, the late Dr Klatt gave an extract from a Pañtâvali of the Kharatara-gachchha, according to which 'the minister Vimala, who belonged to the Pôravâda (Prâgvâta) family, and who broke the parasols of thirteen Sultâns and established the town of Chandrâvatî, caused a temple of Rishabhadêva to be built on the mountain Arbuda — a temple which even now is known by the name Vimala-vasatî,' and which, it is added, was consecrated by Vardhamâna-sûri in the year 1088. The same story, with the same date, is more fully given in the extracts in Prof Weber's Catalogue of the Berlin MSS, Vol II pp 1036 and 1037, where we are moreover told that, to obtain from the Brâhmanas the ground on which he intended to build the temple, Vimala had to cover it with gold coins, and that he expended 18 crores and 53 lacs (185,300,000) in the building of the temple. And the date also occurs in an interesting extract from Jinaprabhasûri's Tirthakalpa, in Prof Peterson's Fourth Report, p 92 f. There, again, the Vikrama year 1088 is given² for the foundation of the Vimala-vasatî, and 1288 for that of the Lâniga-vasatî,³ and it is also stated that, when the two temples had been demolished or damaged (bhagna) by the Mlêchchhas, they were repaired in the Śaka year 1243 (i.e. the Vikrama year 1378), the first by Lalla, the son of Mahanasimha, and the other by Pithada, the son of the merchant Chandasimha. We shall see below that our inscription actually records the restoration, in 1378, of Vimala's temple by Lalla (Lâlga), the son of Mahanasimha, and

² So far as I can see, there is something wrong in the verses 39 and 40, as given by Prof Peterson, but regarding the date of the construction of the Vimala-vasatî there can be no doubt.

Vijāda, the son of Dhanasīmha, and the name of the person who repaired the temple of Tējabpāla (the Lūnya-vasatī) is given as Pēthada in an inscription¹ at that temple, the full text of which is.—

The inscription with which we are more immediately concerned here⁵ is on a black slab, built into the side wall of a shrine in the corridor of Vimala's temple. It contains 30 lines of writing which cover a space between 1' 7½" and 1' 8" broad by 1' 1½" high, but of which only the first 22 lines extend over the full breadth of this space; lines 23-29 are only 1' 5½" long and line 30 (which contains merely a date) only 3½". The greater part of the writing is well preserved, but in line 16 about 10 akṣaras and in line 17 about 4 akṣaras are effaced, and in some places the writing is difficult to read, mainly, as it seems to me, because the letters have been formed carelessly and are so close to one another that they have not come out clearly in the ink-impression at my disposal.⁶ The size of the letters is between ¼" and ⅜". The characters are Nāgarī. The language is Sanskrit, and, with the exception of the words ōm || śrī-Arbudatīrtha-prasasti-rīkhyatē || at the commencement, the words atha rājāvalī || in line 9, and the date in line 30, the text is in verse, the number of verses being 42. In respect of orthography only few remarks are necessary. There are separate signs for the letters b and v, and the sign for the former has been wrongly employed also for v in sarbaḥṇā, l. 16, and saṇbhavaḥ, l. 21. The palatal sibilant is used instead of the dental in manasvī, l. 4, sāmha- (for simha-), l. 6, and sahasrē, l. 8, and the dental instead of the palatal in nivēsitam, l. 8, pesala-, l. 18, and śasi-,⁷ l. 29. Instead of the vowel ṛ we have the syllable ṛ in Rishabha, ll. 26 and 29, and in line 24 the author himself has written śaḍ-arttavaḥ instead of śaḍ-ṛitavaḥ, which would not have suited the metre.⁸ What is more interesting is, that in line 4 we find nripaśa for nripasya, and in line 21 vadāḥṇū instead of vadānyā. The latter reminds us of the name Nyānaśakti (instead of Jñānaśakti) in Ind Ant Vol XIII. p. 93, l. 26, and shows that in Rājputāna as well as in the Kanarese country there could have been hardly any difference in pronunciation between ḥṇā and nyā; and nripaśa recalls taśa and similar genitive cases of far more ancient inscriptions,⁹ without, of course, proving more than that the pronunciation of ś must have been similar to that of the conjunct śy. In respect of grammar I need draw attention only to the word vidadhāna, in line 3, the reading of which is certain, and which the author undoubtedly has used as a 3rd person singular of the Perfect of vi-dhā (instead of vidadhē), probably misled by the participle vidadhāna which was more familiar to him than the proper verbal form.¹⁰ Though the writer or engraver in some places has done his work carelessly, I believe that, with the exception of what has been entirely effaced

⁶ When my text was finished, I was able to compare impressions kindly sent to me by Mr. Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha and by the Government Epigraphist, which in one or two places where there had been some doubt confirmed the correctness of my readings.

and of perhaps the last words of verse 21, the original text may everywhere be restored with confidence

The object of the inscription is, to record that in the [Vikrama] year 1378 two persons, Lalla (Lāḷiga) and Viṣaḍa, for the spiritual welfare of their parents repaired the temple of Rishabha (Ādinātha) on the mountain Arbuda. And the inscription is divided into three parts. The first part (verses 1-13) is a prastāvi or eulogy of the sacred Arbuda, but besides glorifying that locality and some mythical or divine beings (Ambikā and Śrīmātā) residing there, it also gives a few historical details connected with it, and especially records the foundation, in the Vikrama year 1088, of the temple of Ādinātha by Vimala. The second part (vv. 14-23) contains a riṣāvali of the chiefs who at the time of the restoration of the temple were in possession of the mountain. And the third part (vv. 24-38) gives an account of the family of the men by whom the temple was repaired. The concluding verses (39-42) record the name and spiritual lineage of the priest or teacher who consecrated the restored building, and the exact date when he did so.

To omit what is of no historical interest, the first part begins with the well-known story how on the mountain Arbuda there sprang from the fire-pit (anala-kunda, agni-kunḍa) of the sage Vasishṭha the hero Paramāra. In his lineage appeared the hero Kāṇhadadēva; and in his family there was a chief named Dhandhu (Dhandhurāja), who was lord of the town of Chandrāvati and who, averse from rendering homage to the [Chaulukya] king Bhīmadēva [I] and to escape that king's anger, took refuge with king Bhōja, the lord of Dhārā. The author then, rather abruptly, tells us that in the Prāgvāta family there was a distinguished personage named Vimala in whom religion, immersed in darkness through the wickedness of the times, suddenly shone forth again in its splendour. He was appointed by king Bhīma dandapati (commander of the forces or governor) at Arbuda, and there one night was enjoined by the divine Ambikā to build on the mountain a beautiful dwelling for the Yūgādibhartṛi (Yūgādijina, Ādinātha). That Vimala obeyed the request the author intimates in the verse: "I adore the holy Ādinātha who was placed on the top of Arbuda by the glorious Vimala, when one thousand and eighty-eight years had passed since (the time of) the glorious king Vikramāditya."

The chief Dhandhu or Dhandhurāja, spoken of in the preceding paragraph, apparently is the Pramāra (or Paramāra) Dhandhuka mentioned above, p. 11, whose son Pūrnapāla ruled the Arbuda territory in the Vikrama years 1099 and 1102¹. He would of course have been a contemporary of both the Chaulukya Bhīmadēva I. and the Paramāra Bhōjadēva of Mālava — Vimala's name occurs in another inscription at his own temple, dated in the Vikrama year 1201. That inscription,² No. 1767 of Mr. Cousens' List, contains 10 lines of writing which covers a space about 2' 6" long by 5½" high, and contains 17 verses. In the ink-impression the first two lines of it cannot be read with any confidence, but so far as I can see, a man is spoken of in them who belonged to the Śrīmāla kula and was an ornament of the Prāgvāta vaṁśa. His son was Lahadha, who was somehow connected with the king Māla (= the Chaulukya Mālarāja I) and was also known by the name Vira-mahattama. Lahadha had two sons. The first of them was the minister Nēḍha, and the second Vimala, who in verse 7 is described thus:—

yēn=ēdam=uchchair=bhavasimdhushētukalpam vinirmāpitam=atra vēśma ||

² According to Mr. Cousens the inscription is over the doorway of cell No. 10 in the corridor of Vimala's temple. It is referred to in As. Res. Vol. XVI p. 311, in the words: "One inscription bears date S. 1201, but as nothing else is decipherable, it is of no further value."

Nêdha's son was Lâliga ; his son was the minister Mahiduka,¹ and he again had two sons, Hêma and Daśaratha. And the object of the inscription is, to record that Daśaratha at the temple of Rishabha set up an image of Nêmjînêsa (Nêmitîrthakara, i.e. Nêminâtha), which was installed on Friday, the first tithi of Jyêshtha of the Vikrama year 1201, corresponding to Friday, the 5th May A.D. 1144. I may add that the genealogy here given is for the greater part corroborated by another inscription at Vimala's temple, No. 1768 of Mr Cousens' List,² the full text of which is —

For us the main point of interest is the date which the first of the two inscriptions furnishes for Daśaratha, for that date, being of the Vikrama year 1201, shows that Vimala, the younger brother of Daśaratha's great-grandfather Nêdha, may well have lived in the Vikrama year 1088, the traditional date for the foundation of his temple.

The contents of the second part of our inscription (verses 14-23) I have already given above, p 81 f. This râjavalî in verse 14 commences with Âsarâja, who belonged to the Châhuvâma (Châhuvâna, Châhamâna) family and was king of the town of Nadûla (Naddûla). After him came Samarasimha; and his son was Mahanasimhabhata (v 15). Then came Pratâpamalla; and to him was born Vijada, the lord of the Marusthali mandala (v. 16). He had three sons, the first of whom was the king Lûniga (v 17). Verse 18 then eulogizes Lundha 'who like a god of death devoured the host of adversaries,' and verse 19 Lumbha, of whom verse 20 records that he conquered the mountain Arbuda, and that, after having ruled the earth, he became the lord of heaven (i.e. died). Verse 21 then eulogizes Têjasimha, the son of Lûniga; verse 22 wishes long life to Tihunâka; and the mutilated verse 23 appears to say that Lumbhaka together with Têjasimha and Tihuna (śrīmal-Lumbhaka-nâmâ samanvitas=Têjasimha-Tihunâbhyâm) in right manner carried on the government of the mountain Arbuda.

Regarding the first part of this râjavalî, as far as Vijada, there can be no doubt, and I have nothing to add to what I have previously said about it. A difficulty arises concerning the sons of Vijada. According to the inscription of Luntagadêva, above, p 80, Vijada, who is also called Daśasyandana (Daśaratha), had four sons — Lâvanyakarna, Lundha (Luntiga), Lakshmana, and Lûnavarman, of whom Lâvanyakarna is distinctly called the eldest (jyêshtha). According to the present inscription Vijada had three sons the first (âdya) of whom was Lûniga. After Lûniga the inscription mentions Lundha and Lumbha, without saying that they were his younger brothers or in any way specifying their relationship. In my account of Luntagadêva's inscription I have identified Lûniga with Lâvanyakarna, and have taken Lundha and Lumbha to be the names of his brothers, identifying Lundha with Lundha (Luntiga) and Lumbha with Lûnavarman. Other inscriptions are sure to be discovered which will show whether I am right or wrong. In the meantime I feel bound to state that my friend Mr Ojha, than whom nobody is better acquainted with the history of his country, takes the three names Lûniga, Lundha and Lumbha (Lumbhaka) to denote one and the same person, and to be all Sanskritized forms of Lumbhâ, denoting a chief 'commonly called राव लुंभा, the famous conqueror of Ābū.' If my learned friend should be right, the last lines of the genealogical Table published above, p 83, would of course have to be slightly altered. Mr Ojha agrees with me in considering Tihupāka (Tihuna) to be a younger brother of Tējasimha, but from his point of view places both, together with Tējasimha's son Kāṇhadadēva, under Luptiga (Lundha, Lūniga, Lumbha). At the time when our inscription was composed, in the Vikrama year 1378, Lumbha was dead, and the government of Ābū must have been actually carried on by Tējasimha.

The account, which forms the third part of our inscription (verses 24-38), of the family of the two men (Lalla and Vijada) who restored the temple, contains little more than a list of names which may be seen from the following Table —

Genealogical Table.

The individuals mentioned in this Table were devotedly attached to the Jaina faith. Jēlhā, the founder of the family, was a merchant, and his guru was Dharmasūri¹. His place of residence was given in the inscription, but the name has been effaced. Of Dēsala it is said that he made fourteen processions to the seven sacred places,² Śatrumjaya and the rest. The other members of the family are eulogized in general terms.

There are at Vimala's temple several short inscriptions of members of this family, likewise dated in the [Vikrama] year 1378. And there is a longer inscription¹ of the same family, No. 1791 of Mr. Cousens' List, which is dated, in words and figures, in the Vikrama year 1309. This inscription contains 25 lines of writing with 15 verses, and records the installation, by Ānandasūri, of an image of Nēmiyina (Nēminātha) at Vimala's vasahikā. We learn from it that the family belonged to the Ūkē[śa] vaṃśa,² and that its founder, Jēlhāka, as he is there called, was an inhabitant of Māndavyapura (Mandor). After Kuladhara it mentions five sons of his, but as the text is partly effaced, I am not at present prepared to give their names from the ink-impression at my disposal.

The remaining verses (39-42) of our inscription record that Rishabha was installed (or rather re-installed) on the mountain Arbuda by the guru or sūri Jñānachandra, on a date in the [Vikrama] year 1378. Regarding the spiritual lineage of Jñānachandra, we learn that he was preceded by Amaraprabhasūri, and that the founder of the lineage was Dharmasūri, also called Dharmaghōsha-gaṇāryaman, i.e. Dharmaghōsha, 'the sun of the gana,' 'who defeated Vādichandra and Gunachandra, and caused the awakening of three kings.' Other inscriptions of the [Vikrama] year 1378 speak of Jñānachandra either as being in the paṭṭa of Dharmasūri³ or as being in the paṭṭa of Dharmaghōshasūri,⁴ and an undated inscription, No. 1796 of Mr. Cousens' List, commences with the words Śrīmad-Dharmaghōshasūri-paṭṭe śrī-Āna(na)mdasūri-śrī-Amaraprabhasūri-paṭṭe śrī-Jñānachandrasūri. The Ānandasūri of the last must be the Ānandasūri mentioned above with a date in the Vikrama year 1309; and the Ānandasūri and Amaraprabhasūri of the inscription apparently are the Ānandasūri and his disciple Amaraprabhasūri who, according to Prof. Peterson's Fifth Report, p. 110, l. 1, are mentioned in a manuscript written by Amaraprabhasūri's advice in the [Vikrama] year 1344. Before Ānandasūri there is mentioned, ibid p. 109, Dharmasūri (a disciple of Śīlabhadrasūri of the Rāja-gachchha), who to the pride of conceited disputants was what the lion's roar is to an elephant, and who put an end to the intoxication of the king Vighraha. And the same person is mentioned, under the name Dharmaghōshasūri, in Prof. Peterson's Third Report, App pp. 15 and 307, where he is represented as enlightening the king of Śākambhari; and ibid p. 262, where he is said to have defeated disputants in the presence of the king of the Sapādalaksha country. From all this there can be no doubt that, of the three kings who in our inscription are spoken of as having been awakened by Dharmasūri, one was a king Vighraharāja of Śākambhari (the capital of the Sapādalaksha country). In fact, I believe that that king is identical with Visaladēva-Vighraharāja, whose Delhi Siwālik pillar inscriptions (No. 144 of my Northern List) are dated in the Vikrama year 1220 (in A.D. 1164), and that Dharmaghōshasūri himself is a person of that name who in a short Vimala temple inscription (No. 1906 of Mr. Cousens' List) is mentioned with a date in the [Vikrama] year 1226 (in A.D. 1170). Who the two other kings were I do not know; nor have I identified yet Vādichandra⁵ and Gunachandra who were defeated by Dharmasūri.

The date given in verse 42 is Monday, the ninth tithi of the dark half (śitī) of Jyēsthā in the year made up of the vasus (8), the munis (7), the gunas (3) and the moon (1), i.e. the [Vikrama] year 1378. Here there is the difficulty that the word śitī, which I have translated by 'the dark half,' might equally well denote 'the bright half'; and at first sight the latter interpretation might really seem to be preferable, because in line 30 of our text the date is repeated in the words 1379 Jyēshtha-sudi 9 Sōmā. But against this it has to be said that in four independent inscriptions (Nos 1771, 1821, 1829 and 1904 of Mr. Cousens' List) we have saṃvat (or saṃ) 1378 varshā Jyēshtha-vadi 9 Sōma-dinā (or Sōmā), which evidently is the same date as the one given in our inscription. And besides, for the bright half of Jyāishtha the date would be quite incorrect for 1378 (as a Chaitrādī current or expired, or Kārttikādī expired year), whereas for the dark half of the pūrnimānta Jyāishtha of the expired Kārttikādī Vikrama year 1378 it regularly corresponds to Monday, the 10th May A.D. 1322. For these reasons I regard my translation of the date to be correct and take Monday, the 10th May A.D. 1322 to be its proper equivalent; and I consider the way in which the date has been repeated in line 30 (where '1379' under any circumstances would be suspicious) to be due to a mistake

⁵ There is a Vādichandra who composed the Jñānasūryōdaya, I do not know whether he is the man mentioned in our inscription.

⁶ Originally yamtu* was engraved

⁷ Originally sa was engraved, but it seems to have been changed to saḥ.—So far as I can see, the verse does not admit of a proper construction. In the three first Pādas the author addresses the Jaina Tirthamkara Rishabha, in terms which would be equally applicable to the god Śiva; and, as the text stands, he then in the fourth Pāda speaks of him in the third person, in words which would literally mean 'may he day by day put forth sprouts for (our) religious merit'. Instead of pallavayatu I should have expected pallavaya, followed by an accusative case and generally words to some such effect as 'cause our devotion to thee to sprout for our religious merit' (Compare Śātruhjaya-māhātmya XIV 33: iddṛṣṭānām hi sadbhakti-vally-evaṃ pallavaty-apī). In the first Pāda I take vṛishabhāstō-sī to be equivalent to both Vṛishabha, astō-sī and vṛishabhāstō-sī, so that the Pāda would mean both 'O Vṛishabha (Rishabha) having chosen this mountain for your residence, you are seated (here),' and 'you (O Śiva I), who have taken the name Āchala, are seated on a bull'. I am aware that Rishabha has a bull for his cognisance, and that in representations of him this animal is figured beneath him; but I am not sure that he could be described as 'seated on a bull'.—In the second Pāda gaṇādhipati denotes both Puṇḍarika, the leader of Rishabha's gana, and Gaṇēśa.

⁸ Metre of verses 2 and 3 Upajāti.

¹⁰ Read Vasīkṣhā; the same wrong reading we have below, in line 9.—With anala-kunda compare agav-kunda in Ep Ind Vol I p 234, v 5

¹³ Metre Upēndravajrā.

¹⁴ Read -diti

POSTSCRIPT.

On the Chāhamānas of Naddūla.

As I have referred in the preceding to the Genealogical Table of the Chāhamānas of Naddūla published above, p. 83, I take the opportunity to state that Mr Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha has recently sent me rubbings of four inscriptions, two of which furnish a date in the [Vikrama] year 1147 for the chief Jōjalla (Yōjaka), here called Jōjala, while the two others are of the reign of Rāyapāla of Naddūla, whose name does not occur in the Table, and for whom they furnish dates in the [Vikrama] years 1198 and 1200. The rubbings do not enable me to edit the full texts of these inscriptions, but the initial lines, which contain the dates and the names of the chiefs, may be given with confidence.

1 — This inscription is at Sādri (about 13 miles south of Nadol) in the Gōdwār district of the Jōdhpur State. It contains 11 lines of writing and commences —

2 — This inscription is at Nadol. It contains 13 lines of writing and commences —

The date of these two inscriptions regularly corresponds, for the expired Kārttikādi Vikrama year 1147, to Wednesday, the 23rd April A.D. 1091, when the 2nd tithi of the bright half ended 16 h 26 m after mean sunrise

3 — This also is at Nadol. It contains 39 lines of writing and commences —

 2 hārājā[dhirāja]-śrī-Rāyapālādēvaḥ³ kalyāna-vija[ya]-

The date corresponds either, for the pūrnimānta Śrāvana of the expired Chaitrādi Vikrama year 1198, to Sunday, the 29th June A.D. 1141, when the 8th tithi of the dark half ended 3 h. 11 m after mean sunrise; or, for the amānta Śrāvana of the expired Kārttikādi Vikrama year 1198, to Sunday, the 16th August A.D. 1142, when the 8th tithi of the dark half ended 11 h. 20 m. after mean sunrise. As the date of the following inscription is correct only for the amānta month, I here, too, take Sunday, the 16th August A.D. 1142, to be the true equivalent of the date

4 — This also is at Nadol. It contains 8 lines of writing and commences —

- L 1 Ōm¹ || Samvat 1200 Bhādrapada-vadi 8 Budha-vārē ady²-ēha śrī-

 4 vam kālē pravarttamānē

The date, for the amānta Bhādrapada of the expired Kārttikādi Vikrama year 1200, corresponds to Wednesday, the 23rd August A.D. 1144, when the 8th tithi of the dark half ended 16 h 52 m after mean sunrise

In the Table Rāyapāla (A.D. 1142 and 1144) would have to be placed between Jōjalla (A.D. 1091) and Ālhana (A.D. 1153-1161), and it is probable that he was the immediate predecessor of the latter; but how he was related to either of them it is impossible to say at present

I may add that Mr Ojha has also been good enough to send me some notes on the identification of Kāsahrada and Naddūlāī, spoken of by me above, pp 73 and 67. On the former, which I suspected to be somewhere near Nadol, he writes —

“I would identify Kāsahrada with Kāyadrām (also called Kāsadrām) at the foot of Mount Âbū, about 3 miles from the Bhūmānā station of the R. M. Railway. It is a place of considerable antiquity with several old temples. An inscription of the time of the Paramāra prince Dhāravaraha was discovered there by me some years ago”

And respecting Naddūlāī, which I had taken to be a different place from Naddūla, he says —

“As you think, it is quite different from Naddūla. It is now called Nārālāī, and is situated in the Gōdwār district of the Jōdhpur State. An inscription from the place is published in Bhāvnagar Inscr. p. 140 (where the date given is incorrect³).”

No 19.—INSCRIPTIONS FROM THE BASTAR STATE.

By HIRA LAL, B.A., M R.A.S., NAGPUR.

Mr. Cousens in the Annual Report of the Archaeological Survey of India, 1903-04 (p. 54) opens his report on the conservation of antiquarian remains in the Central Provinces with the remarks that 'the Central Provinces and Berâr cannot be said to be rich in antiquarian remains,' but 'possibly there exists many an old relic of considerable interest lying hidden away in some of the extensive jungles and little known tracts in the province, that has not come under the notice of any one capable of estimating its value' Exactly from such a place do I draw the materials for the subject I propose to notice on Bastar is a feudatory state in the extreme south of the province situated between 17° 46' and 20° 14' north latitude and 80° 15' and 82° 15' east longitude, touching the Gôdâvarî and comprising an area of 13,000 square miles, all covered with dense forests and populated by the wildest tribes, some of whom did not till very recently know the use of clothes. This extensive jungle has been made to yield no less than 22 inscriptions¹ through the strenuous efforts of my friend Mr Baijnath, B.A., Superintendent of the Bastar State. Three of these inscriptions were noticed by Colonel Glasfurd, Deputy Commissioner of the then Upper Gôdâvarî District, about the year 1862 A.D.² So far as is known, only one of them has been published, viz, the so-called Nâgpur Museum inscription of Sômesvara³ On the authority of the information supplied by the Curator of the Nâgpur Museum it is there stated that the stone was brought from a village, Kowtah, near Sironcha, which is incorrect as will presently be shown. It belonged to Bârsûr, of the Bastar State, and is an important record of the predecessors of the present line of Râjas

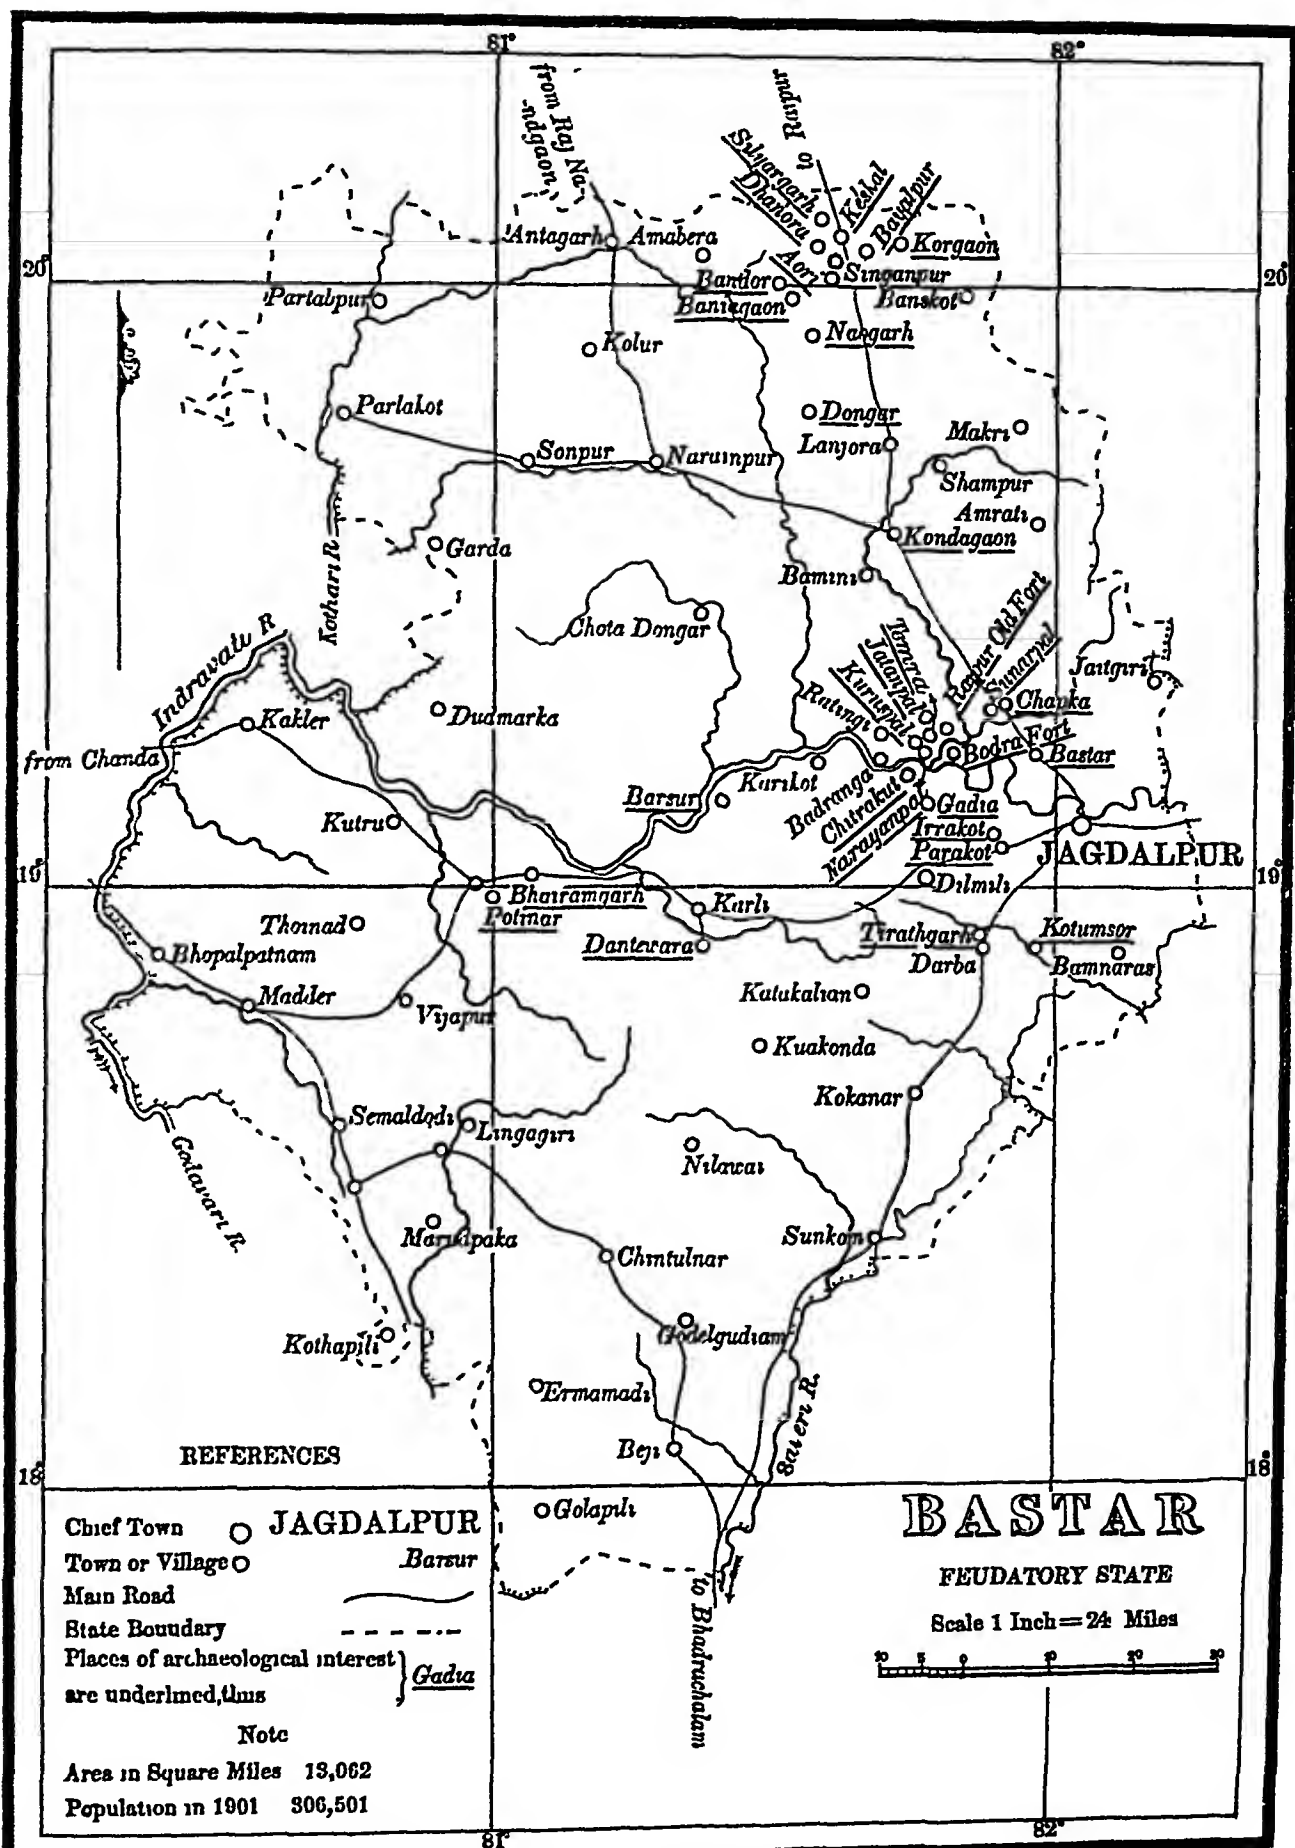

In order that the references to places in the Bastar inscriptions may be easily understood, I append a map of the State showing their positions as also some other places possessing archaeological remains. As most of the latter have never been noticed before, a brief mention of at least some of the important ones may not be out of place here. These places are Bârsûr, Dantêwârâ, Gadia, Bharamgarh, Narâyaupâl, Sunârpâl, Kuruspâl, Tirathgarh, Potinâr, Chapkâ and Dôngar

Bârsûr is a place of very great interest. It is 55 miles west of Jagdalpur, the present capital of Bastar. It contains ruins of many temples, the most important of which is a Śiva temple with two sanctuaries having a common mandapa supported on 32 pillars in four rows. In each of the sanctuaries there is a linga and a Nandi, and old people remember that an inscription was removed from this place about half a century ago. Another Śiva temple has a mandapa with 12 pillars in three rows, and the third is called Mâmâ bhâñjâ-kâ mandir and is distinguished by carvings on the inside walls in the shape of bells suspended from chains. Outside the Ganêsa temple there is a huge figure of Ganêsa, 17' in circumference and about 7' or 8' high. Numerous images are lying about or collected together under huts, of which the most noticeable is one of Vishnu, 4' high, and showing good workmanship. There are also some images of Mahishâsuramardini, one of which is inscribed. All the temples are of mediæval Brâhmanic style, most of them built of stone without lime.—Dantêwârâ is about 20 miles south of Bârsûr, and in the intervening villages there are sculptured stones lying about, some of them being five-hooded cobras or intercoiled snakes. Dantêwârâ contains the shrine of Dantêsvârî, the tutelary goddess of the present ruling family. The temple is built at the junction of two rivers called Sankhīnī and Daikīnī, and is notorious as a place where human sacrifices were formerly annually offered. At least a place was pointed out to me in the innermost sanctum, close to the goddess, where they said the victims used to be decapitated. The goddess has eight arms and is represented in the act of killing the buffalo demon. She is in reality Mahishāsūramardīnī, locally known as Dantēśvarī. There are various other images such as those of Vishnu, Kārttikēya, Ganēśa, etc., some of which were brought away from the ruins of Bārsūr. There are five inscriptions here, three inside the Dantēśvarī temple, one just outside it, and another near a mud hut called Bhairamguḍī. There are remains of several other temples buried in ruins. For the support of the Dantēśvarī temple, an estate consisting of several villages is attached — Bhairamgarh is about 70 miles west of Jagdalpur and has three or four temples, together with remains of a fort and a ditch and several tanks. There is an inscription on a pillar, and at Potinār, a village near Bhairamgarh, there is a slab¹ inscribed on four sides — Gadia is 20 miles west of Jagdalpur and has a stone temple with no idol, but built in the same style as those of Bārsūr. About 400 yards away there is a big inscription, and a linga was found buried in a brick mound — Narāyanpāl and Kuruspāl are quite close to each other, the former being situated on the river Indrāvati. Near these villages are the forts of Rājapur and Bōdrā, and not far away the beautiful falls of the Indrāvati at Chitrakūt present a magnificent appearance — Narāyanpāl is only 6 miles from Gadia and has an old temple, an image of Vishnu, and an inscription — Sunārpāl and Chapkā are within 12 miles from Narāyanpāl. Chapkā has a number of satī pillars, several of which are inscribed — Tirathgarh also contains some temples and relics — Dōngar is a place where according to custom the present Rājas go to be crowned. Here one of the queens, whose finger was chopped off by royal order and who ventured to inform her father, writing the letter with the blood so wantonly spilt, was buried alive. The pit, which is still pointed out, was once disturbed by a greedy Rāja of the same family, who also brought down the temple of Narāyanpāl and some others in search of supposed buried treasure.

I now proceed to give a short notice of each inscription of which I possess impressions, with very brief remarks where necessary, reserving a fuller account for other papers. The Bastar inscriptions may be roughly divided into three classes, viz., those of the (1) Nāgavamśī kings, (2) the Kākatīyas, and (3) miscellaneous. Of 22 yet discovered, ten belong to the 1st class, five to the 2nd, and the rest to the 3rd.

THE NĀGAVAMŚĪ INSCRIPTIONS.

I — Narāyanpāl Stone inscription of Queen Gunda-mahādēvī, the mother of Sōmēśvaradēva.

Narāyanpāl is a village 23 miles west of Jagdalpur. The inscription is on a stone slab and is in Nāgarī characters, and the language is Sanskrit. It records the grant of the village Nārāyanapura to the god Nārāyana and some land near the Khajjuri tank to the god Lōkēśvara, and it is dated in the Śaka year 1033 on Wednesday, the full moon-day of the Kārttika month in the Khara samvatsara (Śaka-nripa-kālātītē dāśa-sata-traya[s]-trims-ādhyakē Khara-samvatsarē Kārttika-purnimāsyām Budhavārē*) corresponding to 18th October 1111 A.D., and issued by Gunda-mahādēvī, the chief queen of Mahārāja Dhārāvarsha, the mother of Sōmēśvaradēva and the grandmother of Kanharadēva, who was then ruling on the death of his father (Mahārāja-Sōmēśvara-dēvasya svar(svar)gatē tēshām putrasya āsām naptuh . . . śrīmādvīra-Kanharadēvasya kalyāna-vijaya-rājyē). The dynasty claims to belong to the Nāgavamśa and the Kāśyapa gōtra, to have a tiger with a calf as their crest and to be the lords of Bhōgāvati the best of the cities (Nāgavamśōdbhava Bhōgāvati-pura-var-ēśvara savatsa-vyāghra-lāmchhana Kās(s)yapa-gōtra). At the end of the inscription the sun and moon, a cow and a calf, and a dagger and shield with a liṅga in its socket, exactly of the shape in which the Lingāyats wear them, are engraved. There is a postscript to this inscription in which it is stated that the land was given by Dhārana-mahādēvi, who was probably the widow of Sōmēśvara, as will appear further on. There can be no doubt that Nārāyanpāl is the Nārāyanapura of the inscription. A temple of Nārāyana is still standing there. The image of Vishṇu, about 2' high, canopied by a hooded snake, is exquisitely executed.

II.—Bārsūr inscription of Ganga-mahādēvi, wife of Sōmēśvaradēva.

This inscription is now in the Nāgpur Museum, and, as stated above, it has already been published.¹ It is a slab 9' 2" long, 14" broad and $3\frac{1}{2}$ " thick, broken into two pieces, the bigger one measuring $6\frac{1}{4}$ ' and the smaller one 2' 11". It is inscribed on three sides. The inscribed portion of each flat side is about $4\frac{1}{2}$ ', thus leaving half of the pillar buried underground. As the whole of the inscription could not be completed within the allotted space, the remaining portion has been inscribed on the third side, on which the writing runs to the length of 31". The stone is stated to have been brought from Kowtah near Sironcha, but the Tahsildar of Sironcha informs me that it was never sent from that place.²

The stone is indisputably from Bārsūr. Happily Col Glasfurd has given a facsimile in his report on the Dependency of Bastar. Speaking of the Bārsūr temples he says³.—"In front of this temple I found a slab with an ancient Sanskrit and Telugu inscription on both sides, part of it had been broken off and was nowhere to be found. After offering a reward and causing search to be made I had the satisfaction of obtaining it. As the Telugu is of an antiquated character, I regret to say I have not succeeded in obtaining an accurate translation of the inscription. A facsimile is appended. From what I can ascertain it would appear that the temple of Mahādēva where the slab was found was built by a Rājā Sōmēśvaradēva, a Nāgavamśi Kshatriya, in the year 1130."

The inscription is in the Telugu character, and the language is also Telugu prose, the virudāvali or titles of the king being in Sanskrit and corresponding with those in the Nārāyanpāl Sanskrit inscription. It records that Ganga-mahādēvi, the chief queen of Sōmēśvaradēva gave a village named Kēramaruka or Kēramarka to two temples of Śiva (both of which she had built) on Sunday, the 12th tithi of the bright fortnight of Phālguna in the Śaka year 1130. The two temples referred to here still exist, having one common mandapa, and from local enquiry it appears that it was from this place that Col. Glasfurd removed the slab. Although the names of the temples Virasōmēśvara and Gangādharēśvara given after the royal couple as recorded in the grant, are forgotten, a tank still remains which is called Gangāsāgar and retains the memory of the charitable queen Ganga-mahādēvi. If the Sōmēśvara of this inscription is identical with that of Nārāyanpāl, there has apparently been a mistake in engraving the date which should be 1030 and not 1130, and that is perhaps the reason why the week day does not correspond with the tithi given there, viz., the 12th of the bright fortnight of Phālguna, on a Sunday. According to Mr. Dikshit's calculations, Phālguna Śukla 12 of Śaka-Samvat 1130 ended on Wednesday. So it was concluded that the year meant was Śaka 1131 expired, in which year the tithi given in the inscription fell on a Sunday. But on calculating the week day for the same tithi in Śaka 1030 expired I find that it also fell on Sunday.¹ In the Narāyanpāl inscription it is stated that the grant of Nārāyanapura was made in Śaka 1033, in the reign of Kanharadēva, who had succeeded his father Sōmēśvaradēva on his death. And as there is nothing to show at present that there were two Sōmēśvaras,² the date 1030 fits in very well. It, however, seems somewhat extraordinary that such a palpable mistake should have been allowed to remain when it could be corrected by joining together with a curved line the two ends of the Telugu l which is like an egg half-cut (at least it is so in the inscription) thus transforming easily the second l of 1130 into a zero. I am very reluctant to suppose that the engraver committed a mistake, but that he did is patent enough in this case whether we read 1030 or 1130. The village Kēramāyuka may be identified with Kōdmalnār, which is situated quite close to Bārsūr and is said to have been mu'afi or exempt from the payment of taxes for a long time.

³ Report on the Dependency of Bastar, 1862, p 62

III —Kuruspāl inscription of Dhārana-mahādēvi, second queen(?) of Sōmēśvara.

Kuruspāl is a village about a mile off from Narāyanpāl. The inscription was found built upside down into the steps of a small tank, which shows that it did not belong to the tank itself, but was brought away from some ruins, possibly the temple built in the centre of the tank, and was utilised without regard to what was engraved on it. It is in the Nāgarī character, the language being Sanskrit with very bad spellings. The object of the inscription is to record a grant of land situated near Kalamba by Dhārana-mahādēvi, who seems to have been the second queen of Sōmēśvaradēva. The inscription belongs to the victorious reign of Mahārājādhirāja Sōmēśvaradēva (Mahārājādhirāja-Śrī-Sōmēśvaradēva-pādānu kalyāna-vijaya-rājyē . . . śrīmat-sā(mach-ahā)sana-mahādēvi dvitīya Dhārana-mahādēvi tay=ācharya Kalammva-samīpasthā bhūmi dattam(ā)). The same long virudas as in the Narāyanpāl and Bārsūr inscriptions are attached to Sōmēśvaradēva's name. The inscription also mentions the name of Nārāyanapura. It is dated in the Sautnya samvatsara.

IV.—Sunārpāl stone inscription of Mahādēvi, queen of Jayasimhadēva.

Sunārpāl is about 10 miles from Narāyanpāl. The stone is partially broken, and a part of the inscription is gone. It is undated. It records the grant of land, or, more properly, an imprecation against the resumption of granted land, and gives the names of witnesses before whom the gift was made, but it is not stated where. The gift was apparently made by Mahādēvi, the chief queen of Jayasimhadēva of the Nāga race, the supreme lord of Bhōgavati, having the tiger with a calf as his crest. He is called Rājādhirāja Mahārāja Śrī Jayasimhadēva.

V —The Dantēsvārī gudi inscription³ of Narasimhadēva.

This is another stone inscription in Telugu character found in the temple of the goddess Dantēsvārī at Dantēwārā. It is dated in the dark fortnight of the month Jyēsthā in the Śaka year 1140 (expired). In this year there was an eclipse of the sun, and the month of Jyēsthā was intercalary. At that time Mahārāja Narasimhadēva, the ornament of the race of the best of serpents, was ruling (Śrī-bhujaga-vāra-bhūshana-Mahārājul=aina Śrīman-Narasimhadēva-Mahārājula rājyamu). The inscription is only a fragment

¹ Since I wrote the above, Prof Knelhorn has kindly calculated the date for me and finds that Śaka 1030 Phālguna Sudī 12 Sunday regularly corresponds to Sunday, 14th Feb A.D 1109.

³ For reading this I am indebted to Mr. Sitaramayya, one of the Superintendents in the Comptroller's office, Central Provinces.

Of the remaining five Nāgavamśī inscriptions it has not yet been possible to obtain good impressions. They are all in Tolugu. The Potinār slab seems to refer to Narasimhadēva and the Dantōwārā stone lying outside the Dantōśvari temple to Jayasimhadēva. The Bhairamgarh inscription contains virūdas similar to those found in the Bārūr one, and the king is stated in both to be the worshipper of Mānikyadēvi (Śrī-Mānikyadēvi-dīvyā-tripāda-padm-ārādhalakā), which is an older name of Dantōśvari, so named by the successors of the Nāgavamśīs, the Kākatīyas, although the latter claim that Dantōśvari came with them from Warangal, where she was called Mānikyēśvari.¹ This inscription is incomplete and it appears that it was never completed. The Bhairamgudi inscription at Dantōwārā appears to be the oldest of all, as its date appears to be Śaka 984.² The Gadā inscription, apparently of Somavaradēva's time, contains the usual figures of the cow and calf, Sun and Moon, Śiva, etc., the peculiar signs of the Nāgavamśī kings, although they do not seem to refer to their family crests. They are all picture imprecations. The sun and moon represent that the grant is to last as long as these luminaries endure. Śiva is the protector against violation of the grant on the spiritual side, and the dagger and shield of the king on the temporal. The cow and calf depict the grave sin which the transgressor would commit, exactly equal to taking away the cow from the calf. This interpretation is supported by the fact that the Kurupāl inscription has a representation of an ass associating with a pig, the imprecation being explained in the text thus, Jō (yā) aryāḥ i karōti tasya pitā gardabhaḥ śūhārī mātā (he who acts otherwise has for his father an ass and for his mother a pig.)

From these inscriptions it would appear that Bastar, which has been held to have always been the home of wild animals, with almost wilder tribes, was once ruled by a people whose civilization is sufficiently evidenced by the remains of temples, some of which are of great architectural beauty. These inscriptions carry the history of Bastar back to the eleventh century A.D., when at least the central portion of the State was ruled by the Nāgavamśī kings. They apparently belonged to the Sinda family of Yelburga, whose titles are strikingly identical with those of the Bastar Nāgavamśī kings. Dr Fleet states³ that there appear to have been more branches than one of this family. One of these was that of Bastar, which has been hitherto unknown. These inscriptions disclose the names of five or six different kings, viz., Dhāravarsha, his son Sōmēśvaradēva, and his grandson Kanharadēva, Jayasimhadēva, Narasimhadēva, and a possible Sōmēśvara II. In view of the fact that half the inscriptions relating to these kings have not yet been deciphered owing to their incompleteness or want of proper impressions, I reserve a fuller discussion of the history of these kings for another occasion.

II.—THE KĀKATĪYA INSCRIPTIONS.

All these are modern ones, the oldest being those of the Dantōśvari temple at Dantōwārā written by the rājaguru of the present family, who was a Maithilī Paṇḍit. One of these is in Sanskrit and the other is a Maithilī rendering of the same with some additions. Col Glasford has given a very defective transcript of both in his report. They are dated in the Vikrama Samvat 1760, or 1703 A.D. on the 3rd day of Baisākh, dark fortnight. They record the pilgrimage of Rāja Dīkṣādēva to the Dantōśvari shrine when 'so many thousands of buffaloes and goats were sacrificed that the waters of the Sankhūi river became red like kusuma flowers and remained so for five days.' The Kākatīyas are stated to be Sōmavamśīs,⁴ born of the

Pāṇḍava Arjuna The genealogy begins with Kākati Pratāparudra, who was king of Warangal. His brother Annamāyā was the first to come to Bastar, and the genealogy is continued to Dīkṣāpādēva, nine successors being mentioned. The present Bastar family is the representative of the old Warangal family, who, having been defeated by Musalmāns, fled to Bastar. Combining the information hitherto available, the following list of Kākatiya kings may be made up

- 1 Dūryāja
- 2 Bēta (Betmarāja) Tribhuvanamalla, son of 1
- 3 Prōla (Prōlārāja, Prōdarāja) Jagatkēśarin, son of 2, made the Western Chālukya Tailapa-dēva prisoner, defeated Gōvīndarāja and Gunda of Mantrakūta, conquered but reinstated Chōdōdāya, put to flight Jagaddēva
- 4 The Mahāmanḍalēśvara Rudradēva, son of 3, subdued Dōmma, conquered Mailhigidēva, burnt the city of Chōdōdāya A D 1163-[and 1186]
- 5 Mahādēva (Mādhava), brother of 4
- 6 Ganapati (Ganapa) Chhālamattiganda, son of 5, defeated the Dēvagiri Yādava Singhana, the kings of Chōla, etc. A. D [1199-1200 to 1260-61]

son Pratāparudra. It is possible that Pratāparudra's father may have belonged to the lunar race, and, while Pratāparudra became by adoption a Kākatiya of the solar race, his brother Annamāyā, the founder of the Bastar family, must have remained what his father was, that is, of the lunar race. Strictly speaking Pratāparudra himself does not seem to have a very strong claim to be a solar Kākatiya. He was adopted by his grandmother, whereby he became a member of her (or her husband's) race, but it can be urged in his favour that he succeeded to the Kākatiya throne, and that adoption of females was valid in ancient times (see Dattakamīnand VII § 30-38 as quoted by Mayne, Hindu Law and Usage, sixth edition, p. 130), whereby Ganapati's daughter, whom her father had called his 'son' and had given a male name of 'Rudra' (on which account she was called Rudrāmbā; see Ind Ant XXI p 199) became incorporated with her parental race of solar Kākatiyas. The commentator of the Pratāparudriya, who was no less a personage than the great Mallinātha's son, explains the word thus — Kākatiś nāma Durgā Śaktir Ēkaśilānagar-śvarānām kuladēvatā sē Śaktir bhajantī-asy ēti Kākatiyah. It is in this sense alone that the Bastar family could be classed as Kākatiya. This would not affect their true lineage, viz, the lunar race. All this however would apply if Annamāyā was a brother of the Pratāparudra of our list I. But list II with 10 kings for a period of about 400 years postulates the existence of another Pratāparudra, who probably ruled a hundred years later and 'lost his kingdom and his life in the battle with Ahmad Shāh Bahmanī' in 1424 A D. This Pratāparudra was also probably engrafted from another family like his predecessor, in all likelihood from the lunar race to which his brother Annamāyā as a matter of natural course continued to belong.

3.—Successors of Dikpāladēva down to the present ruling chief, according to records kept in the Rāja's family

- 1 Rajpāldēva
- 2 Dalpatdēva
- 3 Daryāodēva, his brother Ajmēr Singh rebelled against him in Samvat 1836, A.D. 1779.
- 4 Mahipāladēva
- 5 Bhūpāladēva
- 6 Bhairamadēva.
- 7 Rudrapratāpadēva, the present chief.

The family records place another Pratāparājadēva between Narasimhadēva and Jagadīśarājadēva, Nos 6 and 7 of Inst 2 Pratāparudradēva, the brother of Annamrāja, is stated to have had three eyes; his army was composed of nine lac archers,¹ and during his time golden rain fell Pratāparudra I. was a great patron of learning, and Vidyānātha wrote a work on Alankāra, which he called after him Pratāparudrayasōbhāshana or Pratāparudrīya ²

The other three inscriptions are at Dōngar; they are written in Hindi. Two of them are dated in Samvat 1836, or A.D. 1783, and refer to a visit of Rāja Daryāodēva in order to quell a local rebellion. The third is dated in Samvat 1928, or A.D. 1871, and records the passā-bhūshēka ceremony of Bhairamadēva, the father of the present ruler.

III.—MISCELLANEOUS INSCRIPTIONS.

All these are unimportant and give no historical data. Six belong to Chapkā and are engraved on satī memorial stones and, with one exception, in Nāgarī characters. Most of these have the usual marks of the sun, the moon and the outstretched hand with figures of husband and wife. Some have got temples engraved, with the couple in the act of worshipping the linga represented there. One is found at Bārsūr on the pedestal of a goddess and is fragmentary.

No 20 — KANKER COPPER PLATES OF PAMPARAJADEVA

By HIRA LAL, B.A., NAGPUR.

These are two copper plates which were found in an old well in the Village Tahankāpār, 16 miles from Kanker, the capital of the state of the same name in the Chhattīsgarh Division of the Central Provinces. They are now in the possession of the chief of that state and were sent to me by his Divān Pandit Durgāprasād. Ink impressions were kindly taken for me at Nāgpur by Mr T. G. Green, Superintendent of the Government Press, and they are reproduced in the accompanying plate.

There are two different records issued at an interval of a year. Both the plates are $7\frac{1}{2}$ " long, but they differ in height and weight, one measuring $3\frac{1}{2}$ " and the other $3\frac{1}{4}$ ", the bigger one weighing 6 oz and the smaller 6 oz 10 drs. The former has an oblong hole at the top, measuring $\frac{1}{8} \times \frac{1}{16}$ ", apparently for stringing it with other plates. It is uniformly and sufficiently thick, and is in a good state of preservation. The smaller one is thick in the middle but very thin at the ends, so thin indeed that the commencement om svasti has cut through the plate leaving holes in the engraved portion, and, similarly, at the diagonally opposite end, a portion is exceedingly worn-out leaving irregular holes there. The corners of this plate were rounded off. It has at the end an ornamental figure representing the moon. This was probably the family crest.

¹ This may be true in the sense that he ruled over so big a population, who, as subjects, could at any time be called out for military service. In Bastar and adjoining tracts almost every man knows the use of the bow and arrow, with which they even kill tigers. The probability, however, is that 'nine lac' was a conventional term for the highest number. In the Hottūr inscription (Gazetteer of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. I, Part II, p. 493) the Chālukya king Satyāśraya is stated to have put to flight a Chōla king who had collected a force numbering nine lacs, indirectly insinuating that he defeated the biggest army that could be brought in the field. Similarly it has become idiomatic to speak of Bāwanganh (52 forts), 700 chēllas (disciples), 108 śrīs, etc.

The average size of the letters in the bigger plate is $\frac{3}{16}$ " and in the smaller $\frac{1}{8}$ ". The former appears to be a palimpsest. Both the sides contain minute scratches of letters of almost double the size, which are altogether illegible.

The characters in both the plates, which were written at an interval of a year only, are Nāgarī, and the language in both is corrupt Sanskrit prose. Both the plates were engraved by Sēthi or Sāo Kēśava, who apparently lived at Pādī (town).

There is very little to note about orthographical peculiarities. The letters dha, ra, na, ṛha, ḍha, ṣa, and the figures 9 and 5 appear in a somewhat antiquated form, and the usual indifference to the use of s for ś is conspicuous. Spelling mistakes there are many, they have been noticed in the footnotes under the text.

The bigger plate, which is the older of the two and was issued from the Kākairā residence, is a state document conferring a village with a fixed revenue on the village priest Lakshmidharaśarman. This refers to Jaiparā village, but Chikhali is also incidentally mentioned. The smaller plate records the gift of two villages, Kōgarā and Āndali, to the same person on the occasion of an eclipse of the sun. These transactions were made by the Mahāmaṇḍalika Pamparājadēva of the Sōmavamśa (lunar race) in the presence of his queen Lakshmidēvi, prince Vōpadēva and eight Government officials including the minister. In the village document these officials appear as witnesses. The recipient of the villages was himself one of them.

The village document is business-like and contains abbreviations which were no doubt very well understood at that time, but are now difficult to make out. It does not indulge in genealogies. In the gift, however, we are told that Pamparājadēva meditated on the feet of Sōmarājadēva, who meditated on the feet of Vōpadēva. I take this Vōpadēva to be identical with that of the Kanker stone inscription of the Śāka year 1242 (see above, page 124). I shall discuss this question in another paper on the Sīhāwā inscription, which also gives a genealogy of this family.

The bigger plate is dated in Samvat 965, in the Bhādrapada month, in the Mriga lunar mansion, on Monday, the 10th of the dark fortnight, and the smaller one in the Īśvara-samvatsara, in the month of Kārttika, in the Chitrā lunar mansion, on Sunday, at the solar eclipse, the year being given in figures at the end as 966. It is not stated to what era these dates belong, but Professor Kielhorn, who has kindly calculated them for me, has conclusively proved that they refer to the Kalachuri era. The reader is referred to the postscript added by him at the end of my article on the Kanker stone inscription (see above, pp 128 and ff), where he has fully discussed the question. The English equivalents of these dates, as calculated by him, are Monday, the 12th August A.D. 1213, and Sunday, the 5th October A.D. 1214, respectively.

The towns and villages mentioned in the plates are Kākairā, Pādī, Kōgarā, Āndali, Jaiparā, Chikhali and Vanikōtta. Kākairā is the modern Kanker, where the present chief of the state resides. It is 88 miles from Raipur, the headquarters of the Chhattisgarh Division, in which the Kanker state is included. Kōgarā has now been corrupted into Kōngērā. There are two villages of this name in the state, and for distinction one is called Dēo Kōngērā (8 miles south-east of Kanker), and the other Hât Kôngêrâ (6 miles north of Kanker). The former is associated with gods, and the latter with a market, which is held there. In the inscription Kôngarâ is said to be close to the shrine of Frânkêśvara, which has now disappeared, but has apparently left its reminiscence in the suggestive adjunct Dêo which Kôngêrâ now bears. I therefore identify our Kôngarâ with Dêo Kôngêrâ. Jaiparâ is the modern Jêprâ (Indian Atlas, quarter sheet 92, N W., Long 81° 31', Lat. 20° 28'), a village 15 miles north of Kanker, and Chikhali is about 21 miles in the same direction just on the borders of the state. It is now included in the Dhamtari tahsil, which formerly formed part of the Kanker state. Ândali is probably represented by the present Ândni (Ânjni), 10 miles east of Kanker. Pâdi cannot be identified. The same is the case with Vanukôṭṭa about which it is doubtful whether it is the name of a village at all.

Hail! At the Kākaira residence, in the victorious reign of the illustrious Mahāmanḍalika Pamparâjadêva, the king of kings, the supreme lord, the great worshipper of Śiva, (who is) born in the lineage of the family of the Moon, who is hailed as having obtained the 5 sounds as a boon from Kātyāyanī, who has acquired (his country) by (the force of) his own arms, with him the queen Lakshmidêvi and Prince Vôpadêva (sitting) by his side, and while the eight¹⁰ officials to the transaction, the Rāj Pandit, who wrote out this document, and five others, whose office is probably expressed by five letters Râ, Râ, Pa, Pâ and Tha, which perhaps stand for Râṇaka (chief counsellor), Râjavallabha (court favourite), Pêṭrika (chamberlain), Pâṭrika (aide-de-camp), and Thakkura (lord-in-waiting). See Jour. As. Soc. Bengal, 1905, Vol. I. p. 10, Vol. XVII, 1878, pp. 405 and 408; Ind. Ant. Vol. XI, pp. 244 and 337. In the last, which is a Chaninka grant of A.D. 1207, the following occurs stair-ashtâbhir gôsthikâh ... sârd karantya, this place of worship has to be taken care of by the following eight trustees. Our inscription was written only six years after the one referred to above, and it would seem that at that time eight was considered an adequate number of persons as witnesses or trustees, etc., in connection with transactions of at least landed property.

³ Lines 4 and 5 are so obscure as to make their translation extremely doubtful. There can be little doubt, however, that they relate to the fixation of revenue of the villages mentioned, in the coins of the reigning prince. Whether the old revenue in respect to the village to which the transaction refers, was 130 tankas, and on revision on the present occasion, was enhanced to 140 tankas, or the old 130 tankas were equal to 140 new coins is not clear. While executing the present document opportunity was taken to revise the revenue of another village, Chikhali, for which another grâmapatra or document existed, and the revenue was fixed at 150 new tankas. It appears that the Chikhali document was not near at hand, and that seems to be the reason why blank space enough to fill up 3 figures was left out between the words Chikhali-grâmapatra and Vijaya-râjyatanaka to be filled up afterwards. But once omitted nobody cared to fill it in, the matter not being of great importance, as the old rental was superseded by the revised amount which was thenceforth payable to the State. The fact that this record is a palimpsest seems to show that the fresh transaction was a matter on revision under the new régime of Pamparâjâdeva, and apparently the old record, which had become useless, was beaten out and the new one was inscribed instead. The words sardâha gaja bhâma dâhhu appear to be some local technical term, which was used in fiscal matters and was well understood at the time, but so far as my enquiry from local sources goes, it has not survived and it is not now used in State transactions. The matter, however, is not of great importance and does not affect the historical information inferable from the record.

Mahā-Sudēva's Raipur plates¹ Like this latter inscription and the Âiang copper plates of Mahā-Jayarāja,² our inscription was issued from Śarabhapura, and it states that the illustrious Mahā-Sudēvarāja, whose two feet are washed by the water which is the flowing forth of the lustre of the crest jewels in the tiaras of the sāmāntas who have been subjugated by his prowess, who is the cause for the removal of the parting of the hair of the women of his enemies, who is the giver of riches, of land, and of cows, who is a devout worshipper of Bhagavat, who meditates on the feet of his mother and father, issues the following order to the householders living in Navannaka and the neighbouring Śāmbilaka, in the Kṣhītimanda āhāra: Be it known to you that these two villages, which assure the happiness of the abode of the king of gods, have been bestowed by a copper charter on the Vājisanēyin Viṣṇusvāmin, of the Kauśika gōtra, for as long a time as the world endures, having the terrible darkness dispelled by the rays of sun, moon, and the stars, together with their treasures and deposits, not to be entered by district officers³ and soldiers, free from all taxes; for the purpose of increasing the spiritual merit of our parents and ourselves

The date of our inscription cannot as yet be settled. Mahā-Sudēva is the same who has issued the grant published by Rājendralāla Mitra⁴ and Dr Fleet⁵. According to the legend of the seal he was the son of a certain Mānamātra, who in his turn had risen from the Prasann-ārṇava, i. e. who was descended from Prasanna, probably his son

Neither Mānamātra nor Prasanna are elsewhere known. Mānamātra can perhaps be identified with Mānānka, "the ornament of the Bastrākūtas," who is mentioned in the copper plates of Abhimanyu of Mānapura edited by Professor Hultzsch⁶. This Mānānka had a son, Dēvarāja, who might be identical with Sudēvarāja. In support of this hypothesis it may be mentioned that mātrā and anka are both stated by lexicographers to mean ornament. On the other hand, the alphabets of the two inscriptions differ, and this, in addition to the difference in the names, makes the identification very doubtful

Of the geographical names occurring in the inscription Śarabhapura also recurs in the two other grants by Mahā-Sudēva and in the Âiang plates of Mahā-Jayarāja. Navannaka may be the present Nahnā, the Nahnā⁷ of the maps, three miles south of Khariār. We do not know anything about the location of the remaining geographical names of our inscription, Kṣhītimanda and Śāmbilaka. They should be looked for in the neighbourhood of Khariār

No. 22.—NOTE ON BHUJABALA MAHARAYA

By R SEWELL, ICS (Retired)

In Vol VIII. 122 ff Mr H Krishna Śāstri, B.A., publishes an inscription of the Kalasa chief Bhairava II. at Kārkala in the South Canara district of the Madras Presidency, and in the course of his discussion¹ on the history of the family quotes Mr Rice's Mūdgere Taluq inscription of A D 1516 (Mg 41). His comment on this is as follows—"This inscription supplies the interesting information that, during the reign of the great Krishnarāya of Vijayanagara, Bhujabala-Mahārāya led a campaign against the Tulu-rājya, and was encamped at the bhuvana-sāle in Mangalūru. . . . Bhujabala-Mahārāya, who led the campaign, must be identical with Krishnarāya's elder brother 'Busbalrao' mentioned on p 110 of Mr. Sewell's Forgotten Empire, etc"

There seems to be a mistake here. Firstly, I note that Mr Rice does not consider the word Bhujabala in the passage in question to be a proper name. The passage² runs—Vijayanagara bhujabala mahārāyaru Tulu rājyada mēle dandu bandu, and is translated by Mr. Rice—"The mighty (bhujabala) Mahārāya of Vijayanagara having come against the Tulu kingdom with an army." Here there is no ruler or leader named "Bhujabala Mahārāya." Secondly, the leader of the army could only have been Nuniz's "Busbalrao," elder brother of Krishnadēva Rāya, if the date of this expedition to the Tulu country were referred to a period at least seven years earlier than the date of the inscription, because "Busbalrao" had died did take place before Krishnadēva's accession, and it is equally possible that it may allude to Krishnadēva Rāya's own exploit shortly after he came to the throne, when he, or his generals, reduced the Ganga Rāja of Ummatūr in Mysore. The mention in "Mg 41" of Immadi-Bhairasa-Odeyar gives us no clue to the date of the Vijayanagara army's march to Mangalore, for this may have taken place at any period before the date of that chief's grant, viz., Sunday, July 13, A D 1516. But what is quite certain is that the leader of the army referred to could not have been Krishnadēva Rāya's elder brother, whom Nuniz called "Busbalrao," during, as stated by Mr Krishna Śāstri, the reign of Krishnarāya; for it was "Busbalrao's" death, according to Nuniz, that placed Krishnadēva on the throne.

At the date of the grant Krishnadēva was conducting his decisive campaign in the east, and had captured Kondavidu three weeks earlier, viz., on June 23rd, A.D. 1516.

No 23.—RAJAPURA COPPER PLATES OF MADHURANTAKADEVA.
[ŚAKA] SAMVAT 987.

By HIRA LAL, B.A., NAGPUR

The discovery of this first copper plate inscription in the wild Bastar State of the Central Provinces is the result of the zeal with which Rai Bahadur Baijnath, B.A., the Superintendent of the State, set himself to make a search for the antiquarian remains in that little known and remote quarter, at my request Mr Baijnath has been richly rewarded for his efforts, for, in addition to the present copper plates, he has discovered more than twenty new inscriptions in Sanskrit and Telugu characters, of most of which he has sent me ink estampages and tracings I have deciphered several of them and they will in due course appear in this Journal I begin with the copper plates, as this is perhaps the most ancient Sanskrit inscription yet found in Bastar Mr Baijnath found the plates in the possession of a Brāhman named Gangādhara Pāṇi of Kāwadgaon close to Rājapura Gangādhara received them from his sister-in-law, who found them buried in a field at Nāharni, sixteen miles from Rājapura.

There are three copper plates, held together by a ring, soldered into what was apparently the lower portion of a seal, which had been broken off. Each plate is about $10\frac{1}{2}'' \times 5\frac{1}{4}''$ and they weigh $29\frac{1}{2}$, 30 and 35 tolas, respectively the weight of the ring being 26 tolas. The plates are smooth, sufficiently thick, and in an excellent state of preservation. They are inscribed on both sides, except the first one, which is inscribed on one side only. Mr T G Green, Superintendent of the Secretariat Press, Nāgpur, kindly took for me impressions, which are reproduced in the accompanying plate. The plates are numbered 1, 2, 3, on the margin, which was apparently left to prevent the ring holes from coming in between the written lines. The word srī has been engraved in the upper margin of the first plate, over the figure 1.

The second side of the third plate is inscribed with benedictive and imprecatory figures 12, 12 hands in a row at the top, beneath which there is to the proper left a cow with a bell attached to her neck, and a dagger and a shield beside her feet, a florated linga in the form of a śaśtila in the middle, and a woman pursued by a donkey to the proper right, with the figure of the sun and the moon over it. My interpretation of these figures is as follows—The hands are uplifted, apparently as an expression of benediction on the donor and they are twelve, probably because there were 12 pātras or donees referred to in the inscription. The cow is apparently drawn to remind us that whosoever appropriates the gifted land, will have to reap the same consequences which a cow's curse can produce, or will fall into the same calamity as a cow is in when deprived of her calf. Śiva is shown as the protector against aggression on the spiritual side, and the ruling king's dagger and shield on the temporal. The sun and the moon indicate that the grant is to last as long as these luminaries endure. Lastly the obscene figure of an ass associating with a woman is a vulgar imprecation implying that the transgressor of a gift should be so low-born.¹

The inscription is in the Nāgarī character. The average size of the letters is $\frac{1}{16}$. They are well formed and clearly written.

The language is corrupt Sanskrit, and except the benedictive and imprecatory verses, which are inserted in a somewhat disconnected manner, the remainder of the inscription is prose. In fact the whole composition is disjointed, and there are several grammatical slips and spelling mistakes.

The most noteworthy orthographical peculiarities are the representation of the initial ṛ with two dots and a stroke underneath, resembling the Nāgarī figure 2 (ll 13, 16, 23 and 30). The anusvara is put at the side of the letter and is represented by a dot with a hala underneath (ll 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 10, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26 and 27), but in several instances it is also represented in the ordinary way by a dot on the top of the letter (ll 1, 3, 4, 7, 10, 12, 14, 16, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 28, 30, 31 and 32). One top stroke representative of the mātrās of ê, ai, ô and au is exhibited by a vertical stroke placed before the letter to which it is attached—a practice which is still followed in the Bengālī and Oriyā writing, but exceptions may be found side by side, where it is placed on the top of the letter according to the practice now followed in writing. Thus, in line 12, the de of Madhurāntakadēva has a top, while the very next de of Kanharadēva has a vertical stroke preceding the letter da. The latter form, however, predominates, the exceptions being found as regards ê in ll 2, 4, 10, 11, 12, 21, 26, 29 and 31 and of ô in ll 1, 19, 31, and 32. ai has been used only once, in line 8, and au twice, in lines 11 and 26, and in each case one of the top mātrās has been represented by a vertical stroke preceding the letter to which it is attached. The letters bha, dha, ra and sha, invariably appear in their antiquated forms. The letter v is used throughout for b, and s for ś, except in the solitary instances of daśa in l 3 and of śrī in ll 12 and 29. Ja is used for ya (ll 20, 24, and 27), ri is used for the vowel ri in l 8, and na for na in l 6. In line 8 *lamāla*¹ for lamala is a spelling which occurs in other inscriptions. It represents the actual pronunciation of the vernacular word—a pronunciation still kept up in the Chhattisgarh division, of which Bastar forms part.

The object of the inscription is to record the grant of Rājapura village, situated in the Bhramarakōtya mandala, to one Mēdipōta or a Chhurikāra Mēdipōta and his descendants, together with 70 *gadyānaka*² gold. The grant was made by the king Madhurāntakadēva, who belonged to the Chhindaka family of the Nāga (Cobra) race. The inscription is dated in the [Śaka] year 987, in the Parābhava samvatsara, on Wednesday of the bright fortnight of Kārttika month. Although the tithi has not been given, there is a most minute description of the moment of the grant, the nakshatra being stated to be Anurādhā, the yōga to be Saubhāgya and the karana to be Gara. From these data the exact date has been kindly calculated for me by Professor Kielhorn who says—

“The date for Śaka 987 expired corresponds to Wednesday, the 5th October A D 1065. On this day the third tithi of the bright half of Kārttika ended 9 hours 17 minutes after mean sunrise, and the nakshatra was Anurādhā and the yōga Saubhāgya. The second half of the tithi was the karana Gara. But the Jupiter's year is not quite correct. By the southern system it should have been Viśvāvasu and by the northern luni-solar system Plavanga and by the northern mean sign system Kīlaka. The mistake is the same as in the first Kanker³ plates.”

The purpose for which the grant was made is somewhat obscure. I take it to be a compensation for supplying a victim for human sacrifice. Before proceeding to show how I arrive at this conclusion, it may be stated that in Bastar and the adjoining tracts human sacrifices were rampant about seventy years ago. It is notorious that human victims were offered to the goddess Dantēśvarī, enshrined at Dantēwārī in the Bastar State. Colonel Macpherson of the Madras Army, who was appointed agent for the suppression of Meriah sacrifices and female infanticide in the hill tracts of Orissa, which Bastar adjoins, says⁴—“In the worship of Tārī Pennu or Earth Goddess the chief rite is human sacrifice. It is celebrated as a public oblation by tribes both at social festivals held periodically and when occasions demand extraordinary propitiation, such as the occurrence of an extraordinary number of deaths by disease or by tigers, or should very many die in child-birth, or should the flocks or herds suffer largely from disease or from wild beasts, or should the greater crops threaten to fail, or the occurrence of any marked calamity to the families of the tribal chiefs. Victims are called Meriah and are acceptable only when they have been acquired by purchase or were born as such, that is, of a victim father. Victims are generally supplied to the Khonds by men of the two races called Panwā and Gahingā, who are attached in small numbers to almost every Khond village for the discharge of this and other peculiar offices. The Panwās purchase the victims without difficulty or kidnap them from the poorer classes of Hindûs, procuring them either to the order of the Khonds or on speculation, and they moreover constantly sell as victims their own children and children of whom as relatives they are the guardians. Khonds when in distress, as in times of famine, also frequently sell their children for victims, considering the beatification of their souls certain and their death for the benefit of mankind, the most honourable possible. The Meriah grove, a clump of deep and shadowy forest trees, usually stands at a short distance from the village by a rivulet which is called the Meriah stream. It is kept sacred from the axe and is avoided by the Khonds as haunted ground." Bearing these remarks in mind, I now proceed to examine in how far they can throw light on our inscription. The italics in the above extract are mine, and they should be borne especially in mind, while considering what follows. In ll 26 to 28 it is stated that "no body enters the chhuriprabandha. There is no place for the preceptor of yôginis. For this purpose this village is taken with a view to do good to all living beings." From this it is plain that the grant was not made for any spiritual purpose such as the increasing of the religious merit of the king and his ancestors, but with a practical earthly aim, viz, in order to secure the welfare of the general public including cattle and other animals. The grant was not made to a Brâhmana but to a Mēdipōta (ll 12 to 14) who is styled "Pātra 12," and to whom 70 gadyānaka gold were given in addition to the village, with the mutual consent¹ of the king, the queen, the prince and officers of State as stated in the grant, evidently in order to make the transaction an out-and-out purchase. Had the donee been a Brâhmana, we should have expected a mention of his parentage, gōtra and caste, but no such information is forthcoming in this grant. In l 25 Mēdipōta is called chhurikāra, which is probably used in a technical sense having reference to the chhuriprabandha referred to above, and not in the ordinary sense of a knife-maker (blacksmith). I am unable to say what *chhuriprabandha*² really means, but from the context it appears to stand for something like narabaliprabandha, apparently on account of the great importance of the chhuri or knife in the sacrifice.

With regard to the epithet "12 pātra" I am inclined to believe that Mēdipōta, whether this word is a proper name or the name of an office, was the head of the 12 persons employed in the work of procuring victims. So late as 1884 A D, when an investigation was made in Bastar in connection with kidnapping persons for sacrifice, it was believed that there were 12 villages given rent-free to kidnappers of 12 families, with whom the stipulation was that in case they could not procure victims from elsewhere, they must supply them from their own family in consideration of the free grant they enjoyed. Of course the existence of a grant for such a purpose could not be proved, as the sacrifices had been stopped long before the institution of the investigation. But the tradition of 12 families of melliahs or kidnappers of victims is significant and points to a practice which evidently existed in the days of these sacrifices³. I am further inclined to think that Mēdipōta was an office, Mēdi being the same as Mēli or Melli, vulgo Melliah or Malia,⁴ the word pōta, which in Telugu means a sacrificial victim, being dropped for

If a human sacrifice is performed without the consent of the prince, the performer incurs sin (see Budhirādhyāya in the Asiatic Researches, Vol V p 383)

² [The text has chhuriprabandham, which might perhaps be translated "killing with a chhuri."—S K]

⁴ Capt MacVicar says —

“The Meriah offering, whether so called Toki Poojah or Norobohi (Narabali), is essentially the same in object as the boli (bali) of the Doorga Poojah, and to this day the ritual of the Khond is annually celebrated by the Borisoloo or Maliah Pater (Pātra) at Pooramari, the capital of Chinna Kumed, on the conclusion of the Dasserah festival—a goat now being substituted for the more precious victim.” Mark the italics, which are mine. (See Report by Capt MacVicar, 1851, in the History of operations for the suppression of human sacrifice in the hill tracts of Orissa, 1854). It would appear that Melliah (the procurer) and Meriah (the victim) were identical terms, the procurers being regarded in the sake of brevity. It will now appear that the grant gives sufficient indications pointing to the procuring of a human victim. The village is secured as the residence of the preceptor of the jéginis, who of course dwell in a haunted place, which is naturally avoided by others. The victim is obtained by purchase, with the mutual consent of the king and his subjects, the grant is made to non-Brâhmanas, the likely persons to take part in such a ceremony, and all this is done for the purpose of dayâ and dharma to all living creatures. Having referred to these main points, I pass over the minor ones which lead to the same conclusion, that this grant was made in favour of procurers of victims for human sacrifices. If therefore the purpose of the grant is really what it appears to be, then I fancy this is a unique record and no similar inscription has hitherto been discovered.

Some remarks about the dynasty of the king mentioned in this grant will be found above on pp. 161 and ff, where I have dealt with the inscriptions of the Nâgaramsi kings found in Bastar, most of which are not yet published and which I propose to edit in due course as intimated before. The dynasty is clearly related to the Sinda family of Yelburga. Though styled "Lord of Bhôgavatî, the best of cities," Madhurântakadêva appears to have been a Mandalika (feudatory chief), as the verse in ll. 24-25 shows that his râj was limited to Bhramarakôtya, which is described as a mandala in l. 15. He belonged to the Chhindaka family, one of the 36 Agnikulas¹ mentioned by Ohand Bardai, the court poet of Prithvirâja.

With regard to the localities mentioned in the record, Râjapura is identical with the present village of the same name, 22 miles north-west of Jagdalpur (the capital of Bastar), on the bank of the Indrâvatî river. There are ruins of a fort there, and it is believed that it was once a royal capital. The present Râja family also dwelt there for some time. Chakrakôtya is, I feel little doubt, the town mentioned by the Kashmirian poet Bilhana in his Vikramânkadêvacharita, in which he records that Vikrama as yuvârâja set out on a series of warlike expeditions, with the permission of his father. He repeatedly defeated the Chôlas and plundered Kaûchi. He assisted the king of Mâlavâ in regaining his kingdom and carried his arms as far north as Ganda and Kâmarûpa. He attacked also the king of Simhala or Ceylon, destroyed the sandal wood forests of Malaya Hills and slew the lord of Kêrala. He finally conquered Gângakunda (IV. 21) Vêngi (IV. 29) and Chakrakôta (IV. 30). After having accomplished these brilliant exploits Vikrama turned homewards, and, on coming as far as the Krishnâ, he was suddenly disquieted by the news of his father's death. Dr Bühler² remarks that "Bilhana's rhapsodic treatment of this portion of Vikrama's career makes it impossible to determine the chronological order of these wars. Only so much may be considered certain that his last exploits were performed in the south as he came on his homeward march to the Krishnâ." There can be no doubt about these exploits of Vikrama. They were, as related above, the conquest of Gângakunda, Vêngi and Chakrakôta, and at least these seem to have been conquered in the order in which they have been mentioned. Gângakunda was the Chôla capital, situated in the north-east corner of the Trichinopoly district,³ whence Vikrama proceeded north to Vêngi, the country between the Krishnâ the same light as the victims, as they had themselves to become victims in the absence of a procured one. The sacrificers paid the Meliahs, who thus became purchased victims, and they did not care whence the victim was procured so long as one was supplied to them when wanted. Thus to the sacrificers, the procurer and the victim would mean the same thing, but the terms came to be differentiated when a class of procurers grew up and the real victim happened to be a substitute for themselves. A parallel instance of such differentiation in the same word may be found in Kôtwâl and Kôtwâr in the Saugor district, where in spite of the officials regarding them as identical, a social distinction is made out. The Kôtwâl is generally of a higher caste than the Kôtwâr and considers himself the proper village watchman, other menial duties being taken as the proper function of the Kôtwâr.

and the Gôdâvarî He apparently crossed the latter and raided the country of Chakrakôta and then wended his way homewards This occurred just a few years after the present grant was made (1065 A.D.), in as much as Vikrama became king in 1076 A.D. Many a southern king¹ likewise raided this somewhat weak power, which must accordingly have been situated near to their kingdoms Therefore Chakrakôta was not near Dhârâ, as some scholars have supposed, but was contiguous to Vêngî, being situated in the present Bastar state I think the confusion with Dhârâ is due to the fact that Chakrakôtya had a king named Dhârâvarsha (which has been apparently wrongly interpreted to mean 'king of Dhârâ'²) In an unpublished inscription found at Kuruspâl, a place close to Râjapura, there occurs Chakrakûtâdhiśvarânâm kulam=alam karishnuh . . . samabhavad Dharâvarshanâmô narêśvarah The Nârâyānpâla inscription also mentions Dhârâvarsha, whose widow Gunda-mahâdêvî gave away the Nârâyanapura village in her grandson's reign in the year 1111 A.D.³ The name Chakrakôtya probably survives in the present Chitrakûta or Chitrakôta, 8 miles from Râjapura. Bhramarakôtya was possibly an alternative name of Chakrakôtya, which seems to survive in Ghumara, a name given to the fall of the Indrâvatî at Chitrakôta.

² I would therefore, instead of 'Râjakêsarivarman (i.e. Kulôttunga Chôla I) conquered the king of Dhârâ at Chakrakôta' read 'Râjakêsarivarman conquered Ling Dhârâ(varsha) at Chakrakôta' (see Kielhorn's Southern List, No 756)

No 24—SIHAWA STONE INSCRIPTION OF KARNARAJA

THE ŚAKA YEAR 1114

BY HIRA LAL, B A., NAGPUR

This inscription is on a slab built into the wall of the Karnêśvar, vulgo Kanêsar, temple at Sihâwâ, the principal village of the tract of that name in the Dhamtarî talûq of the Raipur District in the Central Provinces. It was first noticed in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV. p. 503, and it is referred to by General Cunningham in his Reports, Vol. VII p. 145. The place does not seem to have been visited by any archæologist. The inscription was brought to notice by the District officials, who thought it sufficient to ascertain the date, and the full contents of the record have hitherto remained unknown. I therefore edit it from an ink impression supplied by Mr Gokul Prasâd Îśvardâs, Tahsildâr of Dhamtarî, from which a reduced facsimile is reproduced in the accompanying plate.

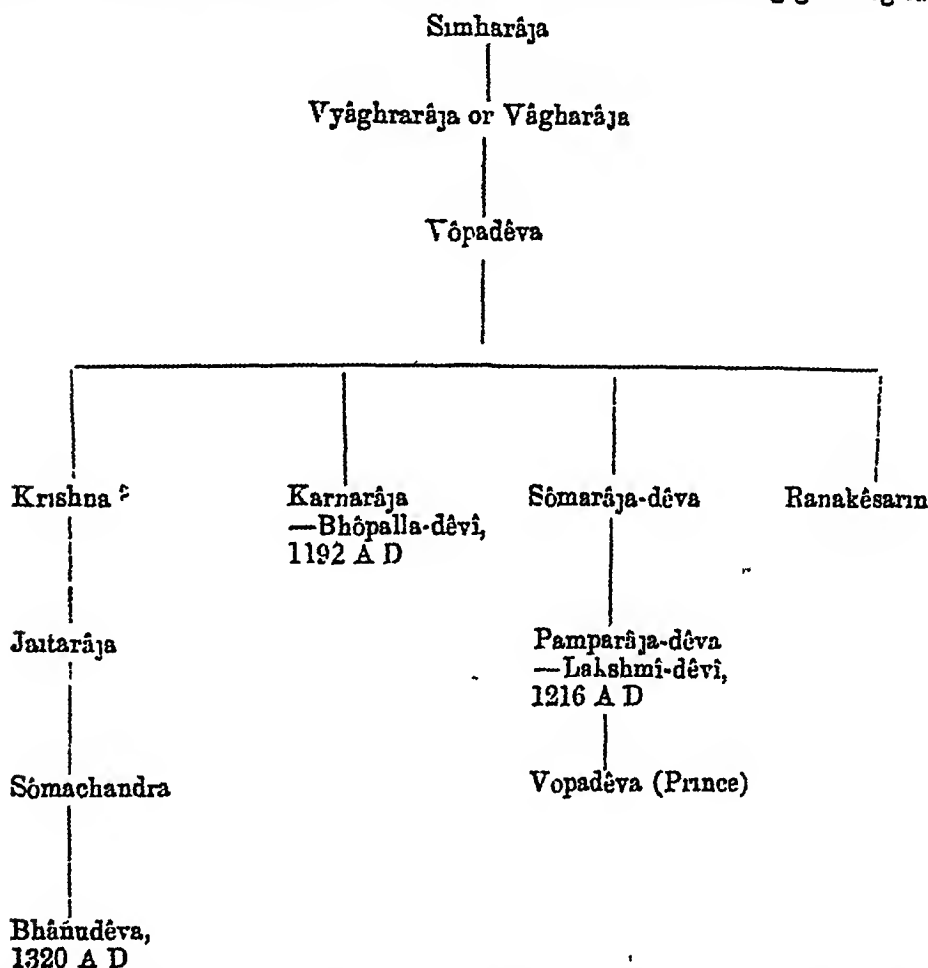

The inscription contains 16 lines covering a space $22\frac{1}{2} \times 13\frac{1}{2}$ ". The letters are bold and well formed. They are all intact excepting one which is broken off in line 2. Their average size is about $\frac{1}{2}$ ". The script is Nâgarî, and the language is Sanskrit. The whole of the inscription is written in verse, except the invocation in the beginning, Ôm namaḥ Śivâya, and the name of the sûtradhâra at the end. There are altogether 13 verses, 4 in the Vasantatîlaka metre, 8 A nushtubhs and one Upajâtî.

The following are the principal orthographical peculiarities:—s is almost invariably used for ś. The sign of the avagraha is not used at all (see lines 3, 4 and 15). Letters following an anusvâra changed from a nasal are doubled (lines 2, 10, and 13). Letters with a répha are sometimes doubled and sometimes not. Instances of doubling may be seen in lines 1 and 15, and of non-doubling in lines 2, 3, 4, 5 and 11, while lines 8, 9, 10 and 14 afford instances of both. In conjunct letters n has been used instead of the proper nasal as in panchakaṁ and punyataḥ in lines 12 and 15. Simha is spelt throughout as siṁgha, following the usual vulgar pronunciation, and, finally, in line 1 the vowel ri is used instead of the ri, trīyaya being written as trīyaya.

The object of the inscription is to record the construction of five temples, two in his parents' name, two in his own, and one in his issueless brother's, by king Karnarāja of Kâkaura, and of one by his wife, queen Bhôpalla-dêvi. These were all built at the sacred place Dêvahrada. The date of the inscription is given in the last verse as Śaka 1114, without any other details as to the day or month, etc. The inscription was accordingly written in the year A.D. 1191-92, apparently after the completion of the whole group of temples, and it was put up in one of the king's own temples, in which Śiva was enshrined. The other one of those which he had built for himself was dedicated to Kêśava, who apparently occupied a secondary place in his estimation. The temple in which the slab is found, is still called Kanêsar or Karnêśvara, after the king's own name. The writer was the sûtradhâra Sûpâ, and the composer of the prastâv Nrisimha.

The inscription opens with an invocation of the three-eyed Śiva, and in the second verse the moon, as the progenitor of the dynasty, is praised. Then begins the genealogy of the king, commencing with Simharāja, whose son was Vâgharāja, from whom was born Vôpadêva, the father of Karnarāja, who married Bhôpalla-dêvi, and who, having conquered all the neighbouring princes, assumed the title of a paramount sovereign. Combining the information from the other two Kākāra inscriptions¹ of these Sōmavamśi kings we get the following genealogical tree,—

It would appear that Vopadēva had four sons, but the probability is that he had only three, the doubtful Krishna of the Kanker prāsasti being probably identical with Karna of our inscription. Evidently the three brothers were all ruling chiefs, who appear to have divided the state between them and selected their residences in different places, though always keeping in touch with the ancestral capital at Kākāra and recognising one amongst themselves as over-lord. Karna seems to have had a predilection for a site near the older capital, viz, Sihāwā, and was probably living in Dhanōrā, now in the Bastar State, at a distance of about 28 miles from Sihāwā. In this village my friend Rai Bahādur Pandā Baijnāth, B A, Administrator of the Bastar State, has recently discovered ancient remains, there being about 20 tanks and 25 mounds, one of which he excavated and found in it a huge Śiva linga with beautiful carvings. Dhanōrā is enclosed by hills on three sides, and is a likely place selected by a Rāja for his residence. There is a local tradition that a Rāja Karna ruled there, although the people of that place do not even now know of the existence of any inscription mentioning his name. Sōmarāja and his son Pamparāja favoured Pādi-pattana, which I cannot identify. It was possibly somewhere towards Dhamtari side. Ranakēśarin was useless, as our inscription informs us, and he was probably wholly dependent on his brother Karnarāja, as we find the latter building a temple in his name to perpetuate his memory—a thing which he would perhaps have done himself had he been his own master. If he was ruling as a chief subordinate to his brother, we have no information as to where he had selected his residence. There can be little doubt that all these branches of the Kākāra family owed allegiance to some other power, which was very probably represented by the Haihaya kings of South Kōśala, as the use of the Kalachuri era by Pamparigadeva would indicate. Karnarāja was apparently more ambitious than the rest. He subdued the neighbouring princes, as our inscription relates, and probably set himself up as an independent ruler in the out-of-the-way jungles; that is perhaps the reason why he used the Śaka era in his inscription instead of the Kalachuri era, thus intimating that he did not acknowledge the Haihaya domination, unless it was customary to use the Kalachuri reckoning in official documents involving disposal of property, etc., while the older Śaka era was used for other religious and general purposes.

The earliest date¹ of this line of kings is that which we get from the present inscription, viz., 1192 A.D., and the latest is that of Bhānudeva, 1320 A.D., there being thus a difference of 128 years between Karnarāja and Bhānudeva. Karnarāja stood in the same relationship to Bhānudeva as did the first ancestor Simharāja to Karnarāja. Simha was great-grandfather of Karnarāja, the latter being great-grandfather (or great-granduncle) of Bhānudeva, and if a similar interval is allowed between Simha and Karnarāja, Simha's time would be about 1074 A.D. According to this calculation the generations would be very long lived, about 12 years each on an average, which is hardly probable, though in sporadic cases there could be nothing extraordinary about it. The present Rāja family, according to its traditions, believes its first ancestor to have come from Orissa about Vikrama Samvat 1150 or 1013 A.D., and this curiously fits in well with the evidence afforded by the inscriptions under consideration. Apparently, then, Simharāja was the first emigrant, and he came about the end of the eleventh century or the beginning of the twelfth. The Rāja family story² as related before (above, page 121) is to the effect that a Puri king, having become a leper, quitted that place and came to Sihāwā, which was merely a dense jungle, where he found a spring of water in which he took a bath which removed his leprosy. He was then installed king of that place, and it is probable that the locality was named after him, being called Simha + arāh = Simhārāh (the comfort of Simha) which finally was corrupted into Sihāwā. From our inscription it appears that it was also known as Dēvahrada tīrtha or the holy lake of the gods, and there was certainly ample reason³ for calling it so. In fact a large portion of the Sihāwā tract seems to have been regarded as a piece of holy land. Local tradition avers that it was the hermitage of the rishi Śringin who is still worshipped there. Five miles from this place is the village Ratārā where Angārā (Angiras) rishi used to live, and Muchukunda had his āśrama in the village Mechakā 22 miles from Sihāwā. About 10 miles west of Sihāwā there is Dēvakūta (the bullock of the gods), which also

Suvarnākhya puri punya punya Mārjārakṣari, Kōśalāyām trayah punya punya Chitrōpalā nadi Suvarnapuri is the present Sōnpur, capital of the state of the same name, and Mārjārakṣari is another name of Narasimhonāth in Boraśimbar Zamindāri of the Sambalpur District. A visit to that place is held to wipe out all sins. En passant it may be noted that the apparent mistake of a sculptor in carving out a cat-lion instead of a man-lion has metamorphosed the statue of the latter kept in the Narasimhonāth cave, into a new incarnation of the God, to account for which there has been no lack of imagination on the part of the local Brāhmins.

contains ruins of old temples.¹ At Sihāwā there are two old temples close together in a pretty fair state of preservation. One of them, in which our inscription was found, is dedicated to Mahādēva, and it is certainly identical with one of the two mentioned in line 12. The other is dedicated to Rāmachandra, but the people say that it was also formerly a Śiva temple and that the present statues of Rāma and others in it were brought from the ruined temple (about 300 yards away) near the Amrita Kund, a bath in which is reputed to have cured the leprosy of the first Kanker king. One of these must be the temple dedicated to Kēśava. There are three other temples close by, which may possibly be those constructed by Karnarāja in 'his parents' and brother's name. In the village Bhītarrās, which means 'the interior' and which probably formed the interior of the Sihāwā town in its days of glory, there is another old temple containing idols not easily distinguishable but stated by the people to represent Rāmachandra, etc., and this may possibly be the temple which Bhōpalla-dēvi built. It cannot, however, be confidently identified, the probability for such a conjecture being based on another supposition, viz, that Bhōpalla-dēvi was a Vaishnavi, while her lord was a Śaiva. It appears that it was in deference to her that Karnarāja dedicated one of his temples to Kēśava. And as one temple erected in her name was thus built on the holy spring, it seems reasonable to suppose that she should have selected a site for another which she built independently, in the interior of the town.

¹ Mr. Gokul Prasad visited these temples lately (November 1907) and has sent me a copy of a small inscription found in one of them, in which I read the name of Śrī Vāgharāja. Thus the Devakūta temples appear to be older than those of Sihāwā, having been built in the times of Karnarāja's grandfather.

No. 25 — VASANTGADEH INSCRIPTION OF VARMALATA;

By D. R. BHARDARAJ, M.A., POONA

Last year a summary of this inscription was published by Prof. Kielhorn,² with a promise to publish the full text on some future occasion. The impressions sent by Pandit Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha of Udaipur were not sufficiently clear for that purpose. During the touring season ending March 1906, my work chiefly lay in the Sirohi State. I was thus able to inspect the original stone in person and take the best possible impressions. When the summary was afterwards published on my return to head-quarters, I sent my impressions to Prof. Kielhorn. But, as circumstances arose which prevented him from publishing them, the impressions were returned to me. This is, indeed, to be regretted, as no other scholar could have done better justice to this important inscription.

The inscription was originally discovered at Vasantgadh, about five miles to the south of Pindwārā, which is the principal town of the district of the same name, Sirohi State, and which is also a station on the Rājputānā-Mālwa Railway running from Ahmedābād to Ajmer. The stone was lying utterly neglected outside the shrine of Khimel mātā recently repaired, of which, I was told, it originally formed part. Vasantgadh itself is now desolated, but many people of the Sirohi State come there to pay their homage to the goddess. The shrine is looked after by the Bhils of the adjoining hamlets, and they had for a long time utilised the stone for sharpening their implements. As soon as the news of the find of this ancient inscription stone reached the ears of Pandit Sukhānandjī, an antiquary of Sirohi, he hastened to the spot, took it into his possession, and brought it to Sirohi. It is now lying in safe custody in his house.

The inscription contains 17 lines of writing, which covers a space about 1' 13" broad by 1' 1½" high. The writing is, on the whole, well-preserved, but the proper right portion of it is a little worn, which is doubtless due to its having been used for whetting weapons. Again, there are two or three cracks running horizontally across the inscription and injuring a few of the letters in lines 1, 2, 10 and 11, but, with care, nearly the whole of the inscription can be made out with certainty on the original stone.

The size of the letters varies from $\frac{3}{4}$ " to $\frac{3}{8}$ ". The characters belong to the northern class of alphabets, which was prevalent during the 7th and 8th centuries. The chief peculiarity of this type is the representation of the medial vowels ā, i, ī and the four diphthongs far more frequently by superscript signs placed above the letters than by vertical strokes attached to the sides of the letters to which they belong. This is clearly noticeable e.g. in the Udaipur inscription of the Guhila prince Aparājita, the Jhālrāpātan inscription of Durgagana, and the Kansuvām inscription of Dhavala; and this characteristic is exhibited by our inscription also. The characters of our record are, as pointed out by Professor Kielhorn, almost identical with those of the Udaipur inscription. As in the latter, we have the tridented form of the letter y and a distinct separate sign for b. The letter y occurs in the present record no less than thirty times, and, in all these cases except one, the tridented form alone is employed. In this exceptional case (in yōjanādrā, l. 1) like that in the Udaipur inscription, the letter is indicated by the old sign occurring, e.g. in the Maukhari inscriptions. We also have special forms for final k, t, and n. In the Udaipur epigraph, final t and n are represented by ordinary signs for those letters with a small horizontal stroke placed above each. Here, on the other hand, final k, t, and n are denoted by their usual signs, but with the tops a little curved towards their proper right (e.g. in vanik, l. 10, śakrit, l. 3, and gunān, l. 6). The sign for the upadhāniya occurs three times in śrīpatih-paṭi, l. 4, and prīyah=prīyah=praśray-ādī, l. 7. The jihāmāliya occurs only once, in īachana-utah=kā[ryya], l. 4. Again, our inscription shows a tendency to use some signs with a little ornamentation. Thus, the anusvāra is often represented, not by a simple dot but by something like an asterisk (e.g. in satatain, l. 3). The superscript signs of medial vowels are also sometimes ornamentally engraved (e.g. au in śasy-ājau, l. 3). We further find the somewhat rare signs for n, dh, th and ph. With regard to th, it deserves to be noted that it is exactly like dh (e.g. in brāhman-ātithi, l. 8), and can only be distinguished by having regard to the sense of the word wherein it occurs.

The language of the inscription is Sanskrit, and, excepting the words ōm namaḥ at the commencement and the list of the names of the gōshikās contained in lines 13-17, the text is in verse. Solecisms are not infrequent. I need only point out the verse (11) which specifies the date, the language of which is anything but grammatical. In respect of orthography, the following points may be noticed. Consonants are, as a rule, doubled after r, visarga followed by s is changed to that letter; ri has once been substituted for ri, in śringa, l. 1, on the other hand, r stands for r in °krīyā°, l. 3, lastly, t has at least twice been doubled in conjunction with a following r, in °rāttri°, l. 2, and °mātrai°, l. 4

The inscription opens with two verses, the first invoking the blessings of Durgā and the second of Kshēmāryā,¹ who is ordinarily supposed to be a form of Durgā, and who here, in particular, is to be identified with Khimel mātā, outside whose temple the inscription stone was lying before it was removed to Sirohi, and of which it originally formed part. Verse 3 speaks of a king named Varmalāta, on whom the next verse bestows nothing but conventional praise, comparing him to a sorcerer, as pointed out by Prof. Kielhorn. Verse 5 informs us that Varmalāta had a feudatory of the name of Vajrabhata-Satyāśraya, who was devoted to the worship of mātā, i.e. doubtless Kshēmāryā, and able to guard 'the son of Himavat,'² i.e. Mount Ābū. His son was Bājijla (v. 6), who behaved like Vaiśravaṇa, i.e. Kubēra, the god of riches, in Vāṭa, by lavishing wealth on Brāhmanas, personages deserving hospitality, subordinates, and men skilled in arts (v. 7). While this chief (rājā) was governing, the temple of the goddess (Kshēmāryā) was caused to be made by the *gōshhī*³ at Vatākarasthāna (v. 8). The *kārāpuka*⁴ selected by the gōshhī to see this work through was Satyadēva, the son of Pitāmaha, who was a merchant by birth (v. 9). Then follows a verse expressing a wish for the endurance of the temple as long as the mountain Mēru, the rivers, the sun and the moon last. Then follows the verse which contains the date. The language of it, however, to quote Prof. Kielhorn, is 'curiously ungrammatical'. Making allowance for the solecisms, the year intended appears to be 682. As almost all the dates of the inscriptions found in Mālwa and Rājputānā, the era of which is not specified and which are capable of being verified, have been shown to belong to the Vikrama era, our date may be taken to be a Vikrama year, and may, therefore, be supposed to be equivalent to A.D. 625. It was in this year, as verse 11 informs us, that the temple of mātā was erected. The prastāva was composed by the Brāhmana Dhūrtarāśi, the son of Divākara, and incised by Nāgamundin (v. 12). Then follows a list of the individual members of the gōshhī who built the temple, their names occupying lines 13-17. Of these, three deserve some notice. The first is that of the only woman who was a member of the gōshhī. Her name is Būtā, and she is spoken of as a courtesan (attached to the temple) of Śrī-mātā,⁵ i.e. undoubtedly the

mātā to whom the temple was dedicated. The second name is Pratihāra Bōṭaka, the first of which words I think signifies the race. Botaka was thus a Pratihāra, i.e. Padiār, and this is the earliest instance of the denomination Pratihāra occurring in an inscription. The third name is rājasthānīya Ādityabhāṭa, the first part of which is unquestionably an official designation, meaning the foreign secretary.¹

Prof. Kielhorn thinks that the name of Varmalāta spoken of in our inscription as paramount sovereign settles the date of the poet Māgha. It would be impossible not to agree with him when he says, that, out of the numerous forms found in the manuscripts of the Śiṣupālaradhā, of the name of the king at whose court Māgha's grandfather Suprabhadra is stated to have held the office of prime-minister, the variant Varmalāta is to be selected as the most likely one. But to the identification of this prince with the Varmalāta of our inscription, supposing the date V.E. 682 to be correct, it is possible to raise an objection. As every student who has read the Śiṣupālaradhā knows, Māgha in his work distinctly alludes to the two grammatical treatises, the Kāśikāvṛtti and its commentary called Nyāsa. The former is the joint production of Jayaditya and Vāmana, and, with regard to the former author, the Chinese traveller I-tsing informs us in unmistakable terms that he died about A.D. 661-662. It should, moreover, be borne in mind that the author of the Nyāsa was Jinēndrabuddhi, who like Jayaditya was a follower of the Buddha.² And it is inconceivable that I-tsing, one of whose principal objects in coming to India was to collect information about Buddhist authors, could have passed him over in silence, if the latter had flourished before A.D. 695 when the Chinese traveller's departure from India took place. The conclusion is, therefore, irresistible that the author of the Nyāsa could not have lived before the first half of the 8th century. Māgha, therefore, has to be assigned to the latter part of the 8th century. This line of argument adduced by Prof. Pathak appears to me to be worth considering. Dr. Konow, however, informs me that he does not think it convincing. He says, "the argumentum ex silentio is always unsafe, and, even if we admit that Jinēndrabuddhi cannot have written before A.D. 695, that does not disprove Professor Kielhorn's identification of our Varmalāta with the king whose minister Māgha's grandfather was. Our inscription may very well date from a time previous to his appointment as minister, and it does not, at any rate, make it impossible to bring Māgha down to the first twenty years of the 8th century. There is nothing to hinder us from supposing that Jinēndrabuddhi flourished about A.D. 700. The alleged reference to his work in the Śiṣupālaradhā would, I think, be more intelligible if we suppose it to have been a new work at the time when Māgha wrote his poem."

I quite accept Dr. Konow's main conclusions. But I agree with Professor Pathak that the argumentum ex silentio carries some weight in this particular instance. One of the chief objects I-tsing had in view was to gather all available information about Buddhist authors in India. And, when we consider that he has even mentioned his own contemporaries, it is very unlikely that he should have failed to notice Jinēndrabuddhi, if the latter had actually achieved fame in his time. As pointed out by Dr. Konow, there is, however, nothing to prevent us from considering Māgha and Jinēndrabuddhi as contemporaries. The mere fact that one author quotes another one, only shows that he knows him, and not necessarily that he belongs to a later time. Māgha and Jinēndrabuddhi can, therefore, very well both have lived at the beginning of the eighth century, and Professor Kielhorn's identification of the two Varmalātas remains unaffected by Professor Pathak's argument.

³ Jour. Bo. As. Soc. Vol. XX, pp. 305-6.

The place Vata, where the feudatory prince Rājula was reigning, is doubtless Vasantgadh itself. This will be seen from the fact that the temple to Kshēmāryā, said in the inscription to have been built by the gōshihī of Vata, is no other than the temple of Khimel mātā in Vasantgadh of which the inscription stone originally formed part. This conclusion is confirmed by the fact that the temples dedicated to the Sun and Brahmā mentioned as existing in Vatapura in the inscription of Pūrnapāla dated V E 1099, are still existing at Vasantgadh. A slightly different name for the place, viz. Vatākara, occurs in l. 9. We have a similar instance of a certain old place called both Ārāsana and Ārāsana-kara. The remains at Vasantgadh have been fully described and the question regarding the name Vata and Vatākara is fully discussed in the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of India, Western Circle, for the months July 1905 to March 1906, inclusive, pp 49 ff¹

No 26. — DAULATABAD PLATES OF THE RASHTRAKUTA SANKARAGANA,

By D R BHANDARKAR, M A , POONA.

These plates were in the possession of a Tongawalla, named Bhan Devram Bhat, a Brahmkshatri by caste, and residing at Danlatâbâd, in the Nizam's territory. They seem to have been preserved as heirloom in his family, and, according to the account given by him, it appears that they were given to his great-grandfather as a sanad. The plates were obtained on loan by me from the owner through Maulvi Syed Mohammad Bilgrami, First Tâlukdâr, Aurangâbâd district, who was kind enough to accede to my request promptly

There are three plates, each of which measures about $7\frac{1}{2}$ " long by about 5" broad. The first plate is inscribed on one side only, and the remaining ones on both sides. The edges of the inner sides of them are fashioned slightly thicker so as to protect the writing, and the inscription is, on the whole, in a state of almost perfect preservation. The plates are strung on a circular ring, the ends of which are joined together by means of a knob bearing a roughly round seal, containing, in relief on a countersunk surface, a representation of Garuda, squatting and facing full-front, his hands are joined, palm to palm, on the chest, and are turned upwards, his legs rest one upon the other, and two projections at the sides denote his wings.

The characters of the original inscription belong to the northern class of alphabets prevailing in the 8th century. With regard to the forms of individual letters, attention may be drawn to â, e.g. in *Âsi*², l. 2; to n, which looks almost exactly like m, e.g. in *°pulina*², l. 12, to ña in bhanga, l. 14, to nka in Śrī-Śankaraganarāja, l. 27, to rya in viryô, l. 20, and to ñcha in *°pañchabhî*², l. 35. The alphabet also includes signs for the numerals 7, 1, and 5 in line 41. The last sign is almost exactly like that for 5 given in the Sârnâth grant of Dantidurga, where the date is also expressed in words. No reasonable doubt can, therefore, be entertained as to the correct reading of the date of our inscription. The language is Sanskrit. Up to almost the close of line 24 the inscription is in verse, and two benedictive and imprecatory verses occur in lines 38-40, the rest is in prose. The number of verses at the beginning is 12. Of these, verses 1-9 also occur in other early Rashtrakûta records. The remaining three verses are peculiar to this inscription, and are historically important. The whole of line 31 after the word vra(bra)hmachârî and a part of the line following have unquestionably been tampered with. They contained names of the donees and the village granted, which have been cancelled and replaced by new ones by heating the plates and beating in the letters originally engraved. The boundaries of this new village are specified after about the middle of line 42, where the original inscription really ends, down to line 55. The letters of these lines are as carelessly written and are of exactly the same type as those incised in lines 31-32 just referred to. Lines 42-55 are thus a continuation of the forgery commenced in lines 31-32. In respect of orthography, the letter b is throughout denoted by the sign for v, there is an indifference about the doubling of consonants after r, the visarga is often wrongly omitted, the vowel ri is employed instead of ri in bhûpas=trivishṭapa, l. 5, Kanakâdrî=iv=Īndrarâjah, l. 8, and prîy-â[tma]jah*, l. 24, the letter qh is employed instead of h once in râja-singhah, l. 4, and an -anusvâra in conjunction with a following n is changed to that letter once in *dhvastin=naya*², l. 2.

The inscription records a grant by Samarâvalôka-Śrī-Śankaragana-râja of the Rashtrakûta family. In the introductory metrical portion, his genealogy is given, beginning with Gôvinda-râja I. The genealogy set forth as far as Krishnarâja I is in verses 1-9 which, as already said, are to be met with in many other grants of this dynasty, and which consequently teach us nothing new. It then describes Gôvinda II in the following words in verse 10, occupying ll. 19-21 and bearing a double entendre: "His son was king Gôvindarâja who was like Hari (Krishna) inasmuch as both were fond of battles, inasmuch as the former was celebrated for having snatched away the glory of Śrī-Pārijāta just as the latter was for having carried off the greatness of the auspicious pārijāta (tree), and inasmuch as the prowess of his arms was shown by the former by supporting Gōvardhana just as it was shown by the latter by uplifting the Gōvardhana (mountain)." The mythological sense is clear enough, and, besides, the verse seems to show that Gōvinda II. defeated a king of the name of Pārijāta, and made alliance with, and espoused the cause of, another prince called Gōvardhana.¹ The names Pārijāta and Gōvardhana are new, and have not so far been met with in epigraphic records. Then follows a verse (11) which is as important as it is unfortunately corrupt. But if the emendations proposed by me are accepted, the following appears to be its sense: "His younger brother was Nirupama, who, on perceiving him self-conceited, abandoned by (feudatory) princes, and even deprived of policy, assumed the royal authority placed (in the hands of a person) other than one possessed of devotion for the elders, in order that the sovereignty might not deviate from the family." What the verse means is that Gōvinda II. was a self-conceited ruler and resorted to bad policy, which resulted in the royal authority being held by a person who had no respect for the Rāshtrakūta sovereigns that preceded him, and consequently created disaffection amongst his feudatory chieftains who deserted him, and that Dhruva-Nirupama fearing that the sovereignty would pass away to another dynasty, was compelled to take the reins of the government into his hands and thus rule over his brother's dominions. The Dēoli and Karhād grants of Kṛṣṇa III., however, give a slightly different account. They record that "sensual pleasures made Gōvinda II. careless of the kingdom, and that, entrusting fully the universal sovereignty to his younger brother, Nirupama, he allowed his position as sovereign to become loose." The discrepancy in the two accounts is with regard to whether Dhruva-Nirupama was actually entrusted by Gōvinda II. with the management of the kingdom, the Dēoli and Karhād grants saying that it was so, but our inscription implying that it was not so, as it was left to the care of one who was anything but attached to the Rāshtrakūta family.² But the facts, the actual occurrences, mentioned in our charter, which is the earlier of the two and consequently more reliable, could not have been distorted, though the motives might have been coloured and differently expressed, and hence what most probably happened was that Gōvinda II. gave himself up to sensual pleasures and allowed the government of his kingdom to slip into the hands of a person other than Dhruva, and not of Dhruva himself, as the Dēoli and Karhād grants claim, and whether it was to remove the danger thereby caused to the stability of the Rāshtrakūta supremacy, as the motive is stated in our inscription, or, what is more likely, his mind lusted after sovereignty, for securing which a splendid opportunity had presented itself when Gōvinda II. gave himself up to vicious courses, Dhruva-Nirupama was successful in making himself ruler of his brother's dominions.

Verse 12 informs us that the paternal uncle of (Dhruva-)Nirupama was Śrī-Nanna, brother of Śrī-Kṛṣṇarāja and son of Śrī-Kakkarāja. Then follows the preamble of the preface passage which usually precedes the formal part of a copper-plate inscription, and therein the name of the grantor Samarāvaloka-Śrī-Śankaragana-rāja is specified, and he is mentioned as son of Śrī-Nanna just referred to. It is worthy of note that no titles have been coupled with his name. He was thus not even a feudatory chieftain. It is, therefore, no wonder that he is spoken of as issuing the charter with the express consent of Śrī-Kaṭhivallabha Narēन्द्रadēva. The latter was doubtless an epithet of (Dhruva-)Nirupama, who was then the paramount sovereign and whose cousin Śankaragana was. The proper object of the inscription is stated in ll. 28-33, but, as said above, the names of the original donee and the village granted to him which were engraved in ll. 31-32, have been erased, and new ones incised in characters which, though old, are not quite legible. The only particular which has survived of the original grantee is that he had emigrated from Tēnvi, and the expression tat-pāda-pūjārtham guru-dakṣiṇā, which occurs in l. 39, shows that he was the preceptor of Śankaragana. Lines 34-36 contain a request to future rulers to respect the donation, and threaten with spiritual punishment those who might rescind it. Lines 37-40 quote two of the customary benedictive and imprecatory verses. And the original inscription then concludes thus: "And this charter was written by Chandayika by order of the supreme ruler, when 715 years had elapsed in accordance with the era of the Śaka Kings." The supreme ruler here alluded to is (Druva-)Nirupama, and the Śaka year 715 must consequently refer to his reign. The earliest record—the Pāṭhan grant—of his son and successor Gōvinda III is dated in Śaka 716. It is thus plain that (Dhruva-)Nirupama could not have lived long after Śaka 715 when our grant was made.

² This discrepancy may perhaps be removed by putting a different interpretation on the words guru bhāṣi-matō-nyasamīham. It might be said that the person who had no respect for the elders, i.e. the Rāshtrakūta sovereigns who were dead, and in whose hands the sovereignty lay, was no other than Gōvinda II. himself. It might be argued that the management of the kingdom had actually been entrusted to Dhruva by him on account of his sensual courses, as the Dēoli and Karhād plates claim, and that the motive put forth by Dhruva and his party for ousting Gōvinda II. and completely severing his connection with the Rāshtrakūta kingdom was that he had shown himself unworthy of his elders, i.e. the sovereigns who preceded him, by abandoning himself to sensual pleasures and not himself carrying on the administration of his kingdom. In my opinion, this interpretation would be far-fetched and fantastic.

After this commences the second part of the forged record. It has been mentioned above that the names of the grantee and the village granted engraved in the original inscription in lines 31-32 have been erased, and new ones substituted for them by beating in the previous letters. The name of the new grantee cannot be made out, but his gōtra specified is Bhāradvāja. Secondly, the name of the new village incised appears to be something like Sāmira. And it is the boundaries of this village that are now specified in lines 42-53 after the completion of the old genuine inscription. The names are written so carelessly and the composition is so full of grammatical inaccuracies that it is not possible to be here definite about anything. In line 52 is given the expression vala(ḷa)ḷha-narēन्द्रa which is an epithet generally borne by the Rāshtrakūṭa rulers. The connection of this expression, however, with what precedes and follows is not clear. The forged document ends with Śrī-Bhaṭṭa(ṭa)ṭa mataḥ || 800. The name Bhaṭṭa reminds one of the inscriptions of the Valabhi princes, and if the numerals taken for 800 are correctly read and represent a date, as is highly probable, it must be referred to the Valabhi era, and it thus becomes equivalent to A D. 1119 which may be taken to be the date of the fabrication of the forged record. Our copper-plate charter, as has been said at the outset, was in the possession of a person from Daulatābād, a Brahmakṣatri by caste, and has been preserved in his family as heirloom. As Brahmakṣatrias in the Dekkan are known originally to have come from Kāthiawār, it is not unlikely that somebody in his family, after securing these plates, tampered with them in order to use them as documentary evidence to strengthen his otherwise disputable claim to the village therein mentioned, and it is but natural that he should engrave the name Bhaṭṭa after the manner of the Valabhi plates which he must have either seen himself in Kāthiawār or known about from his forefathers.

No. 27.—BUCHKALA INSCRIPTION OF NAGABHATTA;

By D. R. BHANDARKAR, M.A., POONA.

This inscription was first discovered by a Brahmahatta of Jôdhpur named Nannurâma whose zeal for antiquarian matters is as unflagging as it is disinterested. It was found at Buchkalâ in the Bilâdâ district, Jôdhpur State. It is incised on a pilaster on the proper right forming part of the shrine wall jutting out into the sabhdamanâdapa of what is popularly known there as the temple of Pârvatî. The inscription contains twenty lines of, on the whole, well-preserved writing which covers a space of about 2' 4½" high by 11¼" broad. The characters belong to the northern class of alphabets. They include the somewhat rare forms of gh and n and the numeral figures 8, 7, and 2. Attention may also be drawn to the way in which the letters ś and n are engraved. With regard to the latter there is no difference between it and m, except that the upper vertical strokes in the case of the former are much nearer to each other than in the case of the latter. The language is Sanskrit, but is anything but grammatical, and the whole is in prose. In respect of orthography, t is doubled in conjunction with a following r, dh is written ddh twice in the word mahārājāddhūrāja, and there is a tendency to use the dental sibilant instead of the palatal, though in one case the latter is substituted for the former, uz in sūtradhāra, l. 20.

^२ This word is repeated unnecessarily.

^३ The original inscription ends at चन्दयिकेन, and after that begins again the forged part which goes on till 1 55 at the close. It is engraved so carelessly that I am by no means certain of my reading of it. It is, moreover, so full of grammatical inaccuracies, which, in many cases, are due to local pronunciation, that it is not desirable to correct them all.

The inscription is dated Samvat 872¹ the fifth of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, and refers itself to the reign of the P M P Nāgabhatta-dēva meditating on the feet of the M. P Vatsarāja-dēva. It is thus clear that Nāgabhatta is no other person than Nāgabhatta, son of Vatsarāja, of the imperial Pratihāra dynasty wielding sway over the larger portion of North India. Of the princes of this royal family we have had but few dates earlier than the time of Bhōjadēva I. In fact, we had only one date, viz Śaka 705 = A D 783-84, for Vatsarāja furnished by the Jaina work Harivaṃśa-Purāna. And our inscription now supplies the second date, V. S 872 = A D 815 for his son Nāgabhatta.²

The purport of the inscription, however, is not quite clear. Something is said therein to have been set up (nivṛtā), but what that 'something' was is far from evident. This something, we are told, was set up, after building the temple (dēvagriha) and worshipping the feet of Paramēśvara, in the village of Rājyaghangakam, by the queen Jāyāvalī, the daughter of Jajjaka, who himself was a son of the Pratihāra Bapuka, and wife of Bhumbhuvaka, the son of Haragupta of the family called Avāṅgānaka. As Jāyāvalī has been spoken of as queen (rājñī), her husband must have been some kind of ruler, most probably a chieftain, feudatory to Nāgabhatta, and reigning at, or, at any rate, holding, Rājyaghangakam, which must be supposed to be the old name of Buchkalā. The name of the sūtradhāra or mason is Pañchahari, the son of Dēśa.

The temple is, as we have seen, said to have been dedicated to Paramēśvara, which is usually taken to be a name of Śiva. This, however, does not agree with the sculptural details of the temple. Although it is now-a-days called a temple of Pārvatī, there is, truly speaking, no image in the sanctum. But on the dedicatory block on the shrine door and in the principal niche at the back, the images in which enable one to determine to what god the temple is dedicated, is a figure with four hands, doubtlessly representing some form of Viṣṇu, as the mace, discus, and conch-shell can be distinctly seen in its hands. Other images, also carved on the inner and outer walls of the temple, show that it was a Vaishnava structure. The word paramēśvara must, therefore, be taken in its ordinary sense and as referring to Viṣṇu.

¹ It is worthy of note that, in the copper-plate charters issued by Bhōjadēva I, Mahēndrapāla and Mahīpāla alias Vināyakapāla, letter-numerals are used to express figures, whereas, in the present as well as other stone-inscriptions belonging to the time of these princes, decimal notation is employed. It will thus be seen that both systems were current in North India about this time. [In the facsimile 892 is a misprint for 872—S K.]

No 28—KENDUR PLATES OF KIRTIVARMAN II.

By K B PATHAK, PROFESSOR OF SANSKRIT, DECCAN COLLEGE, POONA

This inscription was first brought to my notice in May 1902 by Bhṛṅgārkar bāvā, a well-known reoter of Mrtans at Poona. He was then engaged in a literary controversy about the identity of Jñānēśvara, the well-known saint of Alandī, with Jñānēśvara, the author of the Jñānēśvari, a famous Marāṭhī commentary on the Bhagavadgītā, and asked me whether the inscription threw any light on the point he was discussing. When I told him that the grant was issued in Śaka 672, and had nothing to do with the author of the Jñānēśvari, who was contemporary with Rāmadēva, the last of the Yādava kings of Dēvagrī, Bhṛṅgārkar bāvā was kind enough to lend me the plates for the purpose of editing the inscription.

This word seems to have been here used in the sense of "engraving"

The plates were found at Këndûr, a village in the Khéd tâluka of the Poona district. They belong to Mr Purushôttama Râjapâthak, now residing at Këndûr. There are five plates, the first and the last of which are inscribed on one side only. The plates are equal in size, measuring $9\frac{1}{2}$ " long by $4\frac{1}{2}$ " broad. Their edges are raised into rims to protect the writing. The ring on which the plates are strung is about half an inch thick and $5\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter. The seal on the ring is oval, measuring 2" by $1\frac{1}{2}$ ". It has, in relief, on a countersunk surface, a standing boar facing to the proper left. The weight of the plates, together with the ring and seal, is 225 tolas. The inscription is in a state of excellent preservation. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets. The language is Sanskrit throughout, and with the exception of the invocatory verse at the beginning and the benedictive and imprecatory verses at the end, the whole is in prose.

The grant is one of the Western Chalukya king Kirtivarman II., and is issued from the city of Raktapura, which is probably to be identified with Lakshmêsvara, in the Dharwar district. It records that on the full moon day of the month Vaisâkha, during a lunar eclipse, in Śaka 672 expired, in the sixth year of his reign, when his victorious camp was at Raktapura, Kirtivarman II., at the request of his great queen, granted to a Brâhmana named Râmasârman, the village of Beppattî in the centre of the villages of Penbâsaaru, Kîsuman-galam, Sullam and Perbballî, in the district of Velvola. The five villages can be easily identified with Behattî, Hebsur, Kusugalla, Sulla and Hebballî, in the Dharwar district. Velvola is a Sanskritized form of Belvola or Belvala, a name which is applied even at the present day to a portion of the southern Marâthâ country.

Before the discovery of the present grant, only three records of Kirtivarman II.'s time were known to scholars. Of these the most important is the Vakkalêrî grant, which has been published by Mr. Rice¹ and re-edited by Dr. Kielhorn². As interpreted by these scholars, the date of that grant is Śaka 679 expired, which is spoken of as the eleventh year of Kirtivarman's reign, while, according to the present grant, Śaka 672 expired was the sixth year of his reign. These two statements cannot be reconciled. It is, however, important to note that the present grant was issued five years earlier, and is perfectly legible throughout. It also mentions the occurrence of a lunar eclipse. Therefore the date in this grant, which admits of verification, is correct. But in the Vakkalêrî grant, the first word describing the Śaka year is not legible. Both Mr. Rice and Dr. Kielhorn have proposed to read it as naia, nine, and this view has been endorsed by Dr. Fleet. But the proposed emendation does not agree with the present inscription, according to which Śaka 677 expired was really the eleventh year of the king's reign.

The historical information in the present grant may be briefly summarised thus. The first king of the Chalukya line was Polekêśin who performed horse sacrifices. Then came his son Kirtivarman I., who defeated the kings of Vanavâsi and other countries. His brother Mangalîśa being passed over, we are next introduced to Satyâśraya, better known as Polekêśin II., who defeated the famous Buddhist king Harshavardhana, the patron of the illustrious Chinese traveller Hsuen Tsang and the hero of Bâṇa's immortal work, the Harshacharita. Polekêśin II.'s son, Vikramâditya I., was the next king, who recovered, by means of his horse Chitrakantha, part of the Chalukya dominions, which had been overrun by the Pallavas, and had obeisance done to him by the lord of Kâñchi, who had bowed down to none other. Vikramâditya I.'s son and successor was Vinayâditya, who broke the confederacy of the Chôlas, Kâlasas, Pândyas and Pallavas, and defeated the paramount sovereign of Northern India. Vinayâditya's son Vijayâditya, the next king, had greatly assisted his father and grandfather in their wars. Though suddenly taken prisoner by the enemy, whom he had put to flight, he skilfully effected his escape and restored the splendour of the Chalukya empire. He was succeeded by his son Vikramāditya II, who led an excursion into the Tundāka country, defeated his natural foe the Pallava king Nandipōtavarmān, and entered the Pallava capital Kāñchi, but did not destroy it. He restored to the Rājasimhēśvara and other temples, which had been caused to be built there by Narasimhapōtavarmān, heaps of gold and rubies, which had been taken away from them. Vikramāditya II. was succeeded by his son Kirtivarman II, who issued the present grant.

TRANSLATION

(Verse 1) Hail! victorious is the body of Vishnu, manifested in the form of a boar on whose uplifted right tusk rests the world, and who has agitated the ocean

(Lines 2 to 6) The great king, the prosperous Polekēśi-vallabha, whose body was purified by the aiabhritha bath terminating a horse-sacrifice, and who adorned the family of the prosperous Chalukyas, who belonged to the family of Manavya praised by the whole world, who were the sons of Haritī, who were reared by seven mothers, the mothers of the seven worlds, who had acquired a series of benefits through the protection of Kārttikēya, and who had subdued in an instant all kings at the sight of the sign of the boar acquired through the favour of the revered Nārāyaṇa

(Ll 6 to 8) His son was the prosperous Kirtivarman, the great king, and the lord of the earth, who had achieved spotless fame by the conquest of Vanavāsi² and other countries of hostile kings

(Ll 8 to 9) His son was he who had acquired the title of Paramésvara by defeating the prosperous Harshavardhana, the lord of all the north, and addicted to war

(Ll 10 to 16) The dear son of that¹ asylum of truth, the prosperous lord of the earth, the great king of kings, the great lord, was Vikramāditya, well versed in politics, whose companion was his sword alone, who had destroyed all rivals only with his excellent horse called Chitrakautha, who retrieving the fortune of his father, which had been interrupted by the confederacy of the three² kings, had destroyed the great splendour of the mountain-like kings of the Pāndyas, Chōlas, Kēralas, Kalabhras and others with his prowess resembling a thunderbolt,³ whose lotus-like feet were kissed by the crest of the lord of Kāñchi who had not bowed down to others, and who was the asylum of truth, the prosperous lord of the earth, the great king of kings, the venerable emperor

(Ll 16 to 20) His dear son, who reduced to the condition of tributaries the kings of Karēra, Pārasika, Simhaja and other countries after vanquishing the proud army of the confederacy of the three⁴ kings and the lord of Kāñchi at the command of his father, just as Kartikīya, at the command of Śiva defeated the very insolent host of demons, who had acquired all the symbols of sovereignty such as a lofty *pāṇḍhava*⁵ and others by subjugating the king of all the north, was Vinayāditya, the asylum of truth, the prosperous lord of the earth, the great king of kings, and the venerable lord

(Ll 20 to 30) His dear son, who while still a child, had mastered all the sciences and the use of arms, who when his grandfather conquered the southern region had uprooted the multitude of all his foes resembling thorns, conducting warlike operations in the very presence of his father who was desirous of conquering the north, who had the edge of his sword blunted by destroying the group of hostile elephants, who took the lead in all fighting, fond of meeting danger, who caused the multitude of his enemies to turn their backs, delivering to his father the variegated pāṇi-banner,⁶ the dhalā, the great musical instruments,⁶ rubies and intoxicated elephants, who, though taken captive through the force of circumstances by the flying foe approaching with some difficulty, put an end to anarchy and popular commotion by his prowess alone and like Vatsarāja, expecting no help from others, escaped from the peril and conquered the whole earth by dint of his arm, who was an emperor, the asylum of truth, through his three powers being uninterrupted, through his breaking the pride of his enemies, through his liberality and blamelessness, whose vast empire was resplendent with a pāṇḍhava which was a symbol of universal sovereignty, was Vijayāditya, the asylum of truth, the prosperous lord of the earth, the great king of kings and the venerable lord

(Ll 31 to 45) His dear son, who had enjoyed great pleasure immediately after the time of his anointment at the self-choice by the goddess of universal sovereignty, who resolved to uproot the Pallava king, his natural foe, who had robbed of splendour the former kings of his line, who on coming to the Tundāka⁷ district in great haste, beat and put to flight, at the opening of the campaign, the opposing Pallava king named Nandipōtsvarman,

³ Vikramāditya is compared to Indra

prasādhya dakṣiṇām-āśām cūbhū trairājyapālakaṁ |
samam pranamayām-āśa vijitya jayasādhanasā ||

⁵ For the explanation of pāṇḍhava, see my paper in the Ind Ant, Vol XIV p 104

⁶ The expression mahāsabha is frequently used in this sense in Pampa Bhārata, p 211

took¹ possession of particular musical instruments, called kaṭumukhavāditra and samu-draghōsha, the khaṭvāṅga-dhwaja, many excellent and well-known intoxicated elephants and a heap of rubies, which dispelled darkness by the brilliancy of the multitude of their rays, who entered, without destroying it, the city of Kāñchi, which was, as it were, a girdle adorning yonder lady, the region of the south, who had rejoiced Brāhmaṇas, and poor and helpless people by his uninterrupted liberality, who acquired high merit by restoring heaps of gold to the stone temples of Rājasūhāsvara and other gods, which had been caused to be built by Naraśūhapōtavarma, who distressed Pāndya, Chōḷa, Kēraḷa, Kaḷabhra and other kings by the extent of his valour which could not be withstood, and who erected a pillar of victory² in the form of his great fame, as bright as the cloudless autumnal moon in the southern ocean, full of rolling waves, the shores of which were shining with the multitude of rays of numerous pearls dropped from shells struck and broken by the trunks of excited elephants resembling whales, was Vikramāditya, the asylum of truth, the prosperous lord of the earth, the great king of kings, and the venerable lord.

(Ll. 46 to 54) His dear son, who was trained in science and the use of arms in his childhood, was appointed heir-apparent by his father whose heart was delighted with a multitude of his virtues; who having asked for and obtained an order to put down the lord of Kāñchi, the enemy of his family, led an expedition, defeated the Pallava king in every quarter, who, unable to meet him in an open field had taken refuge in a fort, made him powerless, took possession of many ruttish elephants, gold and crores of rubies, and delivered them to his father, who thus gradually attained to the position of an emperor, and whose lotus-like feet were rendered yellowish by the mass of pollen on the numerous crests of all feudatory kings, who bowed to him through love of his heroism, Kirtivarman, the asylum of truth, the prosperous lord of the earth, the great king of kings, and the venerable lord, thus commands all,

(Ll. 55 to 61.) Be it known to you, when six hundred and seventy-two years of the Śaka era had passed away, and the sixth year of [our] increasing prosperous reign was current, when our victorious camp was located at Raktapura, on the full moon of Vaiśākha during a lunar eclipse, the village named Beppaṭṭi surrounded by the villages named Penbasaaru, Kṛṣṇamangalam, Sullam and Perbballu, in the district of Veḷvola, was granted by us at the request of the prosperous great queen to Rāmaśarma, well versed in the Vēdas and Vādāṅgas, who was the son of Mākaya, a performer of the Vājapeya sacrifice, and the grandson of Vājappasarma of the Kāśyapa gōtra.

(Ll. 62 to 64) This should be preserved, as though it were their own gift, by future kings of our own family or others, knowing the flash of life and other things to be as changeful as lightning, and desirous of achieving a fame lasting as long as the moon, the sun, earth, and ocean will endure.

(Ll. 65 to 70) And it is said by the venerable Vyāsa, the arranger of the Vēdas. The earth has been enjoyed by many kings, including Sagara. Whoever is the owner of the earth, reaps its fruit. It is very easy to give what is one's own; it is difficult to preserve what is given by others. Of the two things—a gift and preservation—preservation is the better. He who takes away land, whether given by himself or others, is born as a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years. This is written by Dhanañjaya³ Punyavallabha.

² Vikramāditya II. did not set up a pillar of victory, only his fame, which spread to the shores of the southern ocean, is compared to such a pillar.

No. 29 — DATES OF CHOLA KINGS

BY THE LATE PROFESSOR F KIELHORN, O.L.E., GÖTTINGEN

From the materials supplied to me by Rai Bahadur V Venkayya I publish here, with the results of my calculations, twenty-two more dates of Chôla kings (Nos 137-158), and two dates (Nos 159 and 160) of the king Peruñjinaḍēva, "who claims to be a Pallava and who subverted the Chôla sovereignty about A.D. 1231-32"¹ Five of these dates (Nos. 145-149) belong to the king Rājādhirāja [II] Rājakēśarivarman, of whom no dates have yet been published, and whose reign these dates with great probability show to have commenced between (approximately) the 28th February and the 30th March A.D. 1163. The other dates in general merely confirm the correctness of the results previously found for the commencement of the reigns of the kings to whom they belong, but No 142 reduces the period, during which Rājārāja II. must have commenced to reign, to the time from (approximately) the 6th April to the 11th July A.D. 1146.²

I am still keeping back a number of dates of Kulōttunga-Chôla II Rājakēśarivarman in the hope that more dates of this king may be discovered before long

At the end of this article I give a list of all published dates of Chôla kings that have been examined by me, with approximate statements of the time when each king commenced to reign

I have previously found⁵ that Rājārāja I. commenced to reign between (approximately) the 25th June and the 25th July A.D. 985. This date of the 5th year of his reign corresponds to Sunday, the 1st December A.D. 989, which was the 8th day of the month of Dhanus, and on which the first tithi (of the bright half of Pausa) commenced 5 h. 6 m., while the nakshatra was Mūla, by the equal space system for 16 h. 25 m., and according to Garga for 3 h. 56 m., after mean sunrise

"In the year which was the 16th year (of the reign) of the glorious king Rājarājakēsarivarman,—on the day of Punarvasu, the week-day (being) Monday, (and) the day of the fortnight being [8—eight—] of the second half of the month Purattādi on [the day of] Rēvatī which corresponded to a Sunday and to the twelfth tithi of the first fortnight of the month of Tulā in this year "

The first of these two dates regularly corresponds to Monday, the 23rd September A D. 1000, which was the 29th day of the month Purattādi (i.e. the month of Kanyā), and on which the 8th tithi of the dark half (of Āśvina) commenced 0 h 55 m., while the nakshatra was Punarvasu, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 22 h 20 m, and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 21 h 40 m, after mean sunrise.

The second date apparently corresponds to Sunday, the 13th October A D. 1000. This was the 18th day of the month of Tulā, and on it the 12th tithi of the bright half (of Kārttika)⁴ ended 1 h 17 m after mean sunrise, but as the nakshatra was Rēvatī only from 11 h 10 m after mean sunrise, I should have expected the day to be described as the day of (the preceding nakshatra) Uttara-Bhadrapadā

For the given week-day (Wednesday) and the nakshatra Śravana the date would be wrong for all the ten years from the 20th to the 29th year of Rājarāja's reign. Irrespectively of the week-day, the date for the 24th year would correspond to Saturday, the 6th November A D. 1008, which was the 12th day of the month of Vṛiśchika, and on which the 5th tithi of the bright half (of Mārgaśīrsha) ended 3 h. 33 m. after mean sunrise, while the nakshatra by all systems was Śravana the whole day. I have little doubt that this Saturday is the proper equivalent of the date and that the week-day, if not misread, has been wrongly given in the original.

 [of the month of] Vriśchi[ka]"

The reign of Vikrama-Chōla has been found³ to commence on the 29th June A.D. 1118, and this date of the 6th year of his reign undoubtedly corresponds to Wednesday, the 7th November A.D. 1123. This was the 11th day of the month of Vriśchika, and on it the second tithi (of the dark half of Kārttika) ended 4 h 45 m, while the nakṣatra was Mṛigaśirsha, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 7 h 13 m, and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 5 h 55 m, after mean sunrise.

"In the 15th year (of the reign) of king Parakēsarivarman alias the emperor of the three worlds, the glorious Rājārājadēva,—on the day of Mṛgaśīrsha, which corresponded to a Monday and to the fifth tithi of the first fortnight of the month of Mīna "

In accordance with the previously obtained results, this date should fall in A.D. 1161, some time before the 24th March (the first day of the month of Mēsha), but with the actual reading of the original it would be incorrect. In my opinion, the fifth tithi (paū[jam]y[u]m) has here been quoted erroneously instead of the seventh (saptamiyumu), and the date corresponds to Monday, the 6th March A.D. 1161, which was the 12th day of the month of Mīna, and on which the 7th tithi of the bright half (of Chaitra) ended 3 h. 41 m., while the nakshatra was Mṛgaśīrsha, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 4 h 36 m, and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 3 h. 17 m, after mean sunrise

Of the three dates, the date No. 142 would show that the reign of Rājārāja II. could not have commenced before (approximately) the 6th April A.D. 1146⁴

The five dates Nos 145-149 are of the reign of a king Rājādhirāja Rājakēsarivarman, and are taken from inscriptions every one of which begins with the words kadal sūṇḍa. The first four dates work out regularly on the assumption that this king commenced to reign between (approximately) the 28th February and the 30th March A.D. 1163. With such a commencement of his reign —

This date, No 145, corresponds to Monday, the 30th March A.D. 1164, which was the 7th day of the month of Mēsha, and on which the 6th tithi of the bright half (of the first Vaiśākha) ended 19 h 3 m, while the nakṣatra was Punarvasu, by the Brahma-siddhānta from 7 h 13 m, according to Garga from 9 h. 51 m, and by the equal space system from 21 h 40 m, after mean sunrise.—This equivalent of the original date might perhaps be objected to on the ground that the nakṣatra was Punarvasu only from 7 h. 13 m (or later) after mean sunrise, and in the case of the date No 106, above Vol VIII p 263, where also the nakṣatra was found to be Punarvasu from 8 h. 32 m. (or later) after mean sunrise, I have myself stated that that nakṣatra in the original date might have been quoted erroneously instead of the immediately preceding nakṣatra Ārdrā. But the two dates together now seem to me to show that in either case there was some special reason for quoting the nakṣatra Punarvasu, instead of the nakṣatra Ārdrā in which the moon was at the commencement of the day¹

In the three hundred years from A D 1000 to A D. 1300 there are only two days which would satisfy the requirements of this date, viz. Wednesday, the 8th July A.D 1097, and Wednesday, the 8th July A D 1181

In A D 1097 the Karkataka-samkrānti took place 17 h 26 m. after mean sunrise of Thursday, the 25th June, the first day of the month of Karkataka therefore was Friday, the 26th June, and the 13th day of the same month was Wednesday, the 8th July. ¹ No 394 of the Government Epigraphist's collection for 1902

² No 222 of the Government Epigraphist's collection for 1904

It is clear that if as was assumed above, the reign of Rājādhirāja Rājakesarivarman commenced between the 28th February and the 30th March A.D. 1163, neither of the two Wednesdays given above could have fallen in the 13th year of his reign. On the other hand, I may state that if either of the two days really fell in his 13th year, the other dates would be incorrect. In these circumstances, and assuming that, with the exception of the regnal year, the details of the original date have been given correctly, I can only suggest that the year 13 (which is given in figures¹ only) has been quoted erroneously instead of the 19th year, and that the proper equivalent of the date therefore is really Wednesday, the 8th July A.D. 1181. It might of course be objected that this day would fall in the reign of Kulottunga III Parakēsarivarman, which commenced between the 6th and the 5th July A.D. 1178. But I have already shown that we have a similar overlapping of two reigns also in other cases. A date (No 94) of the 39th year of Kulottunga III corresponds to the 25th January A.D. 1217, while the reign of his successor Rājaraja III commenced in June-July A.D. 1216, and of this king again we have two dates (Nos 96 and 97) of the 7th February and the 22nd April A.D. 1248, whereas the reign of his successor Rājendra-Chola III. commenced in March-April A.D. 1246.

From the materials available I therefore infer that Rājādhirāja Rājakesarivarman, i.e. Rājādhirāja II, commenced to reign between (approximately) the 28th February and the 30th March A.D. 1163.

The wording of this date is intrinsically wrong because on the third tithi of the bright half in the month of Kumbha the nakshatra could not possibly be Pūrva-Phalgunī, and the probability would seem to be that either has the first fortnight been erroneously quoted instead of the second, or Pūrva-Phalgunī (Pārattu) instead of Pūrva-Bhādrapadā (Pūra[śi]dī)³ In my opinion, the date corresponds to Saturday, the 3rd February A.D. 1196, which was the 10th day of the month of Kumbha, and on which the 3rd tithi of the bright half (of Phālguna) commenced 5 h 40 m, while the nakshatra was Pūrva-Bhādrapadā, by the equal space system for 4 h. 36 m., after mean sunrise.

“In the 16th year (of the reign) of the emperor of all worlds, the glorious king Perunjngadêva,—on the day of Rôhini, which corresponded to a Monday and to the thirteenth tithi of the first [fortnight] of the month of Dhanus ”

Above, Vol VII p 165, I have found that the reign of Perunjngadêva commenced between (approximately) the 11th February and the 30th July A D 1243 This date, of his 16th year, corresponds to Monday, the 9th December A D 1258, which was the 14th day of the month of Dhanus, and on which the 13th tithi of the bright half (of Pausha) commenced 7 h 48 m, while the nakshatra was Rôhini, by the Brahma-siddhânta the whole day, according to Garga from 1 h 19 m, and by the equal space system from 13 h. 8 m, after mean sunrise—Instead of the 13th, I should have expected the 12th tithi to have been quoted, especially as, joined with Rôhini, this tithi is a mahâ-dvâdâśî (pâpa-nâśinî)

No. 30.—DATES OF PANDYA KINGS.

By THE LATE PROFESSOR F KIELHORN, O.I.E; GÖTTINGEN.

From the numerous dates of Pāndya kings sent to me by Rai Bahadur V. Venkayya, I here give five (Nos. 63-67), the European equivalents of which may be given with certainty. The remaining dates must wait till more dates of the kings to whom they belong have been discovered. Of those here published, Nos 64 and 66 are valuable inasmuch as, taken together with previously published dates, they show that Māravarman Kulāśekhara I. commenced to reign between (approximately) the 2nd and the 27th June A D 1268, and Māravarman Kulāśekhara II. between (approximately) the 6th and the 29th March A.D 1314.

In a postscript I give a date of a king Rājakēśarīvarman Vira-Pāṇḍya, according to Mr Venkayya a ruler of Kongu, which quotes both the Śaka year 1202 and the regnal year 15, both given in words. This date is of considerable interest, because my calculations prove its meaning to be this that the day of the date fell in the 15th year of the king's reign which (reign) commenced in the Śaka year 1202 (and not, that the day of the date itself fell in the Śaka year 1202). The date thus suggests another point of doubt and uncertainty regarding the interpretation of dates that do not contain sufficient data for exact verification, even when at first sight such doubt seems to be out of the question.

At the end of this article also I give a list of all published dates of Pāṇḍya kings that have been examined by me, with approximate statements of the time when each king commenced to reign.

I have previously found ⁴ that the reign of Māravarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya II commenced between (approximately) the 15th June A D. 1238 and the 18th January A D 1239. This date of his 7th year regularly corresponds to Sunday, the 7th May A D 1245. The preceding Vṛṣhabhasamkrānti took place 0 h. 4 m. after mean sunrise of Tuesday, the 25th April A D 1245, which was the first day of the month of Vṛṣhabha; and the 13th day of the same month therefore was Sunday, the 7th May A D 1245. On this day the 10th tithi of the bright half (of Jyāishtha) commenced 0 h. 43 m., and the nakṣatra was Uttara-Phalgunī, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 19 h. 42 m., and by the Brahma-siddhanta for 16 h. 25 m., after mean sunrise.

For the reign of Māravarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I the date would be quite incorrect.

I have previously found¹ that the reign of Māṛavarman Kulāśekhara I. commenced between (approximately) the 19th March and the 27th June A D 1268 This date of his 23rd year regularly corresponds to Friday, the 1st June A.D. 1291. The preceding Mithuna-samkrānti took place 7 h 16 m after mean sunrise of Sunday, the 27th May A.D 1291, which was the first day of the month of Mithuna; and the 6th day of the same month therefore was Friday, the 1st June A.D. 1291. On this day the 3rd tithi of the bright half (of the first Āshādhā) ended 3 h 3 m., and the nakshatra was Pushya, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 14 h 27 m., and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 12 h. 29 m., after mean sunrise.

The date reduces the period, during which Māṛavarman Kulāśekhara I. must have commenced to reign, to the time from (approximately) the 2nd to the 27th June A.D. 1268.

For the year opposite the 30th, i.e. for the 31st year, of Māṛavarman Kulāśekhara I this date regularly corresponds to [Saturday], the 5th July A D. 1298. The preceding Karkataka-samkrānti took place 17 h 19 m after mean sunrise of Friday, the 27th June A D. 1298 The first day of the month of Karkataka therefore was Saturday, the 28th June, and the 8th day of the same month was Saturday, the 5th July A D 1298 On this day the 11th tithi of the dark half (of Āshādhā) ended 18 h 55 m., and the nakshatra was Rōhinī, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 23 h 38 m., and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 22 h. 59 m., after mean sunrise.

This date is intrinsically wrong because the nakshatra cannot possibly be Dhanishthā on the 14th tithi of a first fortnight in the month of Mēsha Irrespectively of the nakshatra the date would be wrong for the 12th year of the reign of Māṇavarman Kulaśēkhara I. But for the 12th year of the reign of Māṇavarman Kulaśēkhara II (which has been found¹ to commence between approximately the 6th March and the 23rd July A D 1314) the date would regularly correspond to Friday, the 29th March A D 1325, which was the 4th day of the month of Mēsha, and on which the 14th tithi of the bright half (of Chaitra) ended 7 h 9 m, while the nakshatra was Hasta, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 10 h 30 m, and by the Brahma-siddhānta for 7 h 13 m, after mean sunrise—I have no doubt that this is the true equivalent of the date, and that the concluding words of the original date ought to be Attattu nāl, 'the day of Hasta,' instead of Attattu nāl.

The date would prove that Māṇavarman Kulaśēkhara II. could not have commenced to reign later than (approximately) the 29th March A D 1314.

I have previously found³ that Jatāvarman Parākrama-Pāndya commenced to reign between (approximately) the 10th January A D 1357 and the 9th January A D 1358. This date of the 7th opposite the 5th year, i.e. of the 12th year of his reign, undoubtedly corresponds to Sunday, the 4th February A D 1363, which was the 11th day of the month of [Kumbha], and on which the 12th tithi of the dark half (of Magha) ended 21 h 7 m after mean sunrise, while the nakshatra was Uttarāshadhā, by the Brahma-siddhānta and according to Garga the whole day, and by the equal space system from 6 h 34 m after mean sunrise.

The date shows that Jatāvarman Parākrama-Pāndya could not have commenced to reign before (approximately) the 5th February A D 1357.

"In the Śaka year one thousand two hundred and two, the fifteenth year (of the reign) of king [Rā]jakēsarivarman alias the emperor of the three worlds, the glorious Vira-Pāndyadēva,—on the day of Uttara-Phalguni, which corresponded to the tenth tithi and to a Monday of the second fortnight of the month of Tūlā "

The meaning of this date would naturally be taken to be that the day of the date fell both in the 15th year of the king's reign and in the Śaka year 1202, either current or expired, but for either of these Śaka years the date would be incorrect

For the current Śaka year 1202 the date might be taken to correspond to Monday, the 2nd October A D 1279, which was the 4th day of the month of Tula, and on which the 10th tithi of the dark half (of Āśvina) ended 2 h 37 m after mean sunrise. But the nakṣatras on this day were Maghā and Pūrva-Phalguni

For the expired Śaka year 1202 it would correspond to Saturday, the 19th October A D 1280, which was the 22nd day of the month of Tūlā, and on which the 10th tithi of the dark half (of Āśvina) ended 18 h 25 m., while the nakṣatra was Pūrva-Phalguni, by the Brahmasiddhānta for 11 h 10 m, according to Garga for 15 h 46 m, and by the equal space system from 3 h. 17 m, after mean sunrise.

The date would be incorrect also for the Śaka year 1200 (current or expired) and for all years down to Śaka 1214 expired. It would be correct for Śaka 1215 expired (= 1216 current). For this year it would correspond to Monday, the 26th October A.D. 1293, which was the 29th day of the month of Tūlā, and on which the 10th tithi of the dark half (of Kārttika) ended 6 h 52 m. after mean sunrise, while the nakṣatra by all systems was Uttara-Phalguni during the whole of the day

I have no doubt that Monday, the 26th October A D 1293, is the proper equivalent of the date, and, in accordance with this result, I take the true meaning of the original date to be this, that the day of the date fell in the 15th year of the king's reign which commenced some time during the (current) Śaka year 1202 (= A D 1279-80) that is quoted at the beginning of the date. For dates that have to be similarly interpreted, I may refer to Nos 261, 262 and 269 of my Southern Inst.

No 31 — TIRUMALAI ROCK INSCRIPTION OF RAJENDRA-CHOLA I

By PROFESSOR E HULTZSCH, PH D , HALLE (SAALE)

When, more than twenty years ago, I started epigraphical work in the Madras Presidency, I prepared with my own hands an inked estampage of the inscription which is here re-edited. After Mr. Venkayya had joined my office in Bangalore, we spent a considerable time in reading and translating this record — one of the first early Chōla documents we tried to make out in a reliable manner. The Tamil text of it as printed in South-Indian Inscriptions, Vol. I. p 98, does not contain any misreadings³. But the translation on p. 99 needs revision in the light of the other Chōla inscriptions which were published later on, and a facsimile of this beautifully engraved and well preserved rock inscription was hitherto missing I therefore republish it now in Roman characters with a fresh translation, and with a colotype of a careful inked estampage which was prepared recently under Rai Bahadur Venkayya's personal supervision

² Śaka 1381 is wrongly quoted instead of 1383, and the 23rd solar day wrongly instead of the 21st

The inscription is engraved on a smooth piece of rock near a rock-cut Jaina figure on the top of the hill of Tirumalai near Pôlûr in the North Arcot district The language is Tamil, and the alphabet is likewise Tamil, interspersed with a few Grantha words and letters (svasti sri, l. 1; sha of vishaya, l. 9, Mahî, l. 10, Śrī-Rājendra-Chôladêva and ja of Jayangonda, l. 12, śrī, Jina and dêva, l. 13, vyâpârî, l. 13 f)

The inscription is dated in the 13th year of the reign of the Chôla king Parakésarivarman alias Rājendra-Chôladêva I. (l. 12), who ascended the throne in A D 1012.¹ Its first eleven lines consist of a passage in Tamil verse which describes the conquests of the king, and the first words of which (Tiru manni, etc) are quoted — as pointed out by Mr. Venkayya — in Perundevanâr's commentary on the Vīrasôlhyam ²

The list of conquests opens with Idmadurai-nâdu (l. 1 f), i.e. the country of Yedatore in the Mysore district and Vanavâsi, i.e. Banavâsi in the North Canara district The next item, the city of Kollippâkkai, must have been included in the Western Châlukya kingdom. For it was set on fire by Rājādhirāja I. in the course of a war against Sômesvara I and Vikramāditya VI,³ and it is mentioned as Kollipâke in an inscription of Jayasimha II⁴ Mannai-kataka is identified by Mr. Rice with the city of Manne in the Nelamangala taluka of the Bangalore district ⁵

Îlam (l. 2) or Îla-mandala (l. 3) is the Tamil designation of the island of Ceylon Rājendra-Chôla I. boasts of having deprived its king of his own crown, the crowns of his queens, and two other trinkets which the Pândya king had previously deposited with the king of Ceylon a crown and the 'necklace of Indra' Mr. Venkayya has pointed out that the Mahāvamea (chapter LIII) also refers to the crown of the Pândya, which had been left with the king of Ceylon and was taken from him by the Chôlas,⁶ and that the 'necklace of Indra' is alluded to in several Pândya inscriptions ⁷

The Kêrala (l. 3) is the king of Malabar Śāndimattivu (l. 5), i.e. the island of Śāntimat (?), is unknown Muṣangi is perhaps identical with the fort of Uchchangi in the Bellary district.⁸ Jayasimha of Ratta-pādi (l. 6), who was put to flight at Muṣangi, is the Western Châlukya king Jayasimha II ⁹

Śakkaragôttam, i.e. Chakrakôtta, is shown by the inscriptions of Kulôttunga I to have belonged to the dominions of the king of Dhârâ ¹⁰ Madura-mandala (l. 7) need not be connected with Madhurâ, the capital of the Pândya king, who has been already accounted for (l. 3), but may be meant for the district of the northern Mathurâ on the Yamunâ The three next geographical names cannot be identified

At Âdinagar (?) Rājendra-Chôla I captured Indraratha of the race of the Moon (l. 8) As suggested by Prof. Kielhorn,¹¹ this prince may be identical with that Indraratha who is mentioned in the Udaypur inscription as an enemy of Bhôjadêva of Dhârâ

¹¹ List of Southern Inscr p 120, note 3.

Odda-vishaya (l 9) is the province of Orissa, and Kōśala-nādu is probably Southern Kōśala¹ Tandabutti, i.e. Dandabhukti and its ruler Dharmapāla are unknown from other sources. The same is the case with Ranaśūra, who ruled over Tukkanalādam (l 10), i.e. Dakshina-Virāta² or Southern Berar, and with Gōvindahandra,³ the ruler of Vangāla-dēśa, i.e. the Bengal country. Mahipāla, whom the Chola king deprived of his elephants and women, is identified by Prof. Kihlhorn with the Pāla king Mahipāla I.⁴

The list of conquests close with Uttiralādam (l 11), i.e. Uttara-Virāta or Northern Berar and the Gaṅgā, i.e. the river Ganges.

The short passage in Tamil prose with which the inscription ends (ll 12-14) records its actual purpose — a gift of money for a lamp and for offerings to the Jaina temple on the hill by the wife of a merchant of Malliyūr in Karaivali, a subdivision of Perumbanappādi. The temple was called Śrī-Kundavai-Jinālaya (l 13), i.e. the Jina temple of Kundavai. This name suggests that the shrine owed its foundation to Kundavai, the daughter of Parāntaka II, elder sister of Rājārāja I (and consequently the paternal aunt of Rājendra-Chola I) and wife of Vallavaraiyār Vandyadēvar.⁵ The sacred hill (Tirumalai) is stated to have formed part of Vaigavūr, a pallichchandam, i.e. 'a village belonging to a Jaina temple,'⁶ in Mugai-nādu, a subdivision of Pangala-nādu, a district of Jayangonda-Chōla-maṇḍala. Malliyūr is the modern Gudimallūr near Arcot.⁷ The remaining geographical names mentioned in this paragraph have been discussed in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol III p 89 and above, Vol VII p 192.

In conclusion I would like to add a few words on the later conquests of Rājendra-Chola I which are registered in the Tanjore inscription No 20. Mr Venkayya has shown that my former identification of Kadāram with a place in the Madura district⁸ must be wrong, because the Chola king despatched an expedition to it on ships by sea, and because two of the localities mentioned in connection with this expedition, Nakkavāram and Pappālam, are respectively, the Nicobar Islands and a port in Burma.⁹ Among the remaining items we read in line 9 of the Tanjore inscription niraiśīr-viśaiyamum, and in line 11 kalai-ttakkōr puṇai talai-ttakkolamum. The second of them, Takkōlam, may be identical with Ptolemy's Tákωτα ἐμρόριον which Colonel Gerini places at Takōpa on the western coast of the Malay Peninsula.¹⁰ Instead of the first, which I had translated by 'Vijayam of great fame,' an inscription at Kandyū near Tanjore reads nirai-śrīviśaiyamum, 'the prosperous Śrīviśaya'.¹¹ This may be the correct reading, for according to the larger Leiden grant (l 80) Śrīviśaya was the name of the country ruled over by the king of Katāha or Kadāram.

² In his Annual Report on Epigraphy for 1906-1907, p 87 f, Mr Venkayya has shown that the Tamil term Ilāda does not correspond to the Sanskrit Lāta (Gujarāt), but to Virāṭa (Berar).

(Line 1) Hail! Prosperity!

³ Other inscriptions read aḷopp-arum, see South-Ind Inscr Vol II p 93, note 5

⁴ Read =Iainaradanaī That this is the original reading, becomes more than probable in the following manner — (1) The doubtful word may be expected to rhyme on Chandīra, the third word before it (2) The Tanjore inscription No 20 reads =Indiradanaī (3) Indraratha is the only correct Sanskrit name I can think of, which would account for both corrupt readings

(L 1) in (his) life of high prosperity, while Tiru (Lakshmi), having become constant, was increasing, (and) while the goddess of the great earth, the goddess of victory in battle, and the matchless goddess of fame rejoiced to have become his great queens,—

(L 1) Idaidurai-nādu; Vanavāsi, (round which) a fence of continuous forests was spreading,¹ Kollippākkai, whose walls were surrounded with brushwood,² Mannai-kkadakkam, whose strength was unapproachable,³ the crown of the king of Ilam (on) the tempestuous ocean, the exceedingly fine crowns of the queens of that (king); the beautiful crown⁴ and the necklace of Indra, which the king of the South (= the Pāndya) had previously deposited with that (king of Ilam), the whole Ilam-mandala (on) the transparent sea, the crown praised by many and the garland of the Sun, family-treasures which the arrow-shooting (king of) Kēraḷa rigidly wore; many ancient islands, whose old, great guard was the ocean which makes the conches resound, the crown of pure gold, worthy of Tiru (Lakshmi), which Paraśurāma, having considered the fortifications of Śāndimattivu impregnable, had deposited (there), when, in anger, (he) bound the kings twenty-one times in battle, the seven and a half lakṣhas of Irattabādi, (which was) strong by nature, (and which he took), together with immeasurable fame, (from) Jayasimha, who, out of fear and full of vengeance, turned his back at Muṣangi and hid himself, the principal great mountains (which contained) the nine treasures (of Kuvēra),⁵ Śakkaragōttam, whose warriors were brave, Mādura-mandala, whose forts (bore) banners (which touched) the clouds, Nāmanaikkōnam, which was surrounded by dense groves, Pañchappalli, whose warriors (bore) cruel bows, the good Māṣun-dēsa, whose fruits were fresh, a large heap of family-treasures, together with many (other) treasures, (which he carried away) after having captured Indraratha of the old race of the Moon, together with (his) family, in a fight which took place in the hall (at) Ādinagar, (a city) which was famous for unceasing abundance, Odda-vishaya, which was difficult to approach, (and which he subdued in) close fights, the good Kōśalai-nādu, where Brāhmanas assembled, Tandabutti, in whose gardens bees abounded, (and which he acquired) after having destroyed Dharmapāla (in) a hot battle, Takkanalādam, whose fame reached (all) directions, (and which he occupied) after having forcibly attacked Ranaśūra; Vangāla-dēsa, where the rain-wind never stopped, (and from which) Gōvindachandra fled, having descended (from his) male elephant,⁶ elephants of rare strength and treasures of women, (which he seized) after having been pleased to put to flight on a hot battle-field Mahipāla, decked (as he was) with ear-rings, shippers and bracelets, Utturalādam, as rich in pearls as the ocean, and the Gangā, whose waters dashed against bathing-places (tīrtha) covered with sand,—

(L 12) Chāmundappai, the wife of the merchant Nannappaya, who resided (at) Malliyūr (in) Karaivali, (a subdivision) of Perumbānappādi, deposited twenty kāsus for one perpetual lamp and ten kāsus for offerings to the god of the Śrī-Kundavai-Jinālaya (on) the holy mountain (Tirumalai) of Vaigavūr, a pallichchandam in Mugai-nādu, a subdivision (vagai) in the middle of Pangaḷa-nādu, (a district) of Jayangonda-Chōla-mandala

³ Other inscriptions read nannark-arum-aran, 'whose fortifications were unapproachable'.

No 32 — MAMBALLI PLATE OF SRIVALLAVANGODAI, KOLLAM 149.

By T A GOPINATHA RAO, M A., MADRAS

The copper plate on which the subjoined inscription is engraved, belongs to the Māmballi bhandārattil of the Māmballi matha and was secured for me for publication by Mr. S Govinda Pillai, High Court Vakīl, Trévandrum. Besides this plate, there are five other odd plates belonging to the same matha, which bear fragments of inscriptions of the Kīlappêrūr¹ dynasty of the Vēnādu kings. In one of them occurs the name Śrī-Vīra-Dēvadaran-Kēralavarman of Kīlappêrūr².

The plate measures 10½" × 3½" and has a hole on the left margin. It does not appear to have possessed a ring or seal. At the left end of the plate, the owner has engraved, in modern Malayālam characters, the word Māmballi. Excepting this single word and a few Grantha letters interspersed in the document, the inscription is written in the Vaṭṭeluttu alphabet. The words svasti and śrī in line 1, the letter śrī occurring in the name Śrīvallavangōdai in lines 7, 18 and 19, rakshī^o and rakshā^o occurring in the words rakshichchu and rakshūbhōgam in l 12 are in Grantha characters. The consonant k retains the earlier form, without a loop at the bottom, this form differs from the later ones which are scarcely distinguishable from the symbol for ch. The letter pū (of pūngā in l 3), whilst it has the common form in all other instances, looks like the Grantha letter hra. The language of the inscription is Tamil, tinged here and there with the colloquialisms of the Malabar Coast e.g. irundarukiy=ēdattu vaichchu, (=at the place where they were pleased to be seated), in l 5, paṭṭāra-gakkolla for paṭṭāragarkh=ulla (= belonging to the bhaṭṭāraka) in lines 6 and 12, ari for arisi (= rice) in l. 9, Muruṇṇaryūr for Murungayūr in l 21, Śaunaran for Śaungaran in l 22, rakshichchu for rakshittu in l 12. The phrase nāpālichcheydu is contracted in the modern Malayālam language into nāpālichche.

This is the earliest known record dated in the Kollam era, and belongs to the reign of the Vēnādu king Śrīvallavangōdai³. It is dated in the 149th year of the Kollam era,

² [This name occurs without the title vīra in a Vaṭṭeluttu inscription from Viranam in the Travancore State. The late Professor Sundaram Pillai has called the king Kēralavarman II and assigned A D 1193 for his date (Ind Ant Vol XXIV p 283) — V V.]

on a Sunday corresponding to the Aśvati-nakshatra in the month Vriśchika when the planet Jupiter stood in the constellation Tulā. Professor Kielhorn kindly contributes the following remarks on the date —“ If the date were correctly recorded, it would correspond, for the year 149 of the Kollam era, to Sunday, the 8th November A.D. 973, which was the 15th day of the month of Vriśchika, and on which [the 11th tithi of the bright half of Margasīra ended 11 h 12 m, while] the nakshatra was Révatī for 16 h. 25 m, after mean sunrise, and Aśvinī (Aśvati) for the rest of the day. On the same day Jupiter's mean longitude was $191^{\circ} 44'$, and his true longitude $195^{\circ} 27'$, i.e. in either case Jupiter was in the sign Tulā ”

“ The difficulty here is, that the day should have been described as the day of the nakshatra Aśvinī, when this nakshatra only commenced 16 h 25 m after mean sunrise, and I have no doubt whatever that either Aśvinī (Aśvati) has been quoted erroneously instead of Révatī, or Sunday instead of Monday. If the week-day were Monday,¹ the date would regularly correspond to Monday, the 10th November A.D. 973, the 16th day of Vriśchika, when the nakshatra was Aśvinī (Aśvati) for 16 h. 25 m after mean sunrise, and when Jupiter of course still was in the sign Tulā ”

The inscription informs us that Umayammai of Tirukkalayapuram, daughter of Ādicchehan, set up a bhaffāraka (image) in the temple at Ayurūr. The king Śrīvallavangōdai made a gift of land to Umayammai for the purpose of keeping up the services of the bhaffāraka set up in the Ayurūr temple, and she, in her turn, made over the subject matter of the gift to the Tiruchchengunrūr temple, in order that it might be placed under the management of the Poduvāls of that temple. From the produce of the land so given, the Poduvāls of the temple of Tiruchchengunrūr had to supply to the temple daily 4 nālis of rice for daily offerings and annually 200 paraīs (of 9 nālis each) of paddy.² If the word udai used in l 18 was really meant to be used in the sense of ‘of or belonging to,’ the inscription would warrant us to draw the conclusion that Umayammai was a near relation of Śrīvallavangōdai — either mother or wife. It would then be more probable to consider her as his wife than as his mother, as the passage Śrīvallavangōdaiy=udai Ādicchehan=Umayammai means Ādicchehan Umayammai belonging to Śrīvallavangōdai. She might perhaps be the daughter of the Chōla king Āditya II,³ to whose time this record belongs. If, on the other hand, udai be a mistake for idai then no sort of relationship need exist between the two.⁴

The inscription employs several peculiar terms which require some explanation each. The word aiṭṭipṭu (ll 8 and 19) implies ‘acquisition by the pouring of water.’ This mode of acquisition differs from others, such as purchase, etc.⁵ The meaning of the expressions kīḷidu and idaiy=iḍu is not definitely known. Kīḷ-iḍu literally means ‘that which is placed under,’⁶ and idaiy=iḍu, ‘that which is placed in the middle.’ A piece of land placed under the management of a person was perhaps called a kīḷiḍu with reference to that person. If this person subject to a third party, the person subletting seems to be the idaiy=idan, i.e. he is the middle man between the owner of the property and the sub-tenant. It is in this sense that the passages of the inscription, in which these terms occur have been translated. The name poduvāl was given to a class of people who were obliged for service in temples. It has now become the name of a sub-caste among the Ambalavāsī section of the Malayālis. Then again, the word ūrālan is explained variously as a trustee of an endowed temple, magistrat de la ville, or a patron or founder of a temple. I believe it is used here in the first two meanings. The term adhikārī occurs in the inscriptions of the Tamil and Malayālam countries, and is used in the sense of 'an officer in charge of a division,'¹ and it is in this sense the term is used in line 23 of the present record. The phrase mukhālvattam implies, according to Dr. Gundert, a Bhagavatī temple. If this be the sense in which it is employed in our inscription, then the bhattāraka set up by Umayammai might be taken to be Bhagavatī. But its literal meaning, 'the three-fourths of a vattam (encut or group of villages),' and the use of the bhattāraka instead of bhattārakī preclude the possibility of its being a Bhagavatī temple in the present instance. How mukhālvattam came to mean a Bhagavatī temple is not known. The meaning of the expressions Śīrūrñadai and Śīrūrñadai-ttandam is not clear. Hence they have been tentatively translated as "the custom obtaining in small towns" and "the fine levied in accordance with the custom obtaining in small towns."

³ [The record may belong either to the reign of Āditya II or of his successor Madhuranāka. If Umayammai was the daughter of the Chōla king Āditya II, it is difficult to understand why he is described as a native of Tirukkalayapuram. In all probability she was a private individual —V V.]

The places mentioned in this inscription are —Kollam, Tirukkalayapuram, Ayirūr, Tiruchchengunrūr, Idaiyāmanam, Murunnaiyūr, Manalmukku, Punalūr and Kudagōttūr. Of these Kollam, Ayirūr and Tiruchchengunrūr are the modern Quilon, Ayirūr and Chengunnūr² (the head-quarters of the tālnka of the same name) in North Travancore. Idaiyāmanam might be identified with Edaman, a station on the Mamyachi-Quilon branch of the South Indian Railway, and Punalūr is another station on the same line. I am not able to identify the rest.

(Lines 1 to 7) Hail! Prosperity! In the year one hundred and forty-nine after Kollam appeared, on a Sunday corresponding⁶ to the Achchuvadī (āsvatī-nakṣatra) in the month of Mīrichchigam (Vṛiścika), when Jupiter stood in Tūlā—while⁷ the great men of the *parudai*⁸ (assembly) of Ṭṭiruchchengunṛūr were pleased to be assembled⁹ on this day in the high hall of the palace (situated) in the flower garden of Kollam, Śrīvallavangōdai, (the king) of Vēnādu gave, by the pouring of water, to Âdichchaṇ=Umayammai of Ṭṭirukkalayapuram, the *baṭṭārakar*¹⁰ set up by Âdichchaṇ=Umayammai at Ayurūr, and the lands belonging to the baṭṭārakar.

(Ll 8 to 11) Âdichchaṇ=Umayammai gave, as kīl-idu to the baṭṭārakar of Ṭṭiruchchengunṛūr, by pouring water in the hands of the poduvāl,¹¹ what she acquired by gift,¹² so that (he)

If then the week day be Sunday, Nāyir=ānda would correspond to the modern Nāyirāḷcha and the word āḷcha which Dr Gundert derives from the root āḷu 'to sink' may, in that case, be derived from the root āḷ 'to rule' — V V]

⁸ [The word parudai occurs also in the form paradaḥ and is a tadbhava of the Sanskrit pariśat — V V]

(Ll 16 to 17) He that abets the former shall also be subject to a fine in the same way.

(Ll 17 to 19) Both the mukkāl-vattam of Ayurūr and the idaivīdu belonging to the bhaṭṭārakar, mentioned above, are thus the acquisitions in gift of Ādiehchan=Umayammai (of, or) related to Śrīvallavangōdai¹⁰

² [I would read in the original chēvad=ari (l. 9) and chēvadū nel (l. 10) and take chēvadū nel as equivalent to sennei which occurs in the Ambāsamudram inscription of Varaguna-Mahārāja (above, p 90) and which according to Winelow means "superior kind of rice, of a yellowish hue — as seṇḍāli."—V V.]

⁸ I e he who contributes to the dwindling of this charity

¹⁰ [Instead of Ayurūr=piradittai śeyda paṭṭāragar of line 6, we have here Ayurūr mukkāl-vattam which to a certain extent confirms the meaning 'shrine' of mukkāl-vattam. Instead of paṭṭāragarakk=olḷa pām in line 6, we have here paṭṭāragarakk=olḷa idaivīdu, which denotes the interest which the Ayurūr shrine possessed in the land acquired by Ādiehchan-Umayammai from Śrīvallavangōdai. Consequently, the sentence repeats the statement made in lines 5 to 7 that Ādiehchan-Umayammai had obtained the concession from Śrīvallavangōdai. Accordingly, it seems to me that Śrīvallavangōdaiy=udai at the end of l. 18 is a simple clerical mistake for Śrīvallavangōdaiy=ida. If any such relationship as would be implied by the use of the word udai were intended, it would be more natural to expect it noted when Ādiehchan Umayammai is mentioned for the first time. Besides, it would be unusual for the mother or wife of Śrīvallavangōdai to enter into a transaction of this nature with him.—V V.]

No 33 —THREE EARLY BRAHMI INSCRIPTIONS

By PROFESSOR H. LUDERS, PH D, ROSTOCK

I.—BRITISH MUSEUM STONE INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF KANISHKA.

On the occasion of a visit to the British Museum in the autumn of 1906, I discovered in one of the cases of the Northern Gallery the stone bearing the subjoined inscription, which, as far as I know, has never been published before. At my request impressions were taken, from which I have prepared the transcript. Subsequently Dr Fleet kindly sent me the photograph of the stone reproduced in the accompanying plate.

Nothing seems to be known about the origin of the stone, but the characters, the language and the date of the inscription prove that it comes from Northern India.

The sculpture at the top of the stone represents a man and a woman sitting on a bench. The woman to the left, wearing a loin-cloth and a girdle and the usual ornaments round the neck, the wrists, the ankles and in the lobes of the ear, rests her left elbow on the knee of her left leg which she has placed on the top of the bench, and turns her laughing face to the spectator. The male person also is wearing a necklace, bracelets, ear-drops, and a dhoti covering the knees. He is sitting astride, and with the right hand he touches, or points to, a sort of stand placed between the two persons on the bench and bearing what would seem to be a cushion adorned by three small square marks and supporting some bell-shaped object. Right over the head of the man there appears something which at first sight looks almost like a club, but which in my opinion probably is the mutilated head of a cobra. As the stone is broken off immediately above the head of the female person, it is quite possible that her head also was overshadowed by a similar representation of a serpent's head, and it seems to me very probable therefore that the sculpture represents a Nāga and his wife.

The writing is Brāhmī of the earlier Kushana type. The subscript ya is expressed by the full sign, and the sha shows the old form with the small cross-bar. The language is the usual mixed dialect. The inscription, which is dated in the tenth year of mahārāja dēvaputra Kanishka, records the gift of a temple. Details will be discussed below.

REMARKS.

1 The anusvāra is indistinct because it is crossed by the line forming the base of the sculpture — 2 The reading of the bracketed characters is certain, though the surface of the stone has peeled off at the corner — 3 This figure also has suffered from the peeling off of the surface, but the reading is beyond doubt — 4 The ē is very indistinct, and the correct reading may possibly be purvaya or purvayam — 5 At first sight one might feel inclined to read nitarāyam, but the base-line of the first letter is quite straight, whereas na has a distinctly curved base. I feel therefore sure that what appears to be the continuation of the base-line to the left, is merely due to a flaw in the stone — 6 The two convergent side-lines of the va are not very distinct, just as in the same letter in line 3, and there appears a vertical in the middle which makes the letter look almost like na. But this line is far too thin to really form part of the letter and must be accidental — 7 The bracketed letters of these two words are more or less damaged, but the reading seems to be sure — 8 The ē-stroke is added to the top of the letter, whereas in dē in the first line it is added in the middle — 9 The last two letters are damaged, but only the ya can be said to be conjectural.

NOTES

The orthography of the inscription is very irregular, double consonants, long vowels and the anusvāra being frequently not expressed in writing. A long ā appears in the word hārmya. According to the St. Petersburg Dictionary the same form is found also in the Taitt. Ār VI, 6, 2 instead of the ordinary harmya occurring in the corresponding verse in Atharvā XVIII, 4, 55. In hārmyan=datam the final m is converted into the nasal before the following mute, which is rare in inscriptions in this dialect. Another instance is found in the concluding words of the Mathurā inscription, above Vol I p 386, No 8 priyatām=bhagavān=Rishabhasrih, which at the same time help us to understand the phrase found at the end of the present record priyatām dēvi grāmasya.

Of greater interest is the spelling of the king's name, Kānīshka, with a long vowel in the first syllable and a lingual n. With regard to the latter point, the seven Brāhmī inscriptions that have preserved the name are in perfect agreement¹. In the Kharōṣṭhī inscriptions of Saṅgavihār² and Zeda³ the name is read as Kanīshka, in that of Manikyāla as Kaneshka,⁴ but I am by no means sure whether in the two last mentioned inscriptions the readings Kanīshka and Kaneshka would not be preferable. On the whole, contemporary records certainly are in favour of the spelling with the lingual n, and I would therefore propose to use Kanishka as the common form of the name. The spelling with the long vowel in the first syllable as in the present inscription is unusual, but it does not stand quite alone. In the Sarnath inscription, No 3^a, the editor, it is true, reads Kanishkasya, but the photo-lithograph¹ distinctly shows Kanishkasya.

Turning to the special object of the inscription, we may infer from the concluding words that the temple was dedicated to a goddess, and the representation of the two Nāgas above the inscription makes it not unlikely, I think, that the goddess intended was a Nāgī. That during the Kushana period there existed temples for the worship of serpents in Northern India, is well attested by the two Mathurā inscriptions² which mention the temple (st[h]āna) of the nāgēndra Dadhukarna and a servant at the temple of the same Dadhukarna (Dadhukarnnadivikulika).

The most difficult words of the inscription are utarāyam navamukāyam. I have thought for some time that they might be part of the date and mean 'on the following (i.e. intercalated) month (lunar day)', but for two reasons this idea must be given up. Firstly, such a statement would be in the wrong place after etayā pūjayē, and secondly, as Professor Kielhorn informs me, uttara is never used in the sense of adhika or *dvitīya*³. The words must therefore be connected with hirmyan=datan, and as a form ending in -āyam can hardly be anything else but the locative singular of a stem in ā, utarānavamukā would seem to denote either the locality where the temple was erected or possibly, the goddess to whom it was dedicated. However, these explanations are far from satisfactory. Neither has navamukā the appearance of being the name of a locality, nor does utarānavamukā in the least sound like the name of a goddess or a Nāgī. I am at present unable to solve this difficulty.

II —MATHURĀ STONE INSCRIPTION, DATED SAMVAT 74.

This inscription is engraved on a stone-slab discovered by Sir Alexander Cunningham in the Jail Mound at Mathurā. It was first edited in 1870, together with facsimiles, by Rajendralala Mitra in the Journ Beng As Soc Vol XXXIX Part I p 129, No 15, and by Dowson in the Journ Roy As Soc New Ser Vol. V p 183, No 4. In 1873 Cunningham published it again with a facsimile in the Arch Surv Rep Vol III p 32, No 8, and in 1904 I have treated it myself in the Ind Ant Vol XXXIII p 106, No 20. I edit it here again for a special reason. When I was in Oxford in 1905, Professor Hoernle kindly made over to me the collection of impressions, rubbings and drawings of inscriptions formed by him when preparing the second volume of the Corpus Inscriptionum Indicarum, which was to contain the 'Indo-Seythic' inscriptions. In this collection there is also the impression which I have used for the present edition. It cannot be said to be first-rate and, as unfortunately most of the impressions of this collection, it has been tampered with in some places by pencilling out parts of letters that in the impression itself are more or less effaced. Nevertheless the impression is of the greatest value as shown by the following note written on the margin, probably by General Cunningham himself: 'The only impression now available —The stone has been lost at Agra.' Under these circumstances it seemed to me desirable to publish the accompanying reproduction of the impression, which in spite of its shortcomings naturally is far superior to the drawings published hitherto. Professor Hoernle's collection contains besides two facsimiles. The one is an eye-copy in red and blue pencil on a slightly reduced scale, made according to a marginal note by Captain Watts, Royal Engineers, the other is a pencil-tracing on transparent paper, perhaps made from the stone itself, but afterwards gone over with China-ink, blue and red pencil, and practically of no value.

The inscription is divided by a blank space into two parts. The upper portion, containing eight lines, is complete with the exception of some letters at the end of the first two lines, which have disappeared by the breaking off of the right corner of the stone. Of the lower portion which in Dowson's and Cunningham's facsimiles has been omitted altogether, nothing is left but faint traces of some characters in the first line. The characters are Brāhmī of the Kushana type. The sha appears in the older form with the small cross-bar, but the subscript ya shows the cursive form. The language is the mixed dialect. The inscription is dated in the year 74 of a mahārāja rā[ātirāja] dēvaputra whose name began with Vāsu, but owing to its fragmentary state its real purport cannot be made out.

REMARKS.

1 The ā-stroke is distinctly visible in the impression, although it does not appear in Capt Watts' eye-copy —2 The ā-stroke is uncertain. Restore rājātirāja. —3 The ā-stroke is quite distinct, though here again it is omitted in Capt Watts' eye-copy. As regards the restoring of the line, I refer to the remarks below —4 The ī-stroke, omitted in Capt Watts' eye-copy, is quite distinct —5 Owing to a flaw in the stone, a small portion of the lower left cross-bar of the symbol has disappeared. In the impression somebody has tried to restore the missing portion by adding in pencil a hook turning upwards, but there is nothing to warrant this restoration. There can be no doubt that the symbol had the shape of a plain St. Andrew's cross, just as in other inscriptions. The lower right cross-bar also has been pencilled over in the impression, but this is of no consequence as it is perfectly distinct. The meaning of the symbol will be discussed below. —6 The upper portion of the m and the ā are not quite distinct —7 The ī-stroke is indistinct, and the śa has suffered from a hole in the paper —8 The apparent curving of the tail of the a has been caused by pencilling. In Capt Watts' eye-copy the tail is quite straight —9 Above the pu there is a distinct stroke which must be accidental. —10 There are some strokes behind and below the ta, but they are not noticed in Capt Watts' eye-copy and may be accidental. The ā-stroke is not very distinct, and the reading Talakīyam would be possible —11 Capt Watts expressly states that there are no traces of letters before the nā of line 7 and the li of line 8. The nā has been pencilled over so as to look almost like sā, but there can be no doubt that it is nā, and as such it appears also in Capt Watts' eye-copy —12 The ya is damaged, but certain. —13 The lsh of the first and the r of the second syllable are damaged, but certain. The ā of lshā is very faint and not given in Capt Watts' eye-copy. The last syllable may also be trā as in Capt Watts' eye-copy —14 Of this word only faint traces are visible in the impression, and the reading rests almost entirely on Capt. Watts' eye-copy. Instead of da Capt Watts gives dā.

Mathura inscription of Samvat 74,

NOTES

The orthography shows the usual features. The lengthening of the vowel in dānda appears again in the same word in the Sst-Mahet inscription, above Vol VIII, p 181, and we may further compare such forms as āntévāsisa and āntévāsiniyē in the Mathurā inscriptions, Ep Ind Vol II p 198 f, Nos 1 and 4.

As regards the date, the first symbol of the date of the year requires a fuller consideration, as it has been differently interpreted. As already stated above, it has the shape of a St Andrew's cross. Cunningham¹ originally read it as 40, and he was followed by Dowson, who in editing the Mathurā inscriptions everywhere adopted Cunningham's readings of the dates.² In 1891 Bühler expressed his belief that the sign really represented 70,³ and this opinion was endorsed in the following year by Cunningham in his paper on the coins of the Kushanas in the Numismatic Chronicle, Ser III Vol XII p 50, note 6.

I accordingly read the symbol as 70 when I published the inscription in the Indian Antiquary, and I am still convinced that Bühler was right, but in order to settle this question definitely, it will be necessary to examine the other Northern Brāhmi inscriptions where the same sign occurs. They are the following seven, all of which come from Mathurā or its neighbourhood —

(1) Mathurā inscription of the time of svāmin mahāśhatrapa Śodāsa, Ep Ind Vol. II p 199, No 2, and Plate. In the Vienna Or Journ Vol V p. 177, Bühler read the symbol as 40, adding 70 in brackets. In the Ep Ind, loc cit, Bühler again gave 40 in the text, but added in a note that the symbol might possibly be 70. And lastly in Ep Ind Vol IV. p 55, note 2, he stated that he would now remove the alternative reading 42, which he had thought admissible at first.

(2) Kāman inscription, Ep Ind Vol. II. p 212, No 42, and Plate. Here Bühler rendered the sign by 70 in the text, but added in a footnote that it might also be read as 40.

(3) Mathurā inscription, Journ Beng As Soc Vol XXXIX Part I p 130, No 17, and Plate; Journ Roy. As Soc New Ser Vol V p 183, No 5, and Plate, Arch Surv Rep Vol. III. p 33, No 11, and Plate. Cunningham and Dowson read the sign as 40, and I have followed them in Ind Ant Vol. XXXIII. p 102.

(4) Mathurā inscription, Journ Beng As Soc Vol XXXIX Part I. p 127, No 1, and Plate, Journ Roy As Soc New Ser Vol V p 182, No 1, and Plate, Arch Surv Rep Vol III p 33, No 12, and Plate. Cunningham and Dowson read the sign as 40, and I have adopted this reading in Ind Ant Vol XXXIII. p 101, No 11.

(5) Mathurā inscription, Journ Beng As Soc Vol XXXIX Part I p 127, No 2, and Plate, Journ Roy As Soc New Ser Vol V p 183, No 2, and Plate, Arch. Surv. Rep Vol III. p 34, No. 13, and Plate. Cunningham and Dowson read the sign as 40, and I have followed them in Ind Ant Vol XXXIII, p 102, No. 13.

(6) Mathurā inscription, Journ Beng As Soc Vol XXXIX. Part I. p 130, No 18, and Plate. The facsimile is very poor. In the Ind Ant Vol XXXIII p 101, No 12, I have read the sign as 40, but I have pointed out also that the inscription is possibly identical with that referred to under No 3.

(7) Mathurā inscription, Journ Roy As Soc New Ser Vol V p 184, No 7, and Plate, Arch Surv. Rep Vol III. p 34, No 14, and Plate. Cunningham and Dowson read the sign as 40.

³ Ep. Ind Vol. I p 373, note 7.

It thus appears that the symbol has hitherto been treated sometimes as 40 and sometimes as 70, but it will be readily conceded, I think, that it is impossible to assign two different values to the same sign in inscriptions of the same locality and the same period. But before we can decide which of the two interpretations is the correct one, we shall have to examine also the other symbols supposed to represent either 40 or 70 in the early Brāhmī inscriptions of Northern India. The following inscriptions, which for convenience sake I number in continuation of the list given above, must be taken into consideration —

(8) Mathurā inscription of the time of mahārāja Huviksha, Ep Ind. Vol I p 387, No 9, and Plate. The symbol resembles the ligature pta and was read by Bühler as 40.

(9) Mathurā inscription, Ep Ind. Vol I p 387, No 10, and Plate. The general appearance of the symbol is the same as in No 8, but its lower part is not quite distinct in the photo-lithograph. Bühler read the sign as 40.

(10) Mathurā inscription, Arch Surv Rep Vol III p 33, No 10, and Plate, Ep Ind. Vol I p 396, No 30, and Plate. The symbol generally has the same form as that in No 8, but its lower part is a little more cursive. Cunningham and Bühler read it as 40.

(11) Mathurā inscription of the time of mahārāja Huvishka, Arch Surv Rep Vol. III p 34, No 15, and Plate. The symbol is the same as in No 8. Cunningham read it as 40, and I have followed him in my treatment of the record in the Ind Ant. Vol XXXIII p 103, No 14.

(12) Mathurā inscription, Ep Ind. Vol II p 204, No 20, and Plate, p 321, and Plate. The upper part of the symbol is the same as in Nos 8—11, but its lower part is a distinct loop. Bühler read the sign as 70.

(13) Mathurā inscription, Ep Ind. Vol I p 387, No. 11, and Plate. As Bühler expressly states in a footnote that the symbol is a plain pta, it may have been so in the impression before him. In the photo-lithograph, however, it does not bear the slightest resemblance to that sign, but looks exactly like the letter bra. Bühler read the symbol as 40.

(14) Sālichī inscription of the time of mahārāja rājātirāja devaputra Shāhi Vāsashka, Ep. Ind. Vol II p 369 f, and Plate. The symbol found here has quite a peculiar shape. Provided that the vertical standing behind it does not belong to it, but is part of the following sign for 8, it resembles the usual sign for 20. As such it was read also at first by Bühler, but at Cunningham's suggestion he afterwards took it to be 70. The reading of the sign was then discussed at length by Dr Fleet in a paper in the Journ Roy As Soc 1903, p 326 ff, and he came to the conclusion that it was 20. But later on, when Mr. Vincent Smith in his Early History of India, p 238, had suggested that the symbol might be read as 60, Dr Fleet admitted the possibility of this interpretation, see Journ Roy As Soc. 1905, p 357¹.

Leaving aside for the present the symbols found in the last three inscriptions, it appears that there are two symbols, the St Andrew's cross and the pta, one of which must represent 70 and the other 40. Now in the inscription which forms the subject of this paper the St Andrew's cross cannot represent 40, as in that case the inscription would be dated in the year 44 in the reign of a king whose name begins with Vāsu, whereas we know that from 33–60 Huvishka was the reigning monarch in this part of the country. Here, therefore, the St Andrew's cross must represent 70, and we must accordingly assign the same value to the symbol also in the inscriptions enumerated above under Nos. 1–7. We thus get the dates S. 72 for No 1, S. 74 for ¹ Another sign that originally was read 40 by Bühler, is found in the Mathurā inscription of the time of mahārāja rājātirāja devaputra Huvashka, Ep Ind. Vol I p 386, No 8, and Plate. Later on Bühler declared that on further consideration he read the symbol as 60, and as such it has been treated since then everywhere, see Ep Ind. Vol II p 204, note 61.

No 2, and S 77 for Nos 3-7 The inscriptions themselves contain nothing to contradict this result No 4, it is true, mentions the mahārāja rājatarāja devaputra Huvishka, but not in connection with the date, the inscription simply recording a gift to the vihāra of that king As to the date S 72 for the mahākshatrapa Śolāsa, I refer to the remarks of Dr Fleet in the Journ Roy As Soc 1907, p 1024 ff

If the St Andrew's cross represents 70, the sign resembling pta must be 40 The inscription No. 8, therefore, would be dated in S 44, No 9 in S 45, No 10 in S 47, and No 11 in S 48, which is in accordance with the statements of Nos 8 and 11 that their dates fall into the reign of Huvishka or Huvishka

The symbol occurring in No 12 undoubtedly differs from either of the two symbols found in Nos 1-11, but whereas it bears no resemblance whatever to the cross-shaped sign, it is easily intelligible as a cursive development of the pta sign¹ In my opinion therefore this sign also must be taken as 40, and the inscription as being dated in S 49, not S 79 There is another point in favour of this interpretation The inscription records a gift made at the request of the venerable Vṛiddhahastī (Vṛiddhahastin), a preacher in the Koṭṭiya (Kottiya) gana, the Vaṇṇa (Vaṇi) sāṇṇi There is another Mathurā inscription dated in S 60,² recording a gift made at the request of the ganin the venerable Khatuna, a pupil of this same Vṛiddhahastin If Vṛiddhahastin in S 60 had a pupil who had acquired the dignity of ganin, he must have been a man advanced in years at that time, and although, of course, it is not impossible that he was still alive in S 79, it would certainly seem more natural to find him as a spiritual adviser in S. 49 and his pupil in the same capacity eleven years later on, in S 60

Little can be said about the symbol occurring in No 13 The form appearing in the photograph is quite peculiar and unlike any other symbol in the inscriptions from Mathurā or elsewhere, but in accordance with Bühler's statement, it may be provisionally taken as 40

As regards the symbol in No 14, I agree with Dr Fleet that there is no reason whatever why it should be 70, as even the sign in No 12, which Bühler cited in support of this interpretation, is to be read not 70, but 40 On the other hand, I feel sure that it is not 20 I have lately received through Dr Konow impressions of an inscription running round the base of a pillar preserved in the Mathurā Museum The inscription, which is in Brāhmī characters of the Kushana type, is partly worn, but the date is quite distinct Now the sign for the tens in the date of the year is the same as that in the Saichū inscription, showing again the vertical, which is thus proved to be an integral part of it and not to belong to the following sign And although unfortunately the text of the inscription contains nothing that would enable us to form a positive opinion on the value of the symbol, we may safely assert that it cannot be 20, as we find this number expressed by the usual sign in the date of the day Lastly also the proposal to treat the symbol as 60 cannot be said to be convincing, the sign that has hitherto been read as 60 in the inscriptions of the Kushana period³ certainly being entirely different I do not want to offer a new hypothesis In my opinion we shall have to wait for fresh materials before we can hope to arrive at a satisfactory result in this question In how far the restoring of the king's name in our inscription of S 74 is influenced by this uncertainty, will be shown below.

I know that the results arrived at above are partly not in harmony with those deduced from the coins of the Western Kshatrapas The numeral signs occurring in the legends of those coins are given in table IX, col V, of Bühler's Indische Paläographie from Professor Rapson's table in the Journ Roy As Soc 1890, Plate to p 6²⁹. Here the St Andrew's cross has been entered as 40, and a sign much resembling the pta and another looped sign almost exactly like that of No 12 as 70. I do not wish to throw any doubts on the correctness of these readings, but I contend that for such questions inscriptions must be treated separately according to time and locality.

Rajendralala Mitra, Dowson and Cunningham agreed in restoring the name of the king as Vāsudēvaśāśya. When I edited the inscription from the facsimiles published by my predecessors I drew attention to the circumstance that the available space is hardly sufficient for the three śāśyas devasya, and I proposed to restore the name as Vāsushkasya, as this name of the king seemed to be attested by two other inscriptions of S 76 and S 78,¹ whereas the first undoubted record of Vāsudēva's reign was dated in S 80. What I said about the difficulty of supplying three syllables is confirmed by the impression now before me, although owing to the frequent irregularity of the writing in these inscriptions it is impossible to speak on this point with absolute certainty. But the evidence for the existence of a king Vāsushka in S 76 and S 78 is not so strong as it seemed to be formerly. As I have tried to show above, the date of the Sāñchi inscription mentioning a king Vāśashka² is quite uncertain, and the Mathurā inscription mentioned by Führer as being dated in S 76 and recording repairs in the reign of Vāsushka has not yet been published. As Dr Konow informs me, it cannot even be found now, Führer's trenches having been filled up again a long time ago and the exact spot where the inscription was found being no more known. Under these circumstances a decision is of course impossible for the present. If Führer's statement after all should prove correct, I should unhesitatingly restore Vāsu to Vāsushkasya, otherwise the reading Vāsudēvasya will have to be accepted.

The rest of the inscription calls for few remarks. Talakiya or Talakī seems to be the name of a locality, but I am unable to identify it. The title mahādandanāyaka is frequent in the inscriptions of the Gupta period and later times. In the Kushana inscriptions it has not yet been found before, but the subordinate title of dandanāyaka occurs in the Manikyāla inscription,³ where the correct reading in l 2 is, not Laladoḍa-nayago, but Lala-dadanayago.

III.—MATHURĀ STONE INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF SONDĀSA.

This inscription was first published, together with a facsimile, in 1870 by Professor Dowson in the Journ Roy As Soc New Ser Vol V. p 188, No 29. In 1873 it was published again with a facsimile by Cunningham in the Arch Surv Rep Vol III. p 30, No 1. And in 1904 I have tried to edit the text from those two facsimiles in the Ind Ant. Vol. XXXIII. p 149, No 24. For the present edition of the record I have made use of an impression found in Professor Hoernle's collection described above.

Cunningham states that the stone bearing the inscription was found in the Jail Mound at Mathurā. According to Dowson, it has been cut through and the first part of it has been carried off. On the other hand, the facsimiles distinctly showed that something was missing at the right end, and thus I was led to suppose that the stone was damaged on both sides. This, however, is not the case. Nothing is missing at the beginning of the writing on the left, and on the right also only one letter has been cut off at the end of the first two lines. With this exception the inscription is in an excellent state of preservation.

² This is the reading suggested by Dr Fleet, Journ Roy As Soc 1903, p 326, but he is himself inclined to look upon this form as a mere variant of Vāsushka, if the existence of such a name should be proved; see Journ. Roy As Soc 1905, p 357 f.

³ Journ As Ser. IX. Vol VII. p 8 f.

The characters are of the so-called archaic type of the Mathurā inscriptions, see especially the letters da, sa and sha, and the subscript ya. The language is the mixed dialect. The inscription is not dated. It records various gifts of a Brahman of the Śāgrava (Saigra) gōtra, the treasurer of svāmīn mahākshatrapa Śōmdāsa. For details I refer to the remarks below.

TEXT.

REMARKS.

1 As to the reading of this name see the remarks below.—2 Little is left of the pa, but the reading is certain. Restore pushka.—3 The outlines of the letters ni udapānō ārāmō are more or less touched up with pencil, but the reading is perfectly certain.—4 The reading śilā is certain, although the letters are entirely spoiled by being gone over with pencil.

TRANSLATION.

By the treasurer of the lord, the mahākshatrapa Śōmdāsa, a Brāhman of the Śāgrava (Saigra) gōtra, a tank, the western tank of these twin tanks, a reservoir, a grove, a pillar and this stone-slab (was caused to be made).

NOTES

As regards the language, the most interesting form is imāshām. Apparently in the dialect of Mathurā the genitives plur. of the pronoun were, as in Pāli, imēsaṃ and imāsaṃ, and the author of the inscription translated the latter form into imāshām as he was wont to render imāsaṃ by imēshām. The nominative sing. masc. of the same pronoun is found at the end of line 2, but unfortunately nothing is left of it but the initial i. The word pushkarani shows in the third syllable the vocalisation of the Pāli poṭṭharani. Yamada corresponds to Skt yamala or yamala, as the word would be written in Southern manuscripts. The construction of the inscription is rather peculiar, the verb or participle on which the instrumentals brāhmanēna, etc., depend, being omitted.

The first point to command attention is the name of the mahākshatrapa, which is generally supposed to be Śōdāsa. In the present inscription there is a distinct sign above the so. It must have been found also in the impressions used by Dowson and Cunningham, as the former reads Śāmdāsasya (for Śāmdāsasya) and the latter Saudāsasya (for Saudāsasya), although the facsimiles show no trace whatever of anusvāra or au. The sign cannot be the stroke denoting au, as it does not touch the upper line of the so, but is separated from it by a distinct blank space. It can only be an anusvāra of the same bulky shape as that in gaṃjavarēna and in pushkaranīnam.

The form Śōmdāsa has not yet been recognised anywhere else. In the second Brāhmī inscription at Mathurā mentioning this *mahākshatrapa*¹ Bühler read Śoḍāsasa, but the photograph by no means excludes the reading Śōmdāsasa. Right above the so there is a white spot scarcely less distinct than that above the ma of hēmantamāsa which Bühler read as anusvāra. In the Mathurā lion-capital inscription² Mr Thomas reads the name as Suḍasa and Sudisa, and with regard to coins, Professor Rapson has stated in the Journ. Roy. As. Soc. 1903, p. 289, note 3, that whenever the name is legible, the first akshara seems to be so, and that the alternative forms Su^o and Sau^o, given by Bhagvanlal and Cunningham respectively, cannot be certainly read on any of the specimens of the British Museum. But even if a re-examination should prove the readings Śodāsa and Śuddāsa to be correct, this would not invalidate the reading of the present inscription. Everybody familiar with the records of this period knows how often an anuvāsa is omitted in writing, and that on that account the reading Somdāsa, even if found once only, carries more weight than the reading Śodāsa occurring ten times. In my opinion therefore Somdāsa must be accepted as the general form of the name.

Scarcely less interesting is the designation of the donor. Dowson and Cunningham read gaṇavarēna, and Bühler, Vienna Or Journ. Vol V p 177, proposed to alter the unintelligible syllables gaṇa into rajā, 'during the reign'. The new reading gaṇavarēna shows that gaṇavāra, 'treasurer,' which hitherto was known only from the Rājatarāṅgini V, 177 and Kshēmaṇdra's Lō'aprahāsa, was an official title in India already in much earlier times. As recognised by Benfey,¹ gaṇavāra is the Persian ganjwar, and the use of this title is a new proof of the strong Parthian influence that made itself felt in Northern India from the time of Aśoka to the beginning of the Gupta empire.²

The donor calls himself by his gōtra name Śāgrava, which in correct Sanskrit would be Śaigra. According to the Gaṇapīṭha the Śaigra gōtra is referred to by Pāṇini in II, 4, 67 and IV, 1, 104. I have also no doubt that Professor Kern is right in identifying Śaigra with Pāli Siggava,³ the name of the patriarch who conferred the upasampadā ordination on the great Tissa Moggalliputta.⁴

No 34.—PATHARI PILLAR INSCRIPTION OF PARABALA;

By the late Professor F. KIELHORN, CIE, GÜTTINGEN⁵

Pathārī in Long 78° 15' and Lat 23° 56', is the chief town of the Native State of the same name in the Bhopāl Agency of Central India.⁶ Its antiquities were first described, in 1848, by Captain J. D. Cunningham, in the Journal As Soc Bengal, Vol XVII, Part I, p 305 ff. After stating that the locality of which he is treating includes two good-sized reservoirs or lakes, and that the present town of Pathārī and the smaller lake are distinguished by a single pillar and a solitary temple, Captain Cunningham on page 310 proceeds thus — 'Near to the western edge of the smaller lake stands the wand or pillar, now called of Bheem Sen. It is composed of a single block about 36 feet in height and 2½ thick. The shaft is square in section for a height of 8 feet, and it then becomes circular. . . . On one side of the square portion of the shaft there is a long inscription, much obliterated, and of which I failed to make even a tolerable impression.'

The pillar and its inscription were again noticed in 1880, by General Sir A. Cunningham, in his Archæol. Survey of India, Vol X, p 70, thus — 'Inside the town, on the top of the slope, there is a tall monolith with a ball-shaped capital. The shaft is circular, rising from a base 8 feet

² In the Journ. Roy. As. Soc. 1903, p 289 ff., Professor Rapson has described a coin that shows a general similarity to those of Śodāsa. With the exception of the first three akṣaras the inscription is not quite certain. Professor Rapson reads brāhmaṇa[na 90(?)da ra(?)tā(?) na]. Would it be too bold to conjecture that the brāhmaṇa mentioned here may have some connection with the brāhmaṇa Śaigra, the gaṇavāra of Śodāsa, and that the reading must be altered accordingly?

⁶ Constable's Hand Atlas of India Plate 27 D u.

3 inches high and 2 feet 9 inches square On the northern face there is a long inscription of 38 lines of small letters. It opens with an invocation to Lakshmi-Nārāyaṇa,¹ but the greater part of the record is so much worn as to be quite illegible Many of the letters here and there are in good order, and from their shapes I would assign the monument to somewhere about A D 600 Close by this pillar there is a small temple, with Vishnu sitting on Garud over the door-way.'

In October 1894 I received from Professor Hultzsch two impressions of the inscription, prepared by Mr H. Consens, Superintendent of the Archaeological Survey of India, Western Circle, and an excellent photograph² of it, taken by the same gentleman, was given to me two or three years afterwards by Dr Fleet From these materials I have already published a short account of the contents of the inscription and the tentative text of nine verses of it, in the Nachrichten der K Ges der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen for 1901, Part I, p 519 ff A repeated examination of the same materials now enables me to place before the reader, with some confidence, by far the greater part of this record, which, though troublesome to read, is not so illegible as it may have seemed to be on the original stone

The inscription contains 38 lines of writing which covers a space of about 2 feet broad by 2 feet 7 inches high It has certainly suffered greatly from exposure to the weather, especially in the middle and at the end of the lines all the way down, and for nearly the whole length of the last seven lines But fortunately³ all proper names of importance may be read with absolute certainty, at any rate all those that occur in lines 1—31, and the same remark applies to the date of the inscription at the end of line 31 The size of the letters is about $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in the topmost lines, but less in the lower part down to line 31, while it is somewhat larger again in lines 32—38 The inscription was written and engraved with great care and skill The characters belong to the northern alphabet such as, speaking generally, we find it eg in the Gwalior inscription of the reign of Bhôjadêva of the [Vikrama] year 933, published with a facsimile in Ep Ind Vol I p 159 f With our present knowledge of Indian epigraphy, we should assign them at once to about the 9th century A D They include the rare sign for gh, which has not come out well either in the impressions or in the photograph, in the word ghatit towards the end of line 15 The language of the inscription is Sanskrit The text is remarkably correct, and in respect of orthography the only points worth noticing here are that the sign for v is used for both v and b, and that the words amsa and dhvamsa are written ansi and dhvansa, in lines 2 and 8

The inscription consists of two parts. The first (and chief) part comprises lines 1—31, the second lines 32—38 This second part appears to be really a separate inscription, added by way of a postscript, which may record the installation of an image of Vishnu, but the exact purpose of which, owing to the damaged condition of lines 32—38, I have not been able to ascertain. What I may state with confidence is that, after the words ôṃ namah at the commencement of line 32, there are five verses, two in the Sragdharā metre, one in the Vasantatilakā metre, one in the Upajāti metre, and the fifth perhaps in the same metre So far as I can judge, the first and probably the second of these five verses contain some historical information, and it would therefore seem desirable to have a cast taken of this part of the inscription, which would enable one to decipher more of the text than I have succeeded in making out from the impressions and the photograph *

² The accompanying facsimile has been prepared under the superintendence of Prof. Hultzsch from Mr Consens' photograph A facsimile of the impressions would have been quite useless

³ Exposed as the pillar has been to all the effects of the Indian climate for more than a thousand years it seems wonderful that of these small letters, which were not deeply engraved, many should have been preserved so well as we find them to be

I am sanguine enough to hope that it will indeed some day be possible to make out the names which are hidden now in the second part of our inscription It will then perhaps also be found that this part likewise ends with a date in the 9th century of the Vikrama era, of which in my opinion there are traces in the second half of line 38

The first part (lines 1—31) also commences with ōṃ namaḥ and ends with a date which will be given below. Between the two there are 32 verses, the text of more than two-thirds of which may be given with perfect certainty, while there is no doubt about the general meaning of any of the rest. The verses form a prasasti, the main object of which is to record (in verses 25 and 26) that the king Parabala of some Rāshtrakūṭa family founded a temple of Śaūri (Hari, Viṣṇu), before which he erected the Garuda-crested pillar on which the inscription is engraved. The prasasti opens with four verses which invoke the protection of, and glorify, the god Viṣṇu, under the names of Murāri, Kṛishṇa and Hari. It then (in verses 5—7) relates that formerly there was a king Jējja, under whom 'this Rāshtrakūṭa vanīa' was flourishing, and whose (unnamed) elder brother, after defeating thousands of Karnāṭa soldiers with their arrays of elephants, obtained the Lāṭa kingdom. Jējja's son was Karkarāja (v. 11), who put to flight¹ the king Nāgavalōka and invaded his home (vv. 14 and 15). And Karkarāja's son was Parabala, represented as ruling the land when the inscription was composed (v. 18). The rest records that the pillar was actually set up by the king's chief minister, whose name is not clear in the impressions, and that the prasasti was composed by Harsha (v. 29) and engraved by the sūtradhāra Sāhila (v. 31), while the last verse 32 contains the usual prayer that the king's pious work and his fame may endure for ever. — The date at the end of line 31 is samvat 917 Chaitra-sudi 6 Śukrā, i e "Friday, the 6th of the bright half of Chaitra of the year 917". In this date the numeral figures for the year are particularly clear, and cannot be read in any other way. The figure for 9 is the same as e g in line 6 of the Dēḡgadh pillar inscription of the time of Bhōjadēva of the [Vikrama] year 919 (Archæol Surv of India, Vol X, Plate xxxiii 2), and in line 22 of the Gurmha plate of Jayādityadēva II of the [Vikrama] year 927 (Journ. As Soc. Beng Vol LXX Part I Plate i). The date must of course be referred to the Vikrama era. It is one of the earliest dates of that era which admit of exact verification and corresponds regularly, for the expired Kārttikādī Vikrama year 917, to Friday, the 21st March A.D. 861, when the 6th tithi of the bright half of Chaitra ended 16 h 44 m after mean sunrise.

The prasasti will, I think, be admitted to contain some rather pretty verses². Its author, so far as I can judge, was well acquainted, amongst other poetical works, with Māgha's Śiṣupālavadha, and in the composition of at least one verse he undoubtedly drew his inspiration from that poem³. I refer to verse 16, which may be compared with Śiṣ XIX 52. The former is —

drīṣyantē ripavō yasya nānūbhāranabhūṣitāḥ ||

"With their limbs all cut to pieces (and thus)⁴ decorated with manifold ornaments (ābharana), his enemies are seen to abide on various battle-fields (rana-bhū)."

And Māgha's verse is —

Śastravranamaya-srīmad-alamkaranabhūṣitāḥ |
dadṛśē śnyō Rāvanavad-alamkaranabhūṣitāḥ ||

"Decorated with glorious ornaments (alamkaraṇa) which consisted in the wounds inflicted by weapons, another looked like Rāvana, though abiding on a battle-field (rana-bhū) that was not connected with Lankā"⁵

² Compare e g verses 13, 15, 20 and 30.

Here we not merely have, at the end of each half verse, the synonymous words ābharana-bhūṣita and alāṃkaranabhūṣita, either of them similarly used in a double meaning, but we also find a form of the same verb (drīṣyantē and dadṛśē) in exactly the same position in both verses. At the same time the manner in which the verse of the Śiṣupālavadha commences, clearly shows how we ought to interpret the first half of Harsha's verse the ornaments with which the enemies were decorated consisted in the wounds inflicted on them when their limbs were cut to pieces. I am aware that what I have pointed out here is not of any great value now, because we have lately learnt from another inscription that Māgha lived long before the middle of the 9th century A.D.

Among the contents of the prafastī there are three points of particular interest. The first obviously is, that the inscription is one — the only one hitherto discovered — of a Rāshtrakūṭa king Parabala, for whom it furnishes a date in A.D. 861. The second point is, that Parabala's father Karkarāja defeated, and invaded the territory of, a king Nāgāvalōka. And to these may be added the statement that an unnamed elder brother of Karkarāja's father Jējja, after defeating certain Karnātas, took possession of the Lāṭa kingdom.

As regards the first point, we knew indeed from the very earliest Sanskrit inscription brought to the notice of European scholars — the Mungir plate of Dharmapāla¹ translated by Sir Charles Wilkins in 1781 — that the Pāla king Dharmapāla married 'Rannādēvī, a daughter of the glorious Parabala, the ornament of the Rāshtrakūṭa family,' but as the name Parabala could not be traced in any subsequent inscription, scholars conjectured that it was a biruda of one of the Rāshtrakūṭas of Malkhēd, perhaps of Gōvīndarāja III or Amoghavarsha I, according to the notions which they had formed regarding the time of Dharmapāla. Now there cannot remain any reasonable doubt that the Rāshtrakūṭa Parabala of our Pathari inscription is identical with the Parabala of the Mungir plate, a daughter of whom was married by Dharmapāla. But it does not follow that Dharmapāla's reign must therefore be taken to have commenced so late as the middle of the 9th century. Many Indian kings have had unusually long reigns, and at present we know nothing about the length of Parabala's reign, while all that we know for certain in this respect regarding Dharmapāla is that he reigned for at least 32 years. The zeal and activity displayed by the officials of the Archaeological Survey in the search for epigraphical documents encourage us to hope that before long we shall be in possession of materials that will definitely fix both the exact time of Dharmapāla's reign and the chronology of events generally which took place in Northern India during the 8th and 9th centuries.

The king Nāgāvalōka² who was defeated by Parabala's father Karkarāja seems to have been a ruler of some importance. I have no doubt that he is identical with that Nāgāvalōka who is mentioned in verse 13 of the Harsha inscription of Vīgraharāja,³ in terms which would imply that he was the overlord, and who certainly was a contemporary, of the Chāhamāna Gūvaka I of Śākambhari, whom in my Synchronistic Table for Northern India I have roughly placed at the commencement of the 9th century. There has lately been discovered a copper-plate inscription of a Chāhamāna Mahāsāmantādhipati, which records a grant that was made at Bhṛign-kachchha in the increasing reign of victory of the glorious Nāgāvalōka, and which apparently is dated in the [Vikrama] year 813 (corresponding to about A.D. 756).⁴ I owe a photograph of it to the kindness of Mr. Gaurishankar Hirachand Ojha, but would wait for impressions before expressing an opinion regarding its genuineness and value.

Nor can I say anything definite at present regarding the conquest of the Lāṭa kingdom by the elder brother of Parabala's grandfather Jējja. The known names of chiefs connected with Lāṭa from about the middle of the 8th century and the available dates will be found above, Vol VIII App II. p. 4. It will be seen there that we have no date, and know little about Lāṭa, between A.D. 757 and A.D. 812, which is just the period in which, judging from the date of the present inscription, we should have to place Jējja and his elder brother.

In the text which follows I have indicated by marks of interrogation all passages about which I am myself doubtful, and have left blanks where I could have put in only a purely conjectural reading. Others may be able to supply what is wanting or to find the correct readings where I have failed to do so. I know that I have shunned no trouble and may perhaps be permitted to say—

ABRIDGED TRANSLATION ⁴

(Verse 5) There was formerly a king whose hands were marked with auspicious discs, who was endowed with fortune, and who, harassing hanghty foes and powerful adversaries, was the support of the earth, who with his arm overthrew princes, who warded off hell and destroyed huge elephants,⁵ and who, although thus like Kamsa's enemy (Krishna) [whose hand bears a choice disc, who is united with Lalshmi, who harassed hanghty foes and powerful adversaries, and supported the earth, who lifted up with his arms the mountain (Gôvardhana), slew (the demon) Naraka, and destroyed (Kamsa's) huge elephant], did not bear Krishna's body,⁶—the glorious Jējja, praised by the noble

(V 6) While he was king this glorious Râshtrakûta family was prosperous, a family in which there is pleasing progeny, which is without blemish, noble, large, and free from trouble being like the bamboo, which has pleasing shoots, is free from flaws, high, broad, and without thorns]

(V 7) His elder brother, having defeated in battle thousands of Karnâta soldiers whose might was increased by arrays of enormous elephants, obtained the broad Lâta kingdom

(V 11) Jējja's son⁷ was the glorious Karkarâja, who, . (causing) the destruction of the forces of adversaries, acquired fame in battle, who removed trouble [and was therefore] like (Yudhishtira) the foremost of Prithâ's sons [who annihilated Śalya], and whose armies were terrible in chastising the forces of enemies difficult to be chastised [so that he was like Bhīmasēna⁸ subduing the strength of his enemy Duhśāsana]

(V 14) In a battle which was terrific by the collision with the multitude of the close arrays of the furious elephants of the irresistible enemy, where warriors rejoiced and the circuit of the regions was hidden by the dust from the hoofs of horses, where rows of *pāṇḍhava*⁹ banners were flitting and the crowd of feudatories was inundated with streams of blood issuing from wounds, he at . . .¹⁰ caused Nāgāvalōka quickly to turn back

(V. 15) The blade of his sword, with rows of spotless teeth formed on it by the mass of pearls that were shed by the frontal globes of the choice elephants¹¹ of the irresistible adversary, exultingly laughs as it were in the devastated home of king Nāgāvalōka

⁹ For this word which occurs also in verse 24, see e.g. above, Vol VI p 170 and Vol VII p 227

¹¹ Compare in Journ Bo As Soc Vol XVI p 107, l. 5 nīstrimsaghātavidalat-karikumbha-mukta-muklāphalaparakara, also e.g. Śisupālavadhā V 12

(V 18) Now his son Parabala rules here the land, he who has discarded addiction to sin and is therefore like the sun which has severed its connection with the night, who is born of pure body and is versed in all arts, and is therefore like the moon when she has risen with a bright form and with all her digits, who, terrible in cutting up the forces of adversaries, is gentle-looking, and full of prowess

(V 24) At the head of battle the fortune of royalty—her garland of pearls covered with the blood streaming from the temples of elephants that were split by the round-pointed shafts of her strong bow drawn with a twang of the string, and with rows of arrows resting on her creeper-like arms—conquered for him pāṇḍhava banners

(V 25) He caused to be built this temple of Śaṇi,¹ resembling the peak of the mountain of snow, the white flag on the bright top of which bears the lustre of the river of the gods

(V 26) And like the pillar which was formerly (erected?) on the mountain of Garudadhvaṇi(?),² exactly so was this large Garuda-bannered pillar caused to be erected by that king before (the temple of) Hari¹

(V 27) Repeatedly deliberating whether this is Vishnu's foot making three strides, or the body of Sthānu³ shaped like a post, or (the serpent) Śeṣha pulled out of a hole in the ground by the enemy of the serpent-king,⁴ the gods on viewing it find out that it is a pillar of pure stone proclaiming the fame of king Parabala

(V 28) His prime minister was [Kṣh?]⁵, administrator of all laws, bright like gold and true of speech, to be saluted with (bowing of) the head by king Parabala He set up before (the temple of) the destroyer⁶ of Madhu this Garuda-marked pillar, which with its stone arm raised aloft defies all ages—a pillar of him who has paralyzed his foes⁶

No 35 — ANMAKONDA INSCRIPTION OF PROLA;

The Chalukya-Vikrama year Forty-Two

By H KRISHNA SASTRI, B.A

On a hillock to the south of Hanumkondā⁷ (Anmakonda) near Warangal in the Nizam's State, stands the small temple of Padmākṣī which, unlike other buildings attributable to the Kākatiya period,⁸ is devoid of any architectural pretensions. The rock close to which the temple stands, bears on a portion of its dressed surface, sculptures of

³ I.e. Śiva

⁴ These words clearly indicate that there was a figure of Garuda on the top of the pillar

⁵ I.e. Vishnu

⁶ In my opinion, this might refer either to the king or to the god Vishnu

⁷ This is the form given in Mr Cousens' Lists of Antiquarian Remains in H II the Nizam's Territories, p 46

some Jaina images seated in a row. In front of the temple is an inscribed quadrangular pillar of black granite bearing in relief within a countersunk square, at the top of each of its four faces, the figure of a squatting Jaina ascetic with his arms folded over his lap crosswise. On the east face of the pillar this figure is flanked by a cow and calf on one side and a dagger and shield (?) on the other. The north face of the pillar bears representations of the sun and moon on the right and left sides, respectively, of the squatting Jaina figure. From these sculptures and from the inscription on the pillar, which is published below, it appears that the Padmākshī temple was originally dedicated to the Jaina goddess Kadālālāya and that the pillar was set up there by the lady who built the basadi (Jaina temple). At present the Brāhmanas of Anmakonda, who have somehow got possession of the temple, worship the goddess in it under the name Padmākshī, which they believe to be synonymous with Durgā². It is not clear how or when the ownership of the temple passed from the Jainas to the Brāhmanas.

Anmakonda, or, as it is called in the subjoined inscription, Anmakundā (l 16) or Ammakunde (l 75), was originally the capital of the Kākatiya kings and was situated in the Andhra country³. The neighbouring town of Warangal (Ōrumgallu in Telugu or Ēkaśilānagara in Sanskrit) became the seat of government about the end of Ganapati's reign and continued as such until the collapse of the Kākatiya family⁴. Anmakonda and Warangal are now stations Nizam's Territories, p 47). The temples near the Rāmappā Lake in the Warangal district are (ibid p 49) of the same type as the great temple at Hanmakondā, but more profusely sculptured. The principal temple of this group appears to have been built in A D 1213-14 by Rudra of Recharla, who was a dependant of the Kākatiya king Ganapati. The village Uparpalle in the Yelgandal district, is also reported to contain some ruined temples attributable to the Kākatiya period (ibid p 74). The vimāna of the Tripurantakēśvara temple at Tripurantakam in the Kurnool district was constructed in A D 1254-55 under the orders of the Kākatiya king Ganapati (Epigraphical collection for 1905, No. 169). The Padmākshī temple at Anmakonda is the earliest known structural monument of the Kākatiya period and this may account for its being plain and devoid of the display of art which is quite characteristic of the later structures of the dynasty.

⁴ The Ganapēśvaram inscription of the time of Ganapati states (v 9) that Rudra, son of Prōla, destroyed many towns and founded quarters named after these towns in the city of Ōrumgallu and peopled them with their respective inhabitants, while in the devastated towns he built celebrated temples of Rudrēśvara and settled fresh inhabitants. If there be any truth in this statement, it may be inferred that Warangal, which was already in existence as an important city (see l. 95 of the subjoined inscription also), was greatly improved by Rudra. Recharla Rudra, a general of Ganapati (see above, p 256, note 8) is said to have put to flight king Nagati and founded the temple of Rudrēśvara at the city of Ōrugallu (Warangal)—perhaps after his own name Ōrumgallu or Ōrugallu, which was thus improved by the Kākatiya king Rudra, appears to have occupied only a subordinate position in the time of Prōla, Rudra and Ganapati, while Anmakonda was the capital. No 273 of the Epigraphical collection for 1905-06 which belongs to the time of Rudra and is dated in Śaka Samvat 1107, Viśvāvasu (= A D 1185-86) states that the mahāmandalēśvara Kākatiya Rudradēva-Mahārāja was "the lord of Anmakonda, the best of towns". Nos 195 and 223 of the same collection belong to Ganapati and are both dated in Śaka-Samvat 1174, Paridhāvin (= A D 1252-53). The former refers to Ganapati as "the lord of Anmakonda, the best of towns". In Śaka-Samvat 1175 Ganapati still called himself the lord of Anmakonda (Mr Butterworth's Nellore Inscriptions, O 28). But No 231 of the Epigraphical collection for 1905, dated in Śaka Samvat 1176, Anandā, distinctly states that Ganapati was ruling with Ōrugallu as his capital. Whether his successor Rudramadēvi (or, as she is called in inscriptions, Rudradēva-Mahārāja) reigned from the newly established capital Warangal or not, it is difficult to say. Her successor Pratāparudra ruled over almost the whole of the Telugu country and portions even of the Tamil country from his throne at Ōrumgallu. He is generally known as Ōrumgallu Pratāparudra-deva, i.e. Pratāparudradēva of Ōrumgallu.

on the Hyderabad-Bezvada section of the Nizam's State Railway and seem to have been included about the beginning of the twelfth century A.D. in the district of Sabbī-sāyira 'the Sabbī one thousand,' which formed part of the Western Chālukya empire, and to have been conferred by Tribhuvanamalla-Vikramāditya VI on his feudatory the Kākatīya chief Tribhuvanamalla-Bēta¹ Sabbī-sāyira is not mentioned in other published records and, consequently, its extent cannot be defined until more lithic records from that part of the Nizam's Dominions are published.²

The subjoined inscription³ engraved on the four faces of the pillar above referred to, is written in bold and clear Kanarese characters of the twelfth century A.D. The written surface measures roughly in breadth 1' 3½" on the east and west faces and 1' 2½" on the north and south faces, while in height it is 3' 6", 3' 5½", 3' 7", and 3' 3½" respectively, on the east, north, west and south faces. The sculptures which the four faces of the pillar bear have been noted already. Verse 1, which contains the invocation, and the imprecatory verses (11 and 12) are in the Sanskrit language. Lines 89 to 91 contain an incomplete Sanskrit verse which is evidently meant to be a quotation. The rest of the inscription is in Kanarese prose (ll 6 to 24, 70 to 88, 91 to 99, and 111 and 112) and poetry (verses 2 to 10). The writing calls for very few remarks. The anusvāra is sometimes, as in ancient records, written at the top of the right side of the letter (ll 1, 3, and 4), and sometimes, as at present, written on the right side of the letter (ll 86, 98, 100 and 102). The virāma occurs once in l 62 where it is marked by a wavy vertical line added to the top of the letter. The ī-sign, which is almost similar in form to the virāma, is also attached to the top of the letter, but is horizontal. In ll 40 and 55, however, the e of de in the word perggade and ē of yē in the word hridayēvari, are marked differently by a curved line attached to the left bottom corner of the letter and drawn horizontally to its right. In other cases this sign along with the ī-sign first described, marks the ai-sign. An attempt is made to distinguish the long ī from the short i but it is not throughout kept up. Among consonants it may be noted, that the length of the horizontal stroke in the middle, which in the case of pa ought to be shorter than in that of sha, is in some instances lengthened so far as to make pa look almost like sha. The forms *kramā*⁴ for *kramā*⁵ in l 20 and *yējña*⁶ for *yajña*⁶ in l 103 are due to the peculiarities of Kanarese pronunciation.

The record begins with an invocation addressed to the feet of Jinendra (v. 1) and refers in ll 6 to 24 to the reign of the maḥārājādhirāja, paramēśvara and paramabhaṣṭārāla, the [Western] Chālukya king Tribhuvanamalla-dēva [Vikramāditya VI] and his feudatory the maḥāmandalēśvara Kākatī Bēta (l 19), who had acquired the five great sounds (pañchamahāśabda) and who was 'the lord of Anmakundā (l 16), the best of towns'. The hereditary minister of Kākatī Bētarasa (l 30) was the dandādhipātī Vaija (v. 2). Verse 3 states that Vaija brought his master the maṇḍalika Kākatī Bēta (ll 32 and 37) to the feet of the Chālukya (l 33) emperor⁴ (chakrin) (viz Vikramāditya VI) and made him rule the district of

³ No 106 of the Epigraphical collection for 1902. Mr Cousens refers to this as No. 4 of the inscriptions at Hanumkondā and Warangal (Lists of Antiquarian Remains in H. H. the Nizam's Territories, p. 48).

Sabbi-sâyira (l 34 f) as a feudatory of that monarch. According to verses 4 and 5 Vajja's son by Yâkamabbe (l 38 f) was the pergade Bêta, who became the minister of Kâkati Prôla (l 43). The only act of this Bêta which the inscription records, is that he constructed tap houses for gods (i.e. temples) in his native village (v 5). The wife of this minister Bêta—the son of Yâkamâmbikâ (l 53 f)—was Mailama (vv 6, 7 and 8). Lines 70 to 87 state that she built the Kadalâlâya-basadi on the top of the hill (v 9) and that—in the Châlukya-Vikrama (l 76) year forty-two, which corresponded to the cyclic year Hêmalambi, on the occasion of the Uttarâyana-samkrânti, which fell on Monday, the 15th day of the dark half of Paushya, while the king Kâkatiya Polalarasa (l 73), son of the mandalika Tribhuvanamalla (l 72) was ruling at Ammakunde (l 75),—she gave for the benefit of that temple six mattar (l 86) of land below the tank built and named after herself, by her husband Bêtana-pergade (l 81).¹ The pillar that bears the inscription was also set up by Mailama on the same occasion (l 87). Lines 88 to 99 register a gift of ten mattar (l 98 f) of land to the same temple by the mahâmanḍalêśvara Mêlarasa of Ugravâdi (ll 92 to 94), a member of the family of Mâdha[va]varman (l 91) ' (who possessed a fabulous army) of eight thousand elephants, ten crores of horses and numberless foot-soldiers ' The land which Mêlarasa granted was situated below the Kûchikere tank, which belonged to Orumgallu (l 95). This town was under the control of Mêlarasa at the time of the grant. Lines 111 to 112 record the assignment of a pûga (hâga) coin to the temple sweeper Bôya-Padda, to be paid, apparently from the proceeds of either of the two grants mentioned above.

The late Professor Kielhorn kindly contributed the following remarks on the date of the inscription—"Ch V 42= Ś 1039 exp.= Hêmalamba. The date regularly corresponds to Monday, the 24th December A D 1117. On this day the Uttarâyana-samkrânti took place 14 h. 55 m after mean sunrise, during the 15th tithi of the dark half of Pausha, which commenced 0 h 38 m after mean sunrise, and ended 0 h 13 m before mean sunrise of the following day."

Seven inscriptions of the Kâkatiya dynasty have been published so far.² The earliest of these belongs to the time of Rudra,³ five to that of Gaṇapati,⁴ and one to that of Prâtâparudra. The first of these and the Kâñchi inscription of Gaṇapati⁵ supplement one another in supplying the full name of the first historical person of the Kâkatiya dynasty, viz. Tribhuvanamalla Bêtma. The Chêbrôlu record of Gaṇapati⁶ and the subjoined inscription give, instead of Bêtma, the form Bêta. The former of these two records and the unpublished Pâkhâl inscription of about the time of Gaṇapati⁷ mention a certain Durjaya in the Kâkatiya ancestry—the one, as the father of Bêta and the other as the father of Prôla. The Pâkhâl inscription further states that

Karikāla-Chōla of the solar race was one of the predecessors of Darjaya. The Kāñchi epigraph quoted above, which also traces the Kākatiyas, as the Chēbrōla and the Pāhlal inscriptions do, to the Sun, Mann, Ikshvāku, and other mythical kings of the Raghu family, does not give the names of either Karikāla-Chōla or of Darjaya. The appearance of these two names in the Kākatiya genealogy is at present difficult to explain satisfactorily. But two facts which may be of some use in this connection have to be registered before passing on to the historical portion of the genealogy. As regards the mention of the mythical king Karikāla-Chōla as an ancestor of the Kākatiyas, attention may be drawn to the fact that the Telugu-Chōlas who invariably claim connection with this mythical Chōla king, became feudatories of the Kākatiyas in the time of Ganapati¹. With regard to Darjaya, the name occurs among the ancestors of two of the contemporary local families of the Telugu country². The first historical ancestor of the Kākatiya family was Tribhuvanamalla-Bēta. He appears to have been a powerful chief who held sway over some portions of the Andhra country before he became a feudatory of the Western Chālukyas and the governor of the Sabbi one thousand district. The surname Tribhuvanamalla which occurs here as well as in the Kāñchi and Anmakonda inscriptions, was probably borrowed from his overlord Tribhuvanamalla Vikramāditya VI.

Bēta's son and successor was Prōla, Prōlerāja, Prōdarāja or Polalarasa, whose surname Jagatikēsarin is known to us from the Kāñchi inscription of his grandson Ganapati. The importance of the subjoined epigraph consists in its being the earliest Kākatiya record and the only one of Prōla found so far. Into his father Bēta, Prōla appears to have continued as a feudatory of Vikramāditya VI.³ The Anmakonda inscription of his son⁴ Rudra and the Ganapēsvaram record of his grandson Ganapati, mention in detail the military exploits of Prōla. These have been fully discussed by Dr Fleet and Professor Hultzsch⁵. One of the opponents of Prōla was Tailapadōva called "the crest-jewel of the Chālukyas" in the Anmakonda inscription. Dr Fleet has identified him with the Western Chālukya king Taila III (A.D. 1150-51 to 1162-63). This implies a pretty long reign for Prōla from at least the Chālukya-Vikrama year 42 (= A.D. 1117), the date of the present record, to at least A.D. 1150-51, the first year of Taila III, unless we suppose that Prōla fought with Taila while the latter was yet a prince⁶. That Rudra, son of Prōla, successfully averted a usurpation of the Chālukya throne after the death of Taila III, by a certain Bhima

² The Kondapadmatī chief Buddharāja and the mahāmandalētrara Nambava—two petty chieftains of the Telugu country on the southern side of the Krishna river—bore the surname 'the lion of the mountain—the Darjaya family' (above, Vol. VI p. 268 and footnote 6, and p. 269). We know from Telugu records that a family of chiefs known by the name Chāgi was contemporaneous with the Kondapadmatīs. Nos. 253 and 271 of the Epigraphical collection for 1897 give two or three names in the ancestry of this family and call it the Darjaya-kula born from the feet of Vishnu. No. 255 of the same collection, which is dated in Saka Samvat 1145 and which belongs to the time of Chāgi Ganarāja-Mahārāja who was probably a member of this Chāgi Darjaya kula, quotes a verse at the beginning in praise of the king which is almost identical with verse 7 of the Y. namadala inscription describing the Kākatiya king Ganapati (above, Vol. III p. 97 f., text ll. 31 to 31). Unfortunately the inscription is seriously damaged, otherwise, it might, perhaps, have been possible to prove that the local chiefs of the Chāgi Darjaya-kula were borrowing from the royal Kākatiya family of Warangal not only names, but sometimes even the description of the members of its family.

³ This may be inferred from the use of the Chālukya-Vikrama era in the date portion of the subjoined record.

whose capital was at Vardhamānanagari,¹ shows the extent of the power wielded by this feudatory family in the last days of the Chālukyas. Prōla's other enemies referred to in the Anmakonda inscription were Jagaddēva, Gōvinda (or Gōvindadandēśa, as he is called in the Ganapēśvaram inscription), Gunda and Udaya or Chōdōdaya. Jagaddēva has been identified with Tribhuvanamalla Jagaddēva, the Śāntara chief of Patti-Pombuchchapura, who was a feudatory, first of Tribhuvanamalla Vikramāditya VI. and then of his grandson Jagadēkamalla II. He must have "stood encompassing the city of Anmakonda" on behalf of the Chālukya emperor in order to avenge himself upon Prōla, who, it may be supposed, was trying to throw off his allegiance to the Chālukyas. It was, probably, as the first step in this direction, that Prōla inflicted the defeat on prince Taila III as stated above. Indeed, Prōla appears to have extended his military operations into the modern Kistna district as well. For, the next opponent of his was Gunda, the lord of the city of Mantbena or Mantrakūta which is probably identical with the village of Mantena² in the Nuzvid Zamindāri of the Godavari district. Gōvinda or Govindadandēśa, I would identify with the Gōvindarāja of the Ablūr inscriptions,³ who was the nephew of Anantapāla, the general of Vikramāditya VI—and with the dandanāyaka Gōvindarasa, who in the Chālukya-Vikrama year 51, corresponding to A.D. 1126-27 was ruling the Kondapalli three hundred district according to an unpublished inscription at Tripurāntakam.⁴ Here we are told that this dandanāyaka Gōvindarasa "burnt Bengipura (Vēngi?)" and conquered Gonka.⁵ This Gonka is apparently identical with the Velanāndu chief Gonka II, father of Rājendra-Chōda.⁶ Udaya or Chōdōdaya, whom Prōla first defeated and then reinstated in his dominions, is according to Professor Hultzsch perhaps "to be connected with Kulōttunga-Chōda-Gonka Vira Nolamha Pallava Perumāndi Jayanṅghadēva, younger brother of Tribhuvanamalla-Vikramāditya VI, had such a biruda. Perhaps Taila's defeat by Prōla took place while the former was yet a prince, somewhere in the latter part of the reign of Jagadēkamalla II.

⁵ Annual Report on Epigraphy for 1905-06, paragraph 40.

⁶ Above, Vol. IV p. 35. On p. 38 of the same volume, Professor Hultzsch refers to the biruda Chālukya-rājya-bhavana-mūlastambha of Gonka II and states that he was a tributary to one of the two branches of the Chālukya dynasty. I think that, in spite of the fact that the Velanāndu chiefs became the feudatories of the Western Chālukyas subsequent to the death of Kulōttunga Chōda I (ibid p. 37), the title borne by Gonka II was a formal hereditary title and did refer only to the Eastern Chālukya dynasty. No. 227 of the Epigraphical collection for 1905 at Tripurāntakam in the Kurnool district records a gift by Velanānti Gonka in Śaka-Samvat 1028 (= A.D. 1106-07). This Gonka is identical with Gonka I in the Genealogical Table of the Velanāndu chiefs. The inscription states that he bore the title Chālukya-rājya-bhavana-mūlastambha, but does not mention the overlord to whom he was subordinate. No. 151 of 1897, however, which is dated in Śaka-Samvat 998, the cyclic year Nala, corresponding to the [7]th year of Visnuvardhana-Mahārāja [Kulōttunga Chōda I] registers a grant by Velanānti Gonkara (i.e. Gonka I), the commander of all forces (samasta-sēnādhipati) of the king. This shows that the title Chālukya-rājya-bhavana-mūlastambha assumed by Gonka I when he had become more or less independent in the Telugu country, meant that he was a supporter of the Eastern Chālukya kingdom. We also learn from No. 151 of 1897 that Gonka I was the son of Gundāmbikā. He was a trisatōttara-sahasrāvacant nātha 'the lord of the one thousand and three hundred country' (No. 277 of 1905), while his grandson Gonka II was a trisatōttara-shōṣasahasrāvacant-nātha 'the lord of the six thousand and three hundred country' (No. 274 of 1893).

of Velanāndu¹ Thus Prôla who, in his early career, was a Châlukya feudatory, appears to have gradually grown powerful and to have thrown off the imperial yoke in the latter part of the reign of the Western Châlukya king Jagadêkamalla II, preparing, thereby, the way for Rudra's extensive conquests, which according to the Anmakonda inscription, reached in the east to the shore of the salt sea and in the south as far as Śrîsaila²

The other facts mentioned in the subjoined inscription do not call for any remarks Mēlarasa of Ugravādi who belonged to the family of Mādhavavarman, is not known from other inscriptions. A feudatory family of the time of the Vijayanagara king Krishṇarāya, whose members claim to have been lords of Bezvāda and were ruling a portion of the Udaya-giri-rājya, traces its origin to a certain Mādhavavarman of the Solar race and the Vasishtha-gôtra³ It is doubtful if this Mādhavavarman could be connected with the mythical Madhavavarman referred to in the subjoined inscription as an ancestor of Mēlarasa of Ugravadi

² This is no boast so far as the southern boundary of Rudra's dominions is concerned The existence of an inscription of his time at Tripurāntakam in the Kurnool district (No 273 of the Epigraphical collection for 1905) clearly shows that the actual southern boundary of his kingdom extended even beyond Śrîsaila Rudra appears to have strengthened his position in the Telugu country by a political intermarriage in the race of Kandūrôdaya-Chôda (above, Vol III, p 83) Ganapati did likewise by taking to wives Nārāmbā and Pērāmbā, the two sisters of his general Jāyana (ibid. p 84) A Tripurāntakam inscription (No 204 of the Epigraphical collection for 1905) states that Ganapati's sister Mēlāmbikā married Vakkadimalla Rudra, the second son of Buddha 'lord of Nātavāṇi-vishaya' The same relationship is established by an inscription at Bezvāda which is dated in Śaka-Samvat 1123 (above, Vol VI p 159, text line 8) where Nātavādi Rudra (not his father Buddha as Professor Hultzsch takes it) is called the marandī 'brother-in-law' of Ganapati Ganapati's daughter Ganapāmbā was given in marriage to the Kōṭa chief Bēta of Amarāvati (above, Vol III p 94) The Kōṭa chief Keta II, whose mother Sabbamā was the sister of the Velanāndu chief Gonka III (above, Vol. VI p 148), had five queens who were selected from the several petty families which at that time appear to have divided among themselves the country south of the Kṛṣṇā river Two unpublished inscriptions from Amarāvati in the Gunter district (Nos 261 and 262 of the Epigraphical collection for 1897) give the names of these five queens as Viñjamā of the family of the chiefs of Ongunimārga (perhaps identical with Ongēḥumārga over which Nambhaya of the Durgaya family was ruling, see above, Vol VI p 224); Sabbamā of the family ruling the country "to the west of the hill," i.e. the Kondapadmaṭṭi, Parvati of the family of the chiefs of Kōna-Kapṛavādi, Vāgamā of the family of the chiefs of Kākati and Komaramā, another princess of the Kondapadmaṭṭi family It is doubtful if the Kākati family here mentioned has to be connected with the Kākatiyas of Warangal or if it has to be distinguished as a purely local family which adopted the name Kākati in consequence of its relationship with the Kākatiyas either directly or indirectly.

TRANSLATION.

(Verse 1) May the lotus-foot of the blessed Jinendra, which (like the lotus) is worthy of being praised by the lords of kings and the lords of ascetics (residing) in the three worlds, whose powerful doctrine completely destroys (all) sins (just as the powerful stem of the lotus completely cures the patient of his *dōsha*¹), which is the origin of the *ratna-traya*² (as the lotus is the birth-place of gems³) (and) which has its attention fixed on excellent virtues (guna) only (as the stock of the lotus is made up entirely of delicate fibre), protect all Bhavyas!⁴

(Line 6 f) Hail! While the victorious reign of the glorious Tribhuvanamalladēva,—the asylum of the whole world, the glorious Prithvivallabha, Mahārājādhrāja, Paramēśvara, Paramabhaṭṭārāṭa, the front ornament of the Satyāśraya family, the jewel of the Chālukyas,—was flourishing with perpetual increase (to last) as long as the moon, sun, and stars

(L 14 f) A dependent on his lotus-feet (was) the prosperous mahāmandalēśvara, the chief Kākatī Bētarasa who had acquired the five great sounds, (who was) a mahāmandalēśvara, the lord of Anmakundā—the best of towns, a great devotee of Mahēśvara (Śiva), (one) whose actions were (directed) for the good of (his) master (and) whose ornament was modesty.⁵

(L 20 f.) Resplendent in (his) position as the hereditary prime minister (mahāmātya) entrusted with the administration of the kingdom of that king (i.e. Bēta), great of self-respect (and) possessing the triple qualifications of pre-eminence, counsel and energy,

(V 2) the dandādhanātha Vaija, minister of the glorious king Kākatī Bēta, worshipped by (all the people of) the world for (his) liberality which bestowed desired objects on crowds

⁴ I.e. the Jaina community, see Mr Rice's Epigraphia Carnatica, Vol. II, p 59, paragraph 6

of supplicants, for (his) surpassing beauty which amazed (those who saw him), for his high proficiency in the sciences, for (his) refined goodness, for (his) charming behaviour, for the greatness of (his) pride¹ (and) for the display of (his) dauntless heroism,—became famous

(V 3) Who does not extol the minister of the maṇḍalika Kākati Bēta, Vaija, that master of prodigious fame, who by (his) immeasurable prowess made, amidst the applauses of the world, the renowned king Kākati Bēta to successfully visit the feet of the Chalukya emperor (chakrin), (and) to rule by the favour of that (emperor) the Sabbi (one) thousand (district) (in such a way) as to attract the attention (of the world)

(V 4) To him and to (his wife) the blooming lotus-faced Yākamabbe was born pergade Bēta who, famous (as he was) in the world, was a head-jewel in the diadems of the minister-class

(V 5) He (Bēta), the exalted minister of the prosperous king Kākati-Prōla, who was counted as equal to Māndhātā and Rāma, the foremost among the wise, proficient in all sciences, an admirer of good behaviour, a mine of literary lore, a celestial tree to learned men possessing truth and virtue, built, with great delight, ten houses for gods (i.e. temples) in his own village

(V 6) The wife of the minister Bēta, the son of [Yā]kamāmbikā, (was) Mailama, whose face was (as pleasant as) the moon (and) whose lips were (red like) the bimba (fruit), the colour of whose body was praised as being fair (and her) full breasts as being golden pots, (who was) the (veritable) lady Bhārati, a Śāsanadēvi (par excellence) acceptable to the doctrines of the Jaina religion (and) decidedly, (the goddess) Lakshmi (but) without (the latter's) fickleness

(V 7) Who, who in this world does not extol Mailama saying "The lotus-born (Brahman) having produced, out of the five gems (such) as best suited the portion of the body (under creation), the (several) limbs with (their) adjuncts from the feet right up to those tremulous curls, (and) having filled (them) with happiness, grace, joy (and) beauty (which he) culled from among the celestial nymphs,—(he) loved (to see) this gem of womankind (—his own creation)."

(V. 8) The whole world would praise deservedly the wife of the minister Bēta saying "She possesses praiseworthy beauty, she is full of lustre, (she) is a Rati in dalliance, (she) is the lady Śrī (i.e. Lakshmi), (she) is the lady Ghatāntakī,² (she) is the lady Vāni (i.e. Sarasvatī)"

(V. 9.) The thus-praised abode of Ramā (i.e. Lakshmi)—Mailama—having caused to be built with delight and devotion the resplendent Kadalalāya-basadi (temple) on the top of the hill in order that it may bring prosperity to her—

(L 70) for the daily worship, incense, lights (and) oblations (in the temple) (and) for food, clothing, etc., of the temple priest,—

(L 72) while the reign of Kākatiya Polalarasa, son of the glorious king, the Maṇḍalika Tribhuvanamalla, was continuously prosperous and successful, at Ammakunde, (to last) as long as the moon, sun and stars—in the forty-second year of the prosperous Chālukya-Vikrama years, corresponding to the Hēmaṇambi-samvatsara; on account of the Uttarāyana-samkrānti

² The Jaina saint Akalanka is said in the Mallishēna epitaph (above, Vol III p 200) to have overcome, along with the Buddhas, the Buddhist goddess Tārā who had secretly descended into a pot as dwelling place. According to the Rāyavāṭi-kathā (Mr. Rice's Epigraphia Carnatica, Vol II p 45) Akalanka was helped in his disputation against the Buddhas by the Jaina goddess Kūshmāṇḍinī and eventually kicked over the pot with his left foot and smashed it. In the present inscription Mailama is apparently compared to the goddess Kūshmāṇḍinī who helped Akalanka to smash the pot in which the goddess Tārā had taken her abode

(which happened) on Monday, the 15th day of the dark fortnight of Pausya (of that year)—

(L. 80) gave to that (temple), with libations of water, two mattar of wet land (lying) between two flat slabs below the band of the tank built in her name by her husband Bêtanapergade, and four mattar of black-soil land (lying) south of the pond (done) on the west side of the same tank and six mattar of uncultivated land,¹ (and) set up this inscribed pillar

(L. 88 f) And as a (subsidiary) gift to this charity the prosperous mahāmandalésvara Mēlarasa of Ugravādi, who was born in the family of Mādha[vav]arma, (whose army consisted) of "eight thousand elephants, eight crores of horses and endless crowds of foot (soldiers) etc," gave one mattar of wet-land at the head of the canal below the band of Kūchikere (tank) which belonged to Orumgallu (included) within his rule, (and) ten mattar of miscellaneous land close to the same (land)

(V 10) He that destroys this (charity) shall always incur the sin of having killed thousand tawny cows, (and) he that carefully protects it, shall ever enjoy (that) happiness (which is) acquired as the fruit of a thousand sacrifices (yajña)

[Ll 104 to 110 contain two of the usual imprecatory verses]

NO 36.—BALAGHAT PLATES OF PRITHIVISHENA II

By THE LATE PROFESSOR F KIELHORN, CIE, GÖTTINGEN

These plates were sent in May 1893 by the Deputy Commissioner of Bālāghāt, a district in the Nāgpur Division of the Central Provinces, to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, to which they now belong. In the letter which accompanied them, it was stated that they had been found in the district, 'some time ago, hanging to a tree in the jungle'. They were entrusted to me by Dr Hoernle in 1905, with the request that I should edit the inscription which is engraved on them. Other work has prevented my doing so before now.

The plates are five in number, each between 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ " and 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ " long by between 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ " and 4" high, two of them contain no writing whatever, while of the three others (here described as plates 1, 11 and 111) the second is engraved on both sides and the first and the third on one side only. Though the plates have no raised rims and are not fashioned thicker near the edges, the engraving on them is throughout in a perfect state of preservation. The five plates are strung on a ring, which passes through a hole about 1 $\frac{1}{4}$ " distant from the middle of the proper right margin of each plate. This ring is circular, about $\frac{1}{4}$ " thick and between 3" and 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ " in diameter. The ends of it are flattened off and joined by a bolt, which had not been cut when the plates came into my hands. On the ring described there slides a smaller ring, made of a band of copper, the ends of which are fastened by a rivet which also passes through, and firmly holds, a flat disc of copper about 2 $\frac{3}{8}$ " in diameter. Undoubtedly this disc was meant to serve as a seal and to bear some writing, but nothing has been engraved on it³.

The plates clearly were intended to record a grant of the Vākātaka king Prithivishēna II., but they actually give only the genealogy of the king and break off at the point where his order

³ Compare the descriptions of the three sets of plates of Pravarasēna II. in Gupta Inscr. pp 235 and 243 and above, Vol III, p 258

commences The four inscribed sides contain 35 lines¹ of well-engraved writing The size of the letters is between $\frac{1}{4}$ ' and $\frac{3}{8}$ " The characters belong to the 'box-headed' variety of the southern class of alphabets and are similar to, but less angular than, those of the Dudia plates of the Vakataka Pravarasēna II, published with a facsimile above, Vol III p 260 They include the subscript sign of the rare jh, in *Ajñhita*², l 31, the sign of the jñvāmūliya, in *sūnqñ=Kuntalā*³, l 30, and forms of the final t, in sanrāt, l 4, and of the final t (which does not show in the facsimile), in vachanīt, l 35⁴ The conjunct nn is everywhere written by a sign which is really the sign for nn (in sanmvāsita, l 6, utpannasya, l 23, and elsewhere), visarga is denoted by two hook-shaped lines (e g in sūnōh, ll 11 and 20), the signs for d and ḍ are well distinguished e g in -vāsahād=, l 1, and shodasy-, l 2, and there are two forms of the letter v, e g. in -vāsahād=, l 1, and vachanīt, l 35 — The language is somewhat ungrammatical Sanskrit, and the text is all in prose In line 10 a passage of no less than 27 aksharas has through carelessness been omitted by the writer As regards orthography, the rules of sāṃdhi are constantly neglected (as in the three cognate grants), the (long) ā is several times written where the vowel should be short, and (the short) i is throughout employed for both i and ī, the vowel ri is used instead of ri in -pautrinah, l 16, and -śriyah, l 27, and instead of ri in śri-, ll 17 and 25. Besides, the dental and lingual nasals are confounded in lūiunya-, l 12, manō-, l 13, and -ānusiṛinah, l 20, the word aṃsa is written as ansa in line 6, and vamsa as vanśa in lines 8, 24, 27 and 33, sh is doubled after r in vaishsha-, l 14, and dh before y in -addhyahsha, l 35 With 'patī-abhya' for 'paty-abhya' in line 28, where the r of 'patīr-' looks like a sāṃdhi-consonant, we may compare -bbalam-aśvarya- for -bbalaśvarya- in line 15 of the Dudia plates, above, Vol III, p 261, where m is used in a similar way⁵

With two exceptions, the text down to the word Pravarasēnasya in line 26 is practically identical with that of the three published grants⁴ of the Vākātaka king Pravarasēna II, like those grants, it gives the genealogy of this king, commencing with Pravarasēna I, and enumerating after him his son's son Rudrasēna I, his son Prithivishēna I, his son Rudrasēna II, and his son (from Piabhāvatiguptā, the daughter of the Mahārājādhirāja Dēvagupta) Pravarasēna II Of the exceptions referred to, one is that our inscription commences with Vēmbāra-vāsahād=, 'from (his) residence Vēmbāra,' in the place of which the Chammak and Dudia plates of Pravarasēna II have Pravarapurāt, 'from Pravarapura' Our grant therefore was to have been issued from Vēmbāra, a place which I have not been able to identify The other point of difference is that, while the grants of Pravarasēna II commence with drishṭam, or drishṭam svastī, or drishṭam siddham, this inscription contains no such expression, but at the beginning of line 1, before the word Vēmbāra-, leaves an empty space just where one would have expected something like drishṭam The omission and the vacant space, in my opinion, are rather significant Contrary to what I have said in my remarks on the Dudia plates, above, Vol III p. 259, I am convinced now that drishṭam (and the Prākṛit dīṭham of the Mayūdevolu and Hīrahadagalli plates⁶) must really be taken in its ordinary sense of 'seen,' and that it is similar to the modern 'true copy' or 'examined' of official letters or Government orders⁶ Such a remark

² There is a final m in line 27 (line 26 of the facsimile), but it seems to be out of place where it stands could of course have been affixed or prefixed to a document only when it was finished, and it is missing here because our giant was not completed. The engraver apparently acted just as a writer or copyist of the giant would have done.

⁶ Compare the remarks of the late Prof Bühler, above Vol I, pp 9 and 10, and of Prof Hultzsch above, Vol VI, p 88 Sir W. H. Sleeman, speaking of certain kings of Oude, in his Journey through the Kingdom of Oude, Vol I, p 179, says that to their orders a seal was affixed in their presence bearing the inscription mohalīza shud, 'it has been seen' Like drishṭam, jūḍam is used in the body of an inscription in Journ As Soc Bengal, Vol LXX, Part I, p 92, l 21 (jūḍam=mahāmantri-sri-Māhazēna).

After Pravarasēna II our inscription in lines 26-35 mentions his son, the Mahārāja Narēndrasēna, and after him his son — born from the queen (mahīl or Ajjhita-bhattārikā,¹ a daughter of the lord of Kuntala — the Mahārāja Prithivishēna [II], a devout worshipper of Bhagavat (Vishnu) Narēndrasēna, 'from confidence' in the excellent qualities previously acquired by him took away (or appropriated) the family's fortune, his commands were honoured by the lords of Kōsala, Mēkala and Mālava, and he held in check enemies bowed down by his prowess'. Prithivishēna II is described as 'being a receptacle of splendour and forbearance, who raised (his) sunken family'. The name Prithivishēna, in line 35 is followed by vaśanāt, 'at his command', but of the king's order only the words 'all superintendents' are given by these plates.

In the Vāṭakā stone inscription published in Archæol. Survey of W. India, Vol IV p 124 ff, the verses 10 and 11, which would have given the names of the successors of Pravarasēna II, are unfortunately much mutilated. The name of Pravarasēna's son and successor, 'who, having obtained the kingdom when eight years of age, ruled well, has since disappeared, and the son of that unknown king according to the published text was Dēvasēna. As has been stated above, according to our giant Pravarasēna's son Narēndrasēna took away the kingdom (probably from an elder brother), married a daughter of the king of Kuntala, and was succeeded by his son Prithivishēna II. The stone inscription in verse 8 records the defeat of a lord of Kuntala by apparently Prithivishēna I, and in verse 18 speaks of Kuntala, Avanti, Kalinga, Kōsala, Triakūṭa, Lata, Andhra . . . [as having been subjected by one of the later Vāṭakās]. According to the present inscription Narēndrasēna had his commands honoured (or obeyed) by the lords of Kōsala, Mēkala and Mālava. The first and last of these three countries are well known. The situation of Mēkala (according to the Topographical List of the Brihatsamhitā in Ind. Ant. Vol XXII p 185, a mountain or a people) is indicated by the fact that the river Narmadā is called Mēkala-kanyā, 'the daughter of Mēkala, and that that river springs from the hill Amarakantak (in Long 81° 48' and Lat 22° 40') in the ancient Chīḍi country'.³

Here and in the cognate plates the Vāṭakā kings have the title mahārāja followed by the word śrī prefixed to their names, and before the title there stands in each case the genitive Vāṭakānām, e.g. Vāṭakānām mahārāja-śrī-Pravarasēnasya. Such passages have been hitherto translated as if the genitive Vāṭakānām were governed by the title mahārāja 'the illustrious Pravarasēna, the great king of the Vāṭakas,' or 'the Mahārāja of the Vāṭakas, the illustrious Pravarasēna'. The matter is not of great importance, but it may be as well to state that from the grammarian's point of view such a construction would be objectionable. In my opinion, the genitive must be taken to qualify, not the title mahārāja, but the whole phrase mahārāja-śrī-Pravarasēna, and more especially the word Pravarasēna, the chief component of the phrase, so that the meaning would be 'the Mahārāja, the illustrious Pravarasēna of the Vāṭakas,' i.e. 'of the family of the Vāṭakas'.⁴ I have already had occasion to point out that we similarly have the genitive Matrakānām in the Valabhī plates, where there is no title by which this genitive could be governed, Vishnukundinām above, Vol IV p 195, l. 2, and

Kadambânâm in Ind Ant. Vol VI p 26, l. 5 and Vol. VII. p. 35, l. 4, and above, Vol. VI p. 14, l. 4, and p. 18, l. 5.

The inscription, not having been finished, contains no date of any kind, but it may be assigned with probability to about the second half of the 8th century A.D.

No 37—ORISSA PLATES OF VIDYADHARABHANJADEVA.

BY THE LATE PROFESSOR F. KIELHORN, O I E., GOTTINGEN

There is no information as to where or when these plates were first obtained. In 1887 they belonged to Mr C. T. Metcalfe, Commissioner of the Orissa Division, and the inscription which is engraved on them was published in that year, with a facsimile, by the late Dr. Rājēndralāl Mitra, in the Journ. As. Soc. Beng., Vol. LVI Part I p 154 ff. In November 1895 the plates were presented by the Commissioner of Orissa, through Mr C. L. Griesbach, to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and they have now been entrusted to me by Dr. Hoernle, with the request to re-edit the inscription.

There are three substantial copper-plates, the edges of which are slightly raised, and of which each measures between $6\frac{1}{16}$ " and $6\frac{1}{8}$ " long by between $3\frac{3}{8}$ " and $3\frac{1}{2}$ " high. They slide on a copper ring, which passes through a hole, which is about $\frac{5}{8}$ " distant from the middle of the proper right margin of each plate. The ring, which had already been cut when the plates came into my hands, is between $\frac{3}{8}$ " and $\frac{1}{2}$ " thick and about 3" in diameter, and on to it is soldered a roughly circular metal seal, between $1\frac{1}{8}$ " and $1\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter. The seal contains in relief on a countersunk surface, in the upper half, a couching lion facing to the proper right, and in the lower half the legend in northern characters which are between $\frac{1}{16}$ " and $\frac{1}{4}$ " high.

Before the plates were used for the grant now engraved on them, they had already served for another grant, the four last lines of which, though faint, are almost completely legible on the first side of the first plate, and of the writing of which more or less distinct traces remain also on the other sides of the plates. The characters of this earlier grant belong to what I have elsewhere¹ called the Gañjām variety of the northern alphabet, and the lines with which it ended, compared with the end of the Gumsūr grant² of Nētrībhañja, published in Journ. As Soc Beng Vol. VI p 669 f and Plate xxxii., would seem to show that the grant was issued by a chief of the same family. The four lines (on the first side of the first plate), so far as I am able to read them, are—

- L. 1. Svayam=śāśhtō rājñā dūtako=tra [Mār]tamdah || Likhitamñ=cha³
sāndhivi-
2. grahika-Arkka[dāvēna]⁴ || Lāñchhitam [rā]jñī-śrī-Mānikya-mahādē-
3. vyā || Utkirṇam ch=āksha[śā]li-Kumāra[dattēna] || ⁵ samvat . . .
4. di⁶ . . . ||

The grant now recorded on these plates is engraved on the second side of the first plate and on both sides of the two others. The engraving is deep and well done, and in a perfect state of preservation. In three places (in lines 10, 22 and 35) there is some doubt about the actual wording of the text, either because the engraver altered what he had originally engraved, or because portions of the letters of the earlier grant spoken of above are mixed up with the new writing; the rest may be read without any difficulty. The size of the letters is about $\frac{1}{8}$ ". The characters belong to that variety of the northern alphabet which we find, e.g. on the Buguda plates of Mādhavavarman, treated of above, Vol. VII. p. 101 f. Of the consonant signs the most characteristic are those for h' (e.g. in Harasya Śēshāhēr, l. 4), t and tt (e.g. in prakāṣa, l. 9, and -vighaṭṭitā, l. 6), and n (e.g. in -vāna-prāna, l. 1), of which the last, in combination with palatals, also serves for the palatal nasal (e.g. in *Bhañjāmala*⁷, l. 14, =ukhtañ=cha, l. 27, and lāñchhitam, l. 35). Among other conjuncts attention may be drawn to the signs for lsh, gg, gbh,

lkhitañ=cha edadhivagrahina Kd[kka]kēna utkirṇa[m] ch=ākshaśāli-Durggadēva || lāñchhitam . . .
. . . samvat (?) Māgha-sud . . .

³ Read likhitañ=cha.

⁴ Read grahik-Arkka^o

⁵ Read samvat, the three akṣaras by which this word is followed are illegible

⁶ This di is followed by a sign which possibly is a letter-numeral for 10; and before the sign of punctuation there is another sign which looks like the symbol for ōm. The two signs show fairly well in the accompanying facsimile. I may add that there are letter-numerals also in the last line of the Bāmanghāt grant of Rāṇabhañja, published with a facsimile in Journ As Soc. Beng Vol XL Part I p 165 f, and in lines 35 and 36 of one of the Gañjām grants of Daṇḍimahādēvi, above, Vol. VI p 139 and Plate dbh and mbh (e.g. in -vikshōbha-dakṣhaṁ, l. 1, °vargga, l. 10, -Digbhañjadēvasya, l. 12, =udbhā- at the end of line 4, and -Stambhadēva-, l. 36). There is a special sign for final t, in -ānyat, l. 18, nyat, at the commencement of line 19, °jāvat, l. 21, and °rādhāt for °rādhāt, l. 22. Of initial vowels the text contains only a (for ā), u and ē, in achandrā, l. 21, wa, ll. 5 and 6, iti, l. 33, Upamany[u], l. 23, urthirna, l. 38, and ētaḍ, l. 19. As regards medial vowels, ā is sometimes denoted by a short superscript stroke or by a small hook on the right of the consonant-sign, as in *lābhāñja*¹ at the commencement of line 13, and in *Bhañjāmala*², l. 14, and there are two signs¹ of the subscript u, one of which may be seen e.g. in jayatu, l. 1, and *bhuvana*², l. 2, and the other in *-sura*², l. 7, *-rīpu*², l. 10, Vañjulvakā, l. 8, and -vavahubhr-, l. 27, etc., the former of the two signs is used also to denote medial ū, for which there is no separate sign in these plates. Two forms of medial ē may be seen e.g. in Śēshāhēr-a(ṛ)va yē, l. 4, and pra(prā)lēyāchala, l. 5, and similarly two forms of medial ō, e.g. in hīrttayō vīlō, l. 35. The sign of anuvāra is sometimes placed after the consonant-sign, as in °padam yathārham, l. 17. The signs of virāma and avagraha do not occur, and a sign of punctuation is found only in lines 20 and 25 (where in either case it is out of place) and at the end of the grant. The language of the inscription is Sanskrit. There are two verses in lines 1-8, and four imprecatory verses in lines 27-35, the rest of the text is in prose. As regards orthography, the sign for v denotes both v and b, visarga at the end of a word is ten times omitted, and single consonants are used instead of double ones in chatusimā- for chatussimā-, l. 19, =anurōdhā cha for =anurōdhāch=cha, l. 26, and five or six times in the words data and dati for datta and datti (lines 25, 28, 29, 31, 32 and perhaps 23). There is besides some confusion of the short and long vowels, especially in the case of i and ī, where i is used instead of ī no less than nine times (e.g. in nīkasha, l. 3, rīpu, l. 10, salīla, l. 21, etc.), and ū, as has been already stated, is everywhere written by the sign for u. A few times the writer or engraver has omitted an akṣhara, as in *Vidyādhābhāñja*³ for *Vidyādharañja*³, l. 15, the chief name of the inscription which is correctly given on the seal, and altogether the grant has been written rather carelessly.

The inscription is one of the devout worshipper of Mahēśvara (Śiva), the ornament of the spotless family of the Bhañjas,² the Mahārāja Vidyādharañjadēva, also called King Dharmakalāśa(?), who was a son of Śīlābhāñjadēva,³ grandson of Digbhañjadēva,⁴ and great-grandson of Raṇabhañjadēva; and its object is to record a grant which was issued by the king from Vañjulvaka.⁵ Like the Gumsūr grant of Nētribhañjadēva Kalyāṇakalāśa, it opens with two verses which glorify the (third) eye of Hara (Śiva) and invoke the protection of the waves of the divine Gaṅgā. In lines 15-27 the king informs the Sāmantas, *Bhōgins*⁶ and others, the [lords of] viśhayas, and the people generally who dwell in the Rāmalaṅva, viśhaya, that with pouring out of water he gave the village of Tundurāva in that district,

rent-free,¹ to the bhaṭṭa Dārakhandī—a son of Śūridēva(?) and grandson of Gaurichandra—of the Upamanyu gōtra and Bahvricha śākhā (of the Rīgvēda), and he enjoins future kings (rājaka) to protect this gift, and (in lines 27-35) quotes four imprecatory verses from the dharmaśāstras.

The inscription (in lines 35-38) ends with four statements, introduced severally by the participles lāñchhitam, pravēṣitam, likhitam, and utkīrnam. About the meaning of the two last there can be no doubt the grant was written by the sāndhivigrahika (or minister of peace and war) Khambha, and engraved by the *akshasālīn*² (or goldsmith) Kumārachandra. The term pravēṣitam I have not found in similar surroundings in any other grant; but since this word takes the place here of the phrase svayam-ādīśhṭō rājñā dātakō=tra of the Gumsūr grant of Nētribhaṇja and of the earlier grant on these very plates³ (where that phrase in both cases appears in company with lāñchhitam, likhitam and utkīrnam), I think that it must likewise be taken to refer to the business of the dātaka and that the words pravēṣitam Kēsavēna must be translated 'brought (to the donee's) home by (the messenger) Kēsava.' The passage commencing with lāñchhitam I am unable to explain properly. According to Dr. Fleet, above, Vol. VII. p. 227, lāñchhana denotes the device used on the seals of copper-plate charters, etc., and lāñchhita therefore probably means 'furnished with such a device' or 'marked with a seal' (mudrayā mudritam).⁴ We find the word in the Buguḍa plates of Mādhavavarman,⁵ above, Vol. III. p. 46, l. 50, lāñchhitam Jayasiṅghēna; in the Gañjām plates of Prithivīvarmadēva, above, Vol. IV. p. 201, l. 35, lāñchhitamīn-cha śrī-mā(ma)hādēvyā, in the grant which was originally engraved on these plates, above, p. 272, lāñchhitam [rā]jñī-śrī-Mānikya-mahādēvyā, 'marked with a seal by the queen, the glorious Mānikya-mahādēvī'; and it occurs also in the Gumsūr grant of Nētribhaṇja, where the words by which it is followed cannot be made out with confidence.⁶ In the present case our text appears to give us lāñchhitam śrī-Trikalīṅga-mahādēvyā, 'marked with a seal by the glorious Trikalīṅga-mahādēvī,'⁷ which would be similar to what we find in the earlier grant on these plates, but these words are followed by tējadikēna, which may be corrupt and the meaning of which is quite obscure, and after that again we have the instrumental śrībhaṭṭa-Stambhadēva-mantrinā, 'by the minister, the bhaṭṭa Stambhadēva,'⁸ which, for want of the meaning of the obscure word, I see no way of connecting with what precedes. It is curious that in at least two of the passages where the word lāñchhitam occurs the marking with the seal is stated to have been performed by a queen.

Our inscription contains no date of any kind, and for the present it seems impossible to fix its age even approximately, because we know nothing that is certain about the chiefs of the Bhaṇja family during the Middle Ages,⁹ and possess no dated inscriptions with the same alphabet. With all due reserve I would say that the inscription may perhaps be assigned to the 12th or 13th century A.D.

As regards the localities, the inscription mentions Vaṇjūlvaka, from where both this grant and the Gumsūr grant of Nētribhaṇja were issued, the Ramalavva viśhaya and in it the village of Tundurāva. I have not found the names of these places on the sheets of the Indian Atlas where I have looked for them.

Dr Rājendralāl's text has Vaḷyaleakā. The Gumsūr grant appears to have Vāṇjūlvakā, which by Kamalākānta was misread Vāṇchalikā.¹¹ Read t | Asī śrī.¹² The visarga which I have added here and below before śrī is not absolutely necessary.¹³ The words in these brackets are conjectural. As will be seen from the facsimile, four akṣaras were originally engraved here, but they were partly struck out or altered; and the difficulty is enhanced by the fact that remnants of letters which were originally engraved on these plates are mixed up with the new letters. I consider it certain that the first akṣara is intended to be śrī (for śrī), and that the last contained the conjunct mm — The corresponding passage of the Gumsūr grant is *Asī-jayaśrī-nīlayah prakāṣaguna-grasta-sarvāpugarevāḥ śrī-Kalyāṇakalāsa-nāmā rājā*¹⁴ Read *nirdhūtā*¹⁵ In the facsimile the first akṣara (ra) of this name might be read ra (and was read so by Dr Rājendralāl), but in the original it is distinctly ra, and what looks like v is a remnant of what was originally engraved on the plate.¹⁶ This name is clear in the original; and so is the next. Dr Rājendralāl read the two names Divaḍḍhaṇja and Śilbhaṇja.¹⁷ Dr Rājendralāl read Bhaṇjanala-kula.¹⁸ Read °dēva=sa.¹⁹ The first three akṣaras of this name are clear in the original, the last might be read edha. Dr Rājendralāl read Ramalabhaṇja, but regarded the letters as doubtful.

The following two aksharas are conjectural. In the Gumsūr grant akaravēna is possibly followed by bhūnyatbhīh (for which the text has bhānyādī)

By D R BHANDARKAR, M.A., POONA.

The subjoined inscriptions are all engraved on a column standing in situ in Ghatiyālā, twenty-two miles west-north-west of Jōdhpur. The column is not far distant from an old ruined Jaina structure, now called Mātā-kī-sāl, which contains an inscription edited by Prof. Kielhorn in the Journ R As Soc 1895, p. 516. Further particulars in connection with these ruins will be found in the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of India, Western Circle, for the year ending 31st March 1907. Inscription No I is engraved on the eastern, and the remaining ones on the western, face of the pillar. The inscriptions are so weather-worn that it is not possible to take good impressions. With patience and perseverance, however, almost the whole of the inscriptions can be deciphered with certainty on the original stone itself.

Inscription No I contains 20 lines of writing, which covers a space of 2' 3½' high by 1' 6" broad. The characters agree with those of the inscription found in the Mātā-kī-sāl. The language is Sanskrit. The first seven lines are in prose. Lines 8—16 contain five verses. Then the date is given in prose in l 17. Then a verse occurs which is followed by a line in prose. As regards orthography, the letter b is only once denoted by the sign for v, in luṣumvakam, l 8; consonants are doubled after r, visarga followed by s has been once changed to that letter in dēvyās=sutô, l 7, the dental nasal has been used instead of an anusvāra before ś in °vansa°, l 1, t is doubled in conjunction with a following r, and visarga has been omitted once before the following sta in ayam=ustambhita stambhō, l 16.

The inscription opens with obeisance to Vināyaka (Ganapati). Then is set forth in prose a genealogical list of the feudatory Pratihāra family which is brought down to Kakkuka, to whose reign the inscription belongs. It agrees with the lists furnished by the inscription in the Mātā-kī-sāl and the epigraph of Bāuka found in the Jōdhpur city wall. It is followed up by five verses, the first two of which merely contain conventional praise of Kakkuka without giving any historical information. The third verse says that Kakkuka obtained great renown in the countries of Travani, Va'la and Māda, amongst (the people known as) Ārya, in Gurjjaratṛa, and in Parvata in the Lāṭa country. Most of these names are repeated in verse 16 in the other

³ Read buddhva

inscription of Kakkuka in the Mâtâ-kî-sâl. Thus, Travani is the same as Tamani there, and also occurs in this unaltered form in verse 18 of the Jôdhpur inscription of Bânka. Similarly, Valla is mentioned in both these inscriptions. Mâda is given in the Mâtâ-kî-sâl inscription in conjunction with Maru (Maru-Mâda). Jêsalmâr is still called Mâda, and Maru proper can only be the Sheo, Mallâni and Pâchpadrâ districts of the Jôdhpur State. Ârya and Gurjaratrâ are doubtless the Ajja and Gujarattâ of the Mâtâ-kî-sâl inscription. Ârya is unidentifiable, but is perhaps the same as that mentioned in Varâhamihira's Brihat-samhitâ, Cap. V, v 42. Gurjaratrâ, as has been shown by me elsewhere,¹ comprised the districts of Didwânâ and Parbatsar of the Jôdhpur State. Lâta, as was also pointed out by me, embraced about this time the larger portion of the present Gujarât of the Bombay Presidency.² Parvata, which is apparently said to be in Lâta, is unknown to me. Does Parvata, however, here simply mean a mountain and refer to some such inroad of Kakkuka as that mentioned in the expression gahûna gôhanâm gurimmi in verse 17 of the Mâtâ-kî-sâl record? Or perhaps Parvata may be taken to be a distinct country, and connected with the Pârvatîyas of the Brihat-samhitâ, Cap. XVII v. 16.

Verse 4 of our inscription tells us that Kakkuka erected two columns, one at Rôhimsaka and the other at Maddôdara. Exactly the same information is conveyed by verse 21 of the Mâtâ-kî-sâl record, excepting that for Rohimsaka we have there Rôhimsakûpa. Rôhimsaka is undoubtedly the same as this Rôhimsakûpa or the Rôhimsakûpaka of our inscription No. 2, and is to be identified with Ghatyâkâ. Maddôdara, it can scarcely be seriously doubted, is Mandôr, five miles north of Jôdhpur, which is locally believed to have been a seat of Pratihâra power and is full of very ancient ruins, and where a fragment of a Pratihâra inscription was discovered by me last season.³ The next verse informs us that the column on which the inscription has been incised was erected by Kakkuka. Precisely the same information is given by verse 21 of the Mâtâ-kî-sâl inscription. Then follows the date Samvat 918 Chaitra-sudi 2 budhâ Hasta-nakshatrê, the same as that mentioned in the latter inscription. And further we are told that here a market was established, and the village peopled with mahâyana, i.e. big folk. The very same thing is alluded to in verse 20 of the Mâtâ-kî-sâl record. The inscription really ends here so far as the purport of it is concerned, but a verse follows which has something of the character of a subhâshita. Its chief interest, however, lies in the fact that it was composed by Śrî-Kakkuka himself, as the line in prose at the end informs us.

Inscription No. II contains 11 lines of writing covering a space of 1' 3" high by 1' 2½" broad. Excepting the opening words Om siddhîh, it is in verse up to 19, and the rest in prose. The palæography and orthography do not call for any remarks other than those made in connection with inscription No. I. The first verse invokes the blessings of Vinâyaka (Gaṇapati) who, we are told, was placed on the column to ensure prosperity, and, as a matter of fact, the pillar is surmounted at the top by a quadruple image of Ganapati, facing the cardinal directions. The next verse informs us that the village of Rôhinsakûpaka (Ghatyâlâ) had formerly become unsafe on account of the Âbhîras (Ahîrs),¹ and had consequently not been a place of residence for good people. Verses 3 and 4 tell us that Kakkuka, the favourite son of Kakka, of the Pratihâra race, constructed a market place decorated with variegated streets, went to the houses of Brâhmanas, Kshatriyas (prakriti)² and Vaiśyas, and, promising them means of livelihood, established the mahâjana, the big folk there. We thus fully understand what the Mâtâ-kî-sâl epigraph and our inscription No. I mean by saying that Kakkuka established a haffa and mahâjana at Rohimsaka or Rohimsakûpa. Owing to its being infested by the Âbhîras, whose predatory instincts even to the present day are not quite extinct, the place must have become deserted, but it was re-peopled by Kakkuka by inducing men of the three principal castes to come and reside there, after he had defeated and ousted the Ahîrs. The verso following expresses a wish for the permanence of the prosperity of the mahâjana, and of the fame of Kakkuka. Then follows the date Samvat 918 Chaitra Sudî 2 which, though the further details of it are not given, is, it will be seen, identical with that specified in our inscription No I and the Mâtâ-kî-sâl epigraph. Next, we are informed that the inscription was written by a Maga, called Mâtriravi, and was engraved by the goldsmith Krishnêśvara, doubtless the same who incised the Jodhpur inscription of the Pratihâra Banka. It is followed up by the name of the sûtradhâra or mason who probably dressed the stone and erected the column, but the name is lost.

³ Another ancient name of Mandôr is Mândavyapura mentioned in verse 10 of the Jôdhpur inscription of the Pratihâra Bânka. In the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of India, Western Circle, for the year ending 31st March 1907, p 30, I have said that though this inscription stone was found in the city wall of Jôdhpur, it must originally have been at Mandôr, as all stones for the fortification of the fort had been brought from the latter place. This conclusion is confirmed by the first pâda of the verse just referred to, which is Mândavyapura-durgâsmin. The word asmin shows that the stone originally was at Mândavyapura, i.e. Mandôr. Mândavyapura, again, is spoken of both as a city and fort, and Mandôr remained so till the prince Jôdhâ removed his capital from there to Jôdhpur. Even to this day some of the portions of the ramparts of Mandôr have been preserved. As the verse in question states that certain Pratihâra brother princes erected ramparts round Mândavyapura fort, it is plain that it was in the possession of the feudatory Pratihâra princes. This is also corroborated by the fact mentioned in the text that last season I found a part of a stone inscription belonging to the Pratihâras. In it the name of Kaka could be distinctly read, and some reference to his son made therein could also be traced. But who that son was — whether Kakkuka or Bânka — is not certain. The name Mândavyapura occurs even so late as V. E 1319 in the Sûndhâ hill inscription of Châchigadêva (above, Vol IX., p 78, l. 86).

The fact that Mâtriravi is called a Maga is very interesting. On the original stone the letters ma and gê are quite distinct, and, though na is not so distinct, it is clear enough. No reasonable doubt need, therefore, be entertained as to Mâtriravi being spoken of as a Maga. Maga is another name for the Śâkadvipîya Brâhmanas, about whom the late Professor Weber wrote a very learned and exhaustive paper. Round about Jodhpur there is a class of Brâhmanas known as Sêvaks, most of whom are religious dependants of the Osvâl Śrâvaks. They call themselves Śâkadvipa Brâhmanas, and know that their story is told in the Nâmagrantha of the Sûrya-purâna and also in the Bhavishya-purâna. That the Śâkadvipîyas were originally foreigners has been clearly shown by Professor Weber. But it is only our inscription that furnishes a specific date, viz V E 918, when we can positively assert that Magas lived and were known by this very name in Râjputânâ at least.

Inscription No. III is of two lines containing nothing but verse 5 of Inscription No I. Inscription No. IV consists of four lines containing two verses. They possess the flavour of subhâshitas, and have each one and the same last pâda, saying that six things are dear to Kakkuka. What those six things are has been specified in the verses themselves.

Prakriti, which is the same as payat in verse 20 of the Mâtâ-kî-sâl inscription, here doubtless signifies the Kshatriya class, as it is distinguished both from the vîpra (Brâhmana) and vansik (Vaiśya) classes. This is rather an unusual sense of the word, and so far I have not seen it used in this sense anywhere else.

No 39.—SARANGARH COPPER PLATES OF MAHA-SUDEVA.

By HIRA LAL, B.A., NAGPUR.

Sarangarh is the capital of a feudatory State of the same name in the Chhattisgarh division of the Central Provinces, 32 miles south of Raigarh, the capital of another State and a station on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway. The chiefs of these two States are Rāj-Gōpds. The plates in question are in the possession of the Rāj family and first came to my notice in the beginning of the year 1903 at my last visit to Sarangarh. As they were locked up and the keys were not available at the time, the then Superintendent of the State, Rai Sahib Ālam Chand, promised to send them to me when I asked for them, but my reversion to the executive duties before I could return to head-quarters, followed by Papdit Ālam Chand's retirement from service, left them where they were, until the present Superintendent, Munshi Akbar Khān, took active steps in the matter at the instance of Rai Bahadur Pandā Baijnath, B.A., Diwān of the Bastar State, and sent them on to me on the 7th January 1908. Thus the recovery of the plates first discovered over forty years ago is as much due to the interest of the above gentlemen as to the readiness of Rāja Jawāhar Singh to lend them for examination.

The exact date and the details of the first discovery are not now forthcoming, but the plates are said to have reached the Bengal Asiatic Society on the 7th December 1864.⁵ Dr. Rājendra Lal Mitra published them in that Society's Journal in 1866, where he stated that they were presented to the Society by Lieutenant G. Bowie of the Sambalpur Police Corps, but when Dr. Fleet wrote his Gupta inscriptions about 1888, and searched for the plates, he could not find them. He then recorded that as the published version was not sufficiently reliable to be reproduced he was unable to include this inscription in his volume¹

The fact appears to be that the plates were never presented to the Society. They were simply lent by and finally returned to the owner, the Sārangarh family, whose State was in those days included in the Sambalpur district, now transferred to Bengal

These facts combined with the absence of a facsimile copy of the record in Dr. Rājendra Lal's notice, together with certain misreadings of the text, afford, I venture to think, sufficient reasons for re-editing this inscription.

There are two copper plates, each measuring $6\frac{1}{2}" \times 3\frac{1}{2}"$, and the weight of the two together is 12 ozs. $5\frac{1}{2}$ drs. About 1" from the proper right margin each plate has a hole, roundish on one side and squarish on the other, the diameter being about $\frac{1}{8}"$. These were intended for stringing the plates on the ring, the loss of which has deprived our inscription of its last portion, which must have been engraved on a third plate. The lost plate must have contained about 5 or 6 lines² which can almost be restored from other inscriptions of the same king, and of Mahā-Jayarāja, all of which are composed in exactly the same wordings, the names of villages granted and the donees being of course different. In our inscription only some of the imprecatory verses are lost as also the date at the end, which of course cannot be restored. Judging from other inscriptions of this king the date must have been in regnal years, so that it could not have been of much help beyond fixing the priority or otherwise of our inscription as compared with others.

The plates recovered are in an excellent state of preservation. One is inscribed on one side and the other on both in characters of the box-headed variety of the Central Indian alphabet. The letters are very neatly and well formed, their average size being about $\frac{1}{4}"$. The accompanying plate gives a facsimile copy, from impressions kindly taken for me by Mr. T. G. Green, Superintendent of the Government Press, Nagpur

The language is Sanskrit prose except the usual imprecatory verses, here attributed to Vyāsa. As regards orthography, there is very little to be noticed beyond what has been already done by Dr. Konow with regard to another inscription of the same king recently found at Khariar³. As the composition is almost identical, the peculiarities are common to both. The upadhāniya occurs in line 3 in -pradah=parama-. The same sign, viz 2 dots, has been used for visarga and a pause. Ordinarily mātrās for u, ṛ and ḷ alone are attached at the foot of letters, but in this inscription there is a curious example in line 12 where the sign for ō in anumōḍitaḥ is partly exhibited by a top and partly by a foot stroke, all other ō's being represented by the top strokes for ā and ē, compare vikkramōpanata- of line 1

The inscription was issued from the town of Śarabhapura and records the grant of a village named Chullandāraka situated in the bhukti or subdivision of Tundāraka by the Queen and the royal family of Rāja Mahā-Sudēva and assented to by him, to a number of learned priests, viz Bhāskarasyāmi, Prabhākarasyāmi, Barbbarisyāmi, Bōtasvāmi, Dattasvāmi, Vishṇusvāmi, Phalḡusvāmi, Svāmīkīrtisvāmi and Śamkarasyāmi, all of the Kauśika gōtra. One of these, Vishṇusvāmi, is apparently identical with the donee of the Khariar plates. He also belonged to the Kauśika gōtra and received a village in the Khariar zamindārī from this king. Neither these two nor the third charter of this king, which was obtained from Raipur, throw any light on the dynasty to which he belonged or on his date. Dr Konow has conjectured that the Śarabhapura kings might have been Rāshtrakūtas. They were ascendant in the Central Provinces about the 8th century to which period the characters of our inscription belong. But Dr Konow, for reasons pointed out by him, regards the identification as yet very doubtful.

² Eighteen lines of our inscription remain, the Khariar plates have 23 lines, the Ārang plates of Jayarāja 24, and the Raipur plates of Sudēva 28, but these last ones are much smaller in size than the others. Our plates are slightly bigger than all the three sets

Of the geographical names occurring in the inscription Śarabhapura, which recurs in the other two grants of Mahā-Sudēva, and in the Ârang plates of Mahā-Jayarāja, has not yet been identified. I identify Tundaraka with the present Tūndrā, about 6 miles south of Seorī Nārāyan on the Mahānadi and about 35 miles west of Sārangarh. It is now included in the Balōdā Bazār tahsīl of the Raipur district. The village Chullandaraka must have been somewhere close to Tūndrā, but I am at present unable to trace it. If it exists we would now find the name in a form like Chulāndur, a characteristic Chattisgarhi name, some similar ones which I remember being Machāndur, Palāndur, Kachāndur, etc. It appears to me that another village granted by Mahā-Sudēva in his Raipur charter was not very far away from Tūndrā. It is called Śrīsāhikā,¹ which I take to be the present Sīrsāhī, also included in the Balōdā Bazār tahsīl, and situated about 25 miles south-west of Tūndrā. Mahā-Jayarāja of the Ârang plates, who belonged to the same dynasty, also seems to have granted a village in the same part of his kingdom, viz. Pāmvā,² which I identify with Pāngarh,³ about 21 miles north of Tūndrā and included in the Jānjgir tahsīl of the Bilāspur district. Pāmvā and Śrīsāhikā are stated to be included in the Pūrvarāshtra or Eastern country, and we know from the Khariar plates that to the south the kingdom extended at least up to Khariar. This leads to the inference that the territories of Mahā-Sudēva included a large portion of Mahā-Kōsala, or roughly speaking Chattisgarh division.

Om! Hail! From Sarabhapura. The illustrious Mahā-Sudēva Rāja, whose two feet are washed by the water which is the flowing forth of the lustre from the crest jewels in the tiaras of the chiefs who have been subjugated by (his) prowess, who is the cause for the doing away with the parting of the hair of the women of his enemies, who is the giver of riches, of land and of cows, who is a devout worshipper of the Bhagavat; who meditates on the feet of his mother and father—issues a command to the householders living in Chullandaraka in the territorial sub-division (bhukti)⁶ of Tundaraka:—

Be it known to you that this village, the source (by this grant of it) of (our) ensuring the happiness of the abode of (Indra), the lord of the gods—which has been conveyed by a copper charter accompanied with (pouring) of water, by the Royal Consort⁷ and the Royal Family to Bhāskaravāmi, who knows the three thousand⁸ (verses?) Prabhākaravāmi, Harbhāravāmi, Bōtasvāmi, Dattasvāmi, Viśhpusvāmi, Phalgunavāmi, Svāmīkirtisvāmi,⁹ (and) Śankarasvāmi (all) of the Kauśika gōtra, to be enjoyed as long as the world endures, having the terrible darkness dispelled by the rays of the Sun, the Moon and the Stars, together with its treasures and deposits, not to be entered by the district officer¹⁰ and soldiers, (and), free from all taxes,—has been sanctioned by us, for the increase of the religious merit of (our) parents and of ourself. Being aware of this you should be obedient to their commands, and should dwell in happiness rendering in proper manner (their) share of the enjoyment.

And he enjoins upon future kings:—The ancients whose minds are fixed upon religion say that the virtue that arises from the preservation (of a grant) is greater than (that which arises from making a grant); therefore your mind should verily incline to preserve land that has been given to a Brāhman of very pure family and holy learning. Therefore this gift should be preserved by you also.

And they cite on this point the verses that were sung by Vyasa—Gold is the first offspring of fire, the earth belongs to the God Vishnu and (cows are) the daughters of the sun: (therefore the three worlds are given by him who gives gold, and a cow and land).¹

No 40—PATIAKELLA GRANT OF MAHARAJA SIVARAJA
[GUPTA] SAMVAT 283

By R D BANERJI.

This inscription, which is edited here for the first time, was discovered several years ago by a peasant in a cornfield in the zamindari of Patiakellā in the district of Cuttack in Orissa. It is the property of an Ōṛiyā Brāhman, who, I hear, regularly worships it. The Rājā of Patiakellā made it over to Bābu Nagendra Nātha Vasu, the Honorary Archaeological Surveyor to the Mayūrbhañja Estate. Nagendra Bābu made it over to me some six or seven months ago for decipherment.

The inscription is engraved on a single plate of copper, measuring $7\frac{1}{4}$ " by $2\frac{1}{2}$ ". To the left there is an oval projection, $1\frac{1}{2}$ " long, to which a lump of brass or bell metal is attached. On the top of this lump there is an oval cavity, showing traces of the seal. But no letters or symbols are discernible at present. Both sides of the plate are inscribed. Altogether there are eighteen lines of writing in this grant. The writing was fairly well executed, but its preservation is not very good. One corner of the plate is missing and has carried away portions of the dates with it. Fortunately the date can be made out correctly from the portions still remaining. In this grant the date was given twice. First of all we read in the second line tryadhikāṣṭittvattara . . . and secondly at the end of the eighteenth line Samvat 200 . . . Thus tens and hundreds are all fairly certain. I am indebted to Dr. Konow for the reading of the symbol for two hundred.

The characters belong to the northern class of alphabets and are in every respect similar to those of the Mundēśvari inscription of Udayasena, from the Shikharabad district. The Mundēśvari inscription is dated in the [Harsha] year 30 (635 A.D.).² The peculiarities of the characters of our grant are as follows:—

- (a) Among the ligatures the only noticeable feature is to be found in the ā mark, which is expressed in two different ways while attached to the same letter na. Cf privilege of importance that the head of the district was not allowed to interfere with the granted land, in other words, he was not allowed to collect labourers or to demand supplies, &c., on a half of the State."

² The Mundēśvari inscription has been found in two pieces. The second portion was presented to the Indian Museum so far back as 1891. The first portion containing the date was found among the debris around the temple and sent to the Indian Museum in 1904. For the Mundēśvari temple, see List of Ancient Monuments in Bengal (1895), p. 370. Dr. Bloch has referred to this inscription twice. See Annual Report of the Archaeological Survey, Bengal Circle, 1902-03, p. 20, and Annual Report of the Archaeological Survey of India, 1903-04, pp. 42-43. The inscription will be published below, pp. 289 and ff.

punyābhivṛddhayē in l 8 with vṛihadbhōgikādhikaranāny=ēva, l 7. The ē mark is unusual in -pūrvakēn=d- in l 9.

- (b) It is interesting to note that this Cuttack grant shows a greater affinity to the Mundēśvarī inscription than does the Gañjām grant of Śaśānka,¹ while the latter shows a marked affinity to the Bōdh Gayā inscription of Mahānāman of the Gupta year 269.² Thus the ya in the Bōdh Gayā inscription and the Gañjām plate is bipartite, while in the Mundēśvarī inscription and the present grant it is of the usual early Gupta type, i.e. tripartite. Similarly the lingual sha in our grant and the Mundēśvarī inscription shows a cursive base line unlike the acute angle type of the Bōdh Gayā and Gañjām inscriptions. This form of sha is also to be found in the Nepal inscription of the year 316.³
- (c) The presence of the acute angle is noticeable only in the dental sa and ma, as is also the case in the Mundēśvarī inscription. But some letters show a well-defined acute angle at their lower extremities in alternative cases, cf. the dha in -hārādhigama- (l. 5) with that in -dīdhiti- in l 3, and vṛihadbhōgikādhikaranāny= in l 7.
- (d) The characters of our grant differ from those of the Mundēśvarī inscription in so far as the lingual na in the latter is exactly similar to the na of the early Gupta type, while the na in our grant has larger space between the right and left curves.
- (e) The characters of this grant show a greater affinity to the Gōlmādhutōl inscription of the Gupta year 316 than to the contemporary Nepal inscriptions. The paleography of the epoch beginning with the last half of the 6th and ending with the first half of the 7th century A.D. can nowhere be studied with greater advantage than in Nepal. The inscriptions of the Harsha year 34, the Gupta year 316, the Harsha years 39 and 45 show very clearly the change which came over later Gupta characters in the last half of the 6th century and the 50 years following that. Thus the Gōlmādhutōl inscription of the year 316 shows in its characters very little departure from those of the Mandasōr inscription of Yaśōdharman.⁴ The Patan inscription of the year 34⁵ exhibits a further step onwards, as it is more allied to the Gañjām grant of Śaśānka than our grant or the Gōlmādhutōl inscription. The next inscription, that of the Harsha year 39⁶ and the short record of the year 45 of the same era, are inscribed in characters which are very much akin to the Bōdh Gayā inscription of Mahānāman and the Madhuban and Banskhēra grants of Harshavardhana.
- (f) The letters da and ṭa resemble each other very closely. Thus, vṛihadbhōgikādhikaranāny=, l 7, looks like vṛiṣaṭbhōgikādhikaranāny=.
- (g) There is little difference between va and cha. Thus, -chala-taraṅga-, l. 1, looks like -vala-taraṅga-, while Śivarājah, l. 5, looks like Śicharājah.

As regards orthography two or three departures are noticeable, such as -maṁgura-, l. 1, -vanśa- and -āsītty-, l. 2, gēhattō, l 8.

The object of the inscription is to record a grant made by a feudatory chief named Śivarāja to a number of Brāhmins during the reign of his suzerain Śagguyayyana of southern Tōsalī. Śagguyayyana is styled Paramamādhēśvara-Paramabhāṭṭāraka-Paramadēvatādhipatya, which clearly shows his imperial position. The title of the suzerain and the name of the donor points to Śaivism, but the names of several donees such as Vishnusrvāmi, Rēvatisvāmi, Gōpālasvāmi, etc., show a Vaishnava taint. The document was issued from Vōrttanōka, which was the Imperial capital (l. 4) as well as the residence of the feudatory chief (l. 8). The grant consisted in the village Tandraivalu. It was given to several Brāhmins belonging to separate gōtras and charanas. The date has already been discussed. There can be little doubt about the fact that it is a Gupta year. Thus our grant was incised after the Bōdh Gayā inscription and before the Gaṇjām grant, the Nepal inscription of the year 316, and the Mundēsvārī inscription. The second line mentions the kings of the Māna race, Mānavansa-rājya-kālē. This dynasty has been mentioned in two 12th century inscriptions only, viz the Nawādī inscription of the Śaka year 1059,¹ which has been recently purchased by the Archaeological Survey and brought to the Indian Museum, and in the Dudhpau rock inscription.²

I am afraid it is beyond my power to identify the geographical position of the village mentioned in the Patīakellā grant. Neither the vishaya nor the bhukti or the mandala has been mentioned in the grant, but in lines 5-6, we find asminn-ēva vishayē, which probably indicates that the name of the vishaya was also Vōrttanōka.³ I now edit the inscription from the original plate —⁴

No. 41 — MUNDESVARI INSCRIPTION OF UDAYASENA.
THE [HARSHA] YEAR 30.

By B. D. BANERJEE.

This inscription was discovered among the débris which had accumulated around the temple of Mundēśvari in the Bhābua subdivision of the Shāhābād district¹ It seems that sometime after the incision of the inscription some ignorant person sawed it lengthwise in halves. The two halves of the inscription were discovered and brought to the Indian Museum at different dates. The second half seems to have been discovered by the late Babu Purna Chandra Mukhārji so far back as 1891-92. The first half, which is the more important part of the inscription, as it contains the date, was discovered in 1902² Impressions on tin foils were then sent to Dr Bloch. The inscription was finally brought to the Indian Museum in the beginning of 1904. The two halves have now been joined together and placed on a masonry pedestal in the Inscription gallery of the Museum.

The stone measures 2' 8" by 1' 1" and contains eighteen lines of well-executed writing. In the first half of the inscription the first fifteen lines are clear, but the sixteenth line has been much damaged and the seventeenth and eighteenth lines have been lost altogether. With the exception of the last two lines, which contain one of the usual imprecatory verses, the whole of the inscription is in prose.

In a previous paper I have fully discussed the palæography of this inscription³ The only orthographical peculiarities are the substitution of ba for va in sambatsara, and the use of n instead of m before t. Letters with a superscribed rēpha have been doubled. Final forms of m are to be found in ll. 2, 4 and 18, and of t in 1 15. The sign of avagraha has not been used at all, though it would have been in its place in ll. 14 and 18. Note also the form kāritakam in l. 6.

The inscription records a grant of two prasikas of rice and a pala of oil to the god Maṇḍal-ēśvara by a *kulapati*⁴ named Bhāgudalana. It is dated in the year 30 in the reign of the Mahāsāmanta, Mahāpratihāra, Mahārāja Udayasēna, who is not known from other sources. Judging from the affinity of the characters of this inscription with those of the years 34 and 39 from Nepal,⁵ the era is most probably that established by Harshavardhana. The mutilation of the central portion of the inscription by sawing the stone into two halves has caused a series of gaps. Some of these can be filled up, but lines 11 and 15 are quite unintelligible. I now edit the inscription from the original stone.

No 42 —INSCRIPTION ON THE UMBRELLA STAFF OF THE BUDDHIST
IMAGE FROM SAHET MAHET

By T. Bloch, Ph.D.

The stone bearing this inscription was discovered by Rākhal Dās Banerji in April, 1908, in the Lucknow Museum. As Dr Vogel tells me, it is a red sandstone slab, 3' 1" high, 11½" wide, and 4½" thick. "It is broken off at the top, just where the octagonal portion begins. Here the four corners are provided with an ornament in the Mathurā style. The lower portion of the slab is carved with a seated female figure, apparently unfinished. The back of the column is cut off straight." The photograph of the stone, supplied to me by Dr Vogel, shows that this carving has been done at a later time, perhaps when the stone was intended to be used for some building. It has destroyed a good many letters in the second half of the inscription, while the first half has become almost entirely obliterated by sharpening knives on it.

However, enough remains to make it absolutely clear that the inscription was identical with the dedicatory epigraph on the pedestal of the large standing Bōdhisattva from Sahet Mahêt, which has been edited by me, above, Vol VIII pp 180-181. This fact is of considerable interest. First it shows that I was right in explaining the word dāndaś=cha in line 2 of the Sahêt Mahêt image inscription as "a staff for supporting the umbrella over the head of the Bôdhisattva" (l c p 180). Secondly,—and this is by far the most important point connected with this inscription,—we now know for certain that the Sahêt Mahêt statue was found by Cunningham in situ, or, in other words, that no possible doubt can be raised against the correctness of Cunningham's identification of Sahêt Mahêt with Śrāvastī.¹ For although the records of the Lucknow Museum are not as clear as one would have expected them to be in regard to the provenance of the stone, Dr. Vogel has pointed out to me some very conclusive evidence, which in my opinion makes it certain that the stone was found by Dr Hoey during his excavations at Sahêt Mahêt in 1885. The only possible doubt that could be, and has been, raised against the bearing of the Sahêt Mahêt, now Calcutta Museum, statue upon the question of the identity of Sahêt Mahêt with Śrāvastī, turned around this point: did Cunningham find the Bôdhisattva image at Sahêt Mahêt in its original position, or had it been shifted to this place from somewhere else? Strange though such a transportation would appear to us prima facie, it still has been, as far as I know, an assumption that seemed to recommend itself to certain scholars. I am afraid their position has now become definitely weakened by the discoveries above referred to.

Unfortunately no further help is given to us by the new inscription for restoring the missing words in the beginning of the inscription on the pedestal of the Bôdhisattva statue in the Calcutta Museum. Only the two letters apu in the beginning of line 2 show that I was right in restoring the second word in the Calcutta inscription as dévaputrasya, and further in ascribing the Calcutta statue to the time of either Kanishka or Huvishka. However, this is a very small matter, for which hardly any additional proof was required owing to the occurrence of the name of the Trépitala Bala, the donor of the Calcutta image, in a Mathurâ inscription of the year 33 of Huvishka.²

I now edit the inscription from impressions and a photograph, kindly supplied to me by Dr Vogel.

By STEN KONOW.

During the excavations in Sârânâth in February 1907, I found a fragment of a stone umbrella lying between the bases of two small brick stûpas to the west of the main shrine excavated by Mr. Oertel in 1905. On the inner cavity of the fragment a Brāhmī inscription was engraved in four lines, the fourth running along the rim. The inscription, which is complete, covers the whole inner surface of the fragment, and the umbrella had therefore probably been broken when it was engraved.

The fragment is $17\frac{3}{4}$ " long and $5\frac{1}{2}$ " broad, and the umbrella to which it belongs must have had a diameter of nearly six feet. The letters are deeply cut, and their height varies from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

The characters are Brāhmī of the second or third century A.D. The forms of ma and sa are ancient, and the same is the case with ya. The shape of individual letters is not, however, constant. Thus the na of imāni, l. 1, differs from the na in gāmini, l. 4, the du in dukkha in lines 2, 3 and 4 has different shapes; the dha of nirōdha, l. 3, is angular, while it has been rounded in l. 4, etc. The form of the compound kkha is of some interest, the lha being open at the bottom. In bhikkhavē, l. 1, however, the bottom line has apparently been added by mistake under the following vē. The two kkhas in l. 2 differ from each other, and, on the whole, the form of this ligature is not the same in any two places.

The language is the Pāli of Buddhist literature, but with several misspellings, and other mistakes. Thus in l. 2, we find dikkhavē instead of bhikkhavē, and arūyasachcham, l. 3 ariyayachcham, and in l. 4 arisachcham, all instead of ariyasachcham. These slips, taken together with the uncertainty in the formation of the individual letters, can only be accounted for by the supposition that the inscription was cut by an engraver who did not understand the original. The occasional introduction of the Sanskrit samdhū in -samudaya ariyaya(sa)chcham, l. 3, points in the same direction.

The inscription contains a short enumeration of the four ariyasachchas, the fundamental doctrines of the Buddhas. These four truths form the essence of the famous Benares sermon, and our inscription is accordingly very appropriate in the spot where the Buddha first "turned the wheel of the law." In this connection it is of interest to note that the great majority of the statues unearthed in Sarnāth represent the Buddha in the Dharmachakramudrā, delivering his first sermon. The enumeration of the four noble truths or axioms is of the same conventional kind which is so common in Pāli literature, and though I have not found the exact quotation, I do not doubt that the passage cut on the stone is meant as a quotation from the Canon. Our inscription, therefore, furnishes a valuable epigraphical proof for the existence of a Pāli Canon in the second or third century A.D. It is also of interest as the first old Pāli inscription found in North India. I here take the word Pāli to mean the language of the Southern Canon, the only use of the word which I consider as justified.

Another inscription written in Pāli was discovered during the excavations carried on by Mr Marshall and myself in the winter of 1908, on the back of a slab containing conventional representations of scenes of the Buddha's life. I publish it here from impressions prepared in my office. The writing covers a space of 12" x 9", and the height of the individual letters is $\frac{1}{2}$ "-1".

The characters belong to the 4th, or, perhaps, the 3rd century A.D. The tripartite ya is almost identical with the ya of the Allahābād prasasti, while the sa has the older form with a hook, and not with a loop. The date of the inscription is of interest for the history of Buddhist iconography.

The language is mixed Pāli, the forms -prabhavā in line 1, and -śramaṇō, l. 6, not belonging to the dialect. The inscription contains the common formula yē dhammā, etc.

No 44 —SPURIOUS LAPHA PLATE OF THE HAIHAYA KING PRITHVIDEVA

By HIRA LAL, B A., NAGPUR.

At the request of Mr C U. Wills, I.C.S., Zamindārī Settlement Officer, Bilāspur District, I have examined a copper plate in the possession of a Zamindār at Lāphā, named Dahirāj Singh, who is over sixty years of age and whom I had the pleasure to meet. He was good enough to lend it to me for taking an impression to accompany this note. He informed me that the plate was given to one of his ancestors, who first came from Delhi and took service at Ratanpur as one of the gate-keepers of the Ratanpur Fort and also as a guard of the Rānī's palace. He used to live in the Bhūdimūḍipirā, one of the quarters of Ratanpur town. This portion of the town was eventually given to him as a mū'āfi, and afterwards the present copper plate grant is said to have been given bestowing on him 120 villages belonging to the Lāphā Fort. The present Zamindārī contains only 75 villages and the Zamindār informed me that before Mr Chisholm's settlement in the year 1868, there were only 60 villages in it.

The plate is rectangular, measuring $9\frac{1}{4}$ " x $4\frac{1}{8}$ ", having a smooth surface, inscribed on one side only. There are two small holes on the top. The writing covers $7\frac{1}{2}$ " x $3\frac{1}{2}$ ", leaving out the Śrī at the top.

The record consists of 8 lines surmounted by a prefatory one, the middle portion of which is spaced down, apparently for ornamental purposes. This line and the word śrī at the top together with śrī 5 at the commencement and subham=astu and the date in figures at the end are in prose. The rest is in verse, consisting of 5 anushṭubh ślōkas which are numbered, except the last. There are altogether 206 letters including 9 figures.

The style of writing is Ōriyā, and there are not less than 25 letters which are distinctly borrowed from the alphabet of that language. All the mātrās or vowel signs have been marked according to what is in vogue in the present Ōriyā writing. The letters ja, da and va have been invariably written in the Ōriyā form. The language is Sanskrit with spelling mistakes. Thus in verse 2 we find sūrasūmantā instead of śūrasūmantā.

The inscription purports to record the gift of 120 villages appertaining to the Lamphā (Lāphā) fort to a noble named Lungā, who had come from Delhi, by the Haihaya king Prithvī-dēva, on the 1st day of the dark fortnight of Māgha in Samvat 806. For what services the gift was made and on what conditions, is not stated, but it was to be hereditary and it was given because the king's "mind was pleased with the Kauraviya"¹ which apparently means that he was pleased with the Kavar tribe, to which the donee belonged, presumably for their military services. What strikes one most at the first glance is the freshness of the metal, the clean cut and the modern characters, and this rouses suspicion. The intermixture of Ōriyā letters is in itself suspicious. They might, however, be old and indicate that the plate is an old one. On looking for the date such an idea gets partially confirmed, but the suspicion again revives as soon as we learn from the Zamīndār that, since the grant was made, only 27 generations have supervened. The Zamīndār thinks the date to be of the Vikrama era, so that the plate would be about 1,159 years old. This would give, on the average, 43 years to a generation, which is absurd. A critical examination of the record affords as easy an evidence of its being spurious. The characters are in reality all modern, having been taken from the Hindi and Ōriyā alphabets. The inscriptional alphabet of the Chhattisgarh Haihayas has a peculiarity of its own, not easily describable, but which distinguishes it from the modern alphabet. The most distinctive letters are cha, ja, dha, bha and śa, but in all instances where these letters occur in the present plate, they have no such distinctive features. The style of the record is also modern. I have not come across any Haihaya inscription with a śrī at the top, which modern writers usually put in. Again the word śrī Krishnachandra, which is apparently meant as an invocation, is a modernism, similar phrases being śrī-Rāma, śrī-Gaṇēśa, etc. In all Haihaya inscriptions, the invocation is Om namah Śivāya, i.e. I bow down to Śiva. The forger, who, I believe, had seen many of the Haihaya inscriptions, forgot the distinctive Haihaya invocation owing to the story of Śrī-Krishna being uppermost in his mind, and he thought that as Krishna was so well pleased with Mayūrādhvaja, the supposed ancestor of the Haihayas, an invocation to that deity would be most appropriate. The next phrase, calling the record viyaya-lēkha or the victorious writ, meaning royal record, is another novelty of the Ōriyā type, in which, as in Dravidian languages, the addition of viyaya or victory to every act done by a high personage is a matter of etiquette. A Rāja does not go, he conquers viyaya karuchhanti, he does not eat, he conquers the kitchen, he does not answer the call of nature, he conquers the latrine, and so on. I have not come across any other grant being distinguished as viyaya-lēkha. The next phrase refers to a seal, which is nowhere to be found. The prefatory phrases done, the record proper again begins with a modernism, viz śrī 5. This reminds one of a Hindi letter-writer which was used in schools, some years ago, in which there was a couplet to the effect that 6 śris should be recorded for a preceptor, 5 for a master, 4 for an enemy, 3 for a friend, 2 for a servant, and 1 for a wife or son. This must have occurred to the writer's mind, more particularly because he was, as I suppose, a school-master himself and was probably teaching the Paṭṭraḥitaśhinī to his pupils.

Now with regard to the date, the Vikrama year 806 or 749 A.D. is impossible. It goes back to a period when probably the Haihayas had not at all come to Chhattisgarh. From inscriptions we have a date 1114 of Jājalladēva² I, who was fifth in descent from Kalingarāja, the first Haihaya, who is said to have conquered Dakṣhinakōśala. Taking then the date of Kalingarāja to be 1000 A.D., the present grant would have been made by the Haihayas 250 years before they began to rule in Chhattisgarh. Even if we suppose that it refers to the Kalachuri era, it would be equivalent to 1054 A.D., i.e. almost contemporaneous with the commencement of Haihaya rule. Prithvirāja was fourth in descent from Kalingarāja and was the father of Jājalladēva I. The date of this plate would place a difference of 60 years between father and son, if we suppose that both records were written in the first year of their reigns This is again improbable These kings moreover had not then gone to Ratanpur

On the whole, I come to the conclusion for reasons stated above that this grant to Lungā is a lungā¹ affair and was perpetrated somewhere between 1860 and 1870 by a Sanskritist of Ratanpur, whom I do not desire to name out of respect for his Sanskrit learning I suppose 'chill penury' induced him to undertake a work which he would not have otherwise done The record does not show any adequate cause for the grant being made, and it is noteworthy that exactly double the number of villages of those which the Zamindārī contained before Mr Chisholm's settlement were recorded as granted by the Haihaya Rāja. It may be noted that when this record was written the change of the tribal name of the donee or his descendants from Kavar to Tavar had not been mooted or at least had not been seriously taken up, otherwise we should not have had the phrase Kauraviya-prasannadhī in verse 3 There is a family genealogy of the Lāphā Zamindār, written in the year 1927 or 1870 A.D., which shows that the tribal name had then been changed to Tavar

NO 45 — ABHONA PLATES OF SANKARAGANA. KALACHURI SAMVAT 347

By K B PATHAK, PROFESSOR OF SANSKRIT, DECCAN COLLEGE, POONA

These two plates belong to a Rajput family residing at Ābhōna, a village in the Kalavana tāluka of the Nāsik district. I obtained them on loan through my friend Mr N C Kelkar. They are inscribed on one side only, and measure $9\frac{1}{4}'' \times 7''$. The writing is carefully engraved and is in a good state of preservation.

The characters belong to a variety of the southern alphabet which is well-known from the Sarsavai plates of Buddharāja edited by Dr Kielhorn in this Journal, Vol VI, pp 294 and ff. They include numerical symbols for 300, 40, 7, 10 and 5 in line 34. The language of the inscription is Sanskrit, and with the exception of five imprecatory and benedictive verses in lines 28-33, the text is in prose.

The inscription is one of Śankaragana, the son of Krishnarāja, of the family of the Katachchūris. It records an order of Śankaragana, issued from his camp at Ujjayini, to the effect that he granted a hundred nivarttanas of land in the village of Vallisikā situated in the district of Bhōgavarddhana to a Brāhmana named Ālmanasvāmin, of the Gautama gotra, belonging to the Taittiriya śūkhā, who was a resident of Kallāvana, at the request of Gōggā. The inscription is dated, in words and numerical symbols, on the 15th day of the bright half of Śrāvana of the year 347,² which must be referred to the Kalachuri era, so that the date corresponds to the 27th July A.D. 595.

The Katachchūri Śankaragana is identical with the father of Buddharāja, who issued the Sarsavai grant. The wording of the two inscriptions is practically identical, with the exception of the portion referring to the grants themselves. There is, of course, nothing in our inscription to correspond to lines 14-17 of the Sarsavai plates, which refer to Buddharāja.

Of the localities occurring in our inscription, Kallāvana is the modern Kalavana in the Nāsik district. Vallisikā and Bhōgavarddhana I cannot identify.

In line 20 of the present inscription we find the technical expression a-chūṣa-bhaṣa-pravēśyam, which so frequently occurs in other inscriptions, and which has usually been rendered "not to be entered by irregular and regular soldiers." I invite the attention of Sanskrit scholars to the following passage, in which Śankarāchārya uses it,³—tasmāt tārīka-chūṣa-bhaṣa-rāj-āpravēśyam abhayaṁ durgam idam alpabuddhy-agamyam śāstra-guru-prasāda-rahitais cha Ānandajñāna gives the following explanation,— advaitē virōdh-āntar-ābhāvē=pr tārīka-samaya-virōdhō=st=ity=āsanky=āha tasmāt iti | pramāna-virōdh-ābhāvas tach-chhabd-ārthah | āryamaryādām bhindū-

¹ Or, if we read Kauraviya, "he gave to the very brave and noble Kaurava (Kawar) named Lungā."

There are two circular holes on the left side of the page, suggesting it was once part of a bound volume. The script is dense and appears to be a form of Devanagari or a related Indic script.

TRANSLATION.¹

Line 1. Om ' Hail ' From the victorious camp pitched at Ūjjayini. In the lineage of the Katakchûris, which, like the great ocean, is extensive and spotless as the firmament, clear on the approach of autumn, illumined by the mass of the rays of the excellences of many jewels of men (as the ocean is adorned by the rays of its gems); which is difficult to be crossed, because it is the home of men of great vigour (as the ocean is of large animals), full of gravity and desirous of keeping within the bounds of what is proper (just as the ocean is full of depth and desirous of keeping within its shores), there was the glorious Krishnarāja, who illumined the world with his fame, as the moon with light, agreeable to all men, who was from his birth solely devoted to Paśupati (Śiva), just as the moon solely rests on Śiva, who (though) free from defects, yet like the moon (who has a spot) revives the beauty (prosperity) of his family resembling a forest of night lotuses, who was resorted to by all virtues which attract² men to a king and by other qualities, as if through a desire to obtain a very suitable abode, who was endowed with all the constituent parts of royalty, who had properly enjoyed the fruits of his regal powers, who resplendent with his illustrious family, the flow of his liberality being ceaseless and the majesty of his power well-known, roaming fearlessly, subdued the regions, as the chief in a herd of wild elephants, with the ceaseless flow of its rutting juice, displaying the greatness of its strength, roaming about fearlessly breaks down rows of forests, whose sword was used to protect the helpless, whose wars were made to humble the pride of his enemies, whose learning aimed at modesty, who acquired wealth to make gifts, who made gifts in order to acquire religious merit, and acquired religious merit in order to obtain final bliss

(L 10) His son, the glorious Śankaragana, a great devotee of Śiva, the lord of countries bounded by the eastern and western ocean, and other lands, who meditated on the feet of his parents; who had no rival in the world; whose fame was tasted by the waters of the four oceans; whose might was equal to that of Kubêra, Varuna, Indra and Yama, who acquired the fortune of great kings by the strength of his arm, to whom, by reason of the excess of his prowess, the circle of all feudatory kings bowed; who enjoyed religious merit, wealth and pleasure without allowing them to encroach upon one another; whose profound and lofty mind was satisfied with mere submission; who performed religious acts by giving away, in charity, the immense wealth acquired by properly protecting his subjects; who re-instated families of kings who had long been dethroned, who uprooted those that were too proud; who granted to the afflicted, the blind and the poor, the object of their desires which exceeded their sanguine expectations,—issues this order to all kings, feudatories, bhōgikas, heads of provinces, districts, and villages, officers and others —

Be it known to you For the increase of the religious merit and fame of our parents and ourselves we have granted, at the request of Gōggā,³ with pouring out of water, a hundred mvarttanas of land,—by a mvarttana measuring forty on both sides,—in the village of Vallisikā situated in the province of Bhōgavarddhana, together with all receipts, free from all dhṛtya, forced labour, and prātibhādikā, according to the maxim of bhūmichhādra, not to be encroached upon by rogues and servants who tell lies,⁴ to be enjoyed by a succession of sons and sons' sons for as long as the moon, the sun, the ocean and the earth endure,—to Āhmanasvāmin, a resident of Kallāvana belonging to the Gautama gōtra, and a student of the Taittiriya sākhā, for the maintenance of balī, charu, vaśvadēva, agnihōtra and other rites,—wherefore future kings and governors, whether of our own family or others, reflecting that this world of living beings is as unstable as a wave of the waters of the ocean, moved by a strong gale, that

No. 46 —ARIGOM SARADA INSCRIPTION

LAUKIKA SAMVAT 73.

By STEN KONOW.

Ārigōm is a village in the Nāgām pargana, 74° 45' long., 33° 56' lat., about 15 miles south-west of Śrinagar, as the crow flies. Dr Stein, in his note on the Rājatarangini I 340, identifies Ārigōm with Hādigrāma, where Gōpāditya is said to have established an agrahāra, and states that some remains of temples were traced there by Pandit Kāśī Rām in 1891. Hādigrāma is further mentioned by Kalhana (VIII, 672) as one of the strongholds of the Dāmara Prithvīhara. In the troubled times following on the accession of Jayasīma in A D 1123, "Hādigrāma, where King Sussala and those of his side had lost their renown, was burned by Sujju, whose valour was mighty" (VIII, 1586), and the place is further mentioned in connexion with the incursion of king Lōthana during the same period (VIII, 2195).

In June 1908, Pandit Mukund Rām, who had with great courtesy been placed at my disposal by the Kashmir Darbar, was informed by a friend of the existence of an inscribed stone in the house of a Brāhman in Ārigōm, and at my request he went up to inspect it. According to information gathered by him on the spot, the stone in question was found about twelve years ago in a piece of uncultivated land near the Masjid Malik Sahib by a cultivator, who was digging there, and sold to a Brāhman for some corn. The Brāhman kept the stone for some time and did pūjā to it. But people who saw it, told him that the writing probably contained information about hidden treasure, and that the stone therefore properly belonged to the Mahārāja. He got frightened, and first hid the stone under the wall of his house, but later on he threw it into a pit at the entrance of his gōśūlā and covered it up with cow-dung. Pandit Mukund Rām further informs me that images, pedestals, stones and bricks are found all over the place, and it is probable that excavations would yield interesting results.

The stone mentioned above is square, measuring 20" each way, and being 4½" high. On the top is a raised circle, apparently the base of an image. One of the four faces of the stone is inscribed with five lines in Śāradā letters.

The writing covers a space of 17½" × 3", and the height of the letters averages ¾". They are distributed over five lines, the fifth of which contains the date. The beginning of the first two lines and the last letter in lines 1-3 and the three last letters in line 4 have disappeared.

The characters are Śāradā, and they are very well cut. Ja has the older form as in the Baijnāth prasasti. The final form of m occurs in line 3. The diphthong ē has been marked in two different ways, by means of a horizontal line above, as in bhagavatē, l. 1, or by a vertical before the consonant as in tē, l. 2. Similarly ō is sometimes marked by adding a horizontal above, sometimes by prefixing a vertical to the consonant accompanied by the sign for ā. Compare

Āryavalokitēśvarāya, l. 1, and lōkanāthāya, l. 2 A third method occurs in lōkā . . at the end of line 1, where a wavy line has been added above the sign for la. Of initial vowels only ā occurs in āryā, l. 1 Among ligatures I may note kya, l. 1, kkra, l. 3, kva, l. 4, nga, l. 2, dya, l. 3, rya, l. 1; and perhaps lhna, l. 3 The numeral symbols for 7, 3 and 5 occur in line 5

The language of this inscription is Sanskrit, and, with the exception of the invocation of Avalokitēśvara in l. 1, and the date in l. 5, the whole is in verse There are altogether two verses The first is apparently a ślōka The second pāda, however, contains three syllables too much, but these aksharas are probably simply a repetition of part of pāda 1. The second verse is a śārdūlavikrīḍita The object of the inscription is to record the construction of a vihāra built of pakka bricks, by Rāmadēva, the son of Kulladēva, in order to replace a wooden structure which had been built by a vaidyā, whose name I read Ulhna, and which had been burnt down by king Simha This Simha must be identical with Jayasimha (from A.D. 1128), in whose reign Hādigrāma was burnt down by Sujj¹ It then becomes highly probable that the vaidyā Ulhna is identical with Ulhana, the son of Sahadēva, who was a supporter of Sujj.² Sahadēva is described as a Rājaputra,³ which fact can of course be well reconciled with his son Ulhana's being a vaidyā The constructor of the brick vihāra was Rāmadēva, whom I cannot identify. His father Kulladēva was perhaps in charge of the old wooden vihāra, if I am right in interpreting tad-rata (l. 4) as "devoted to, attached to him, viz, Avalokitēśvara"

The word vihāra is used with more than one meaning. In our inscription, however, there cannot be much doubt that it signifies a shrine, as it has been characterized as "the abode of Lōkanātha" The stone upon which this epigraph has been incised is most probably the actual base of the statue of Lōkanātha here alluded to Lōkanātha is, of course, identical with Avalokitēśvara, who is invoked in lines 1-2 Our inscription thus furnishes valuable proof of the fact that Buddhism was still lingering in Kashmir in the 12th and 13th centuries

The mention of the materials used in building the old and the new shrines, is also of interest We learn that the former was constructed from wood, while the latter was built from pakka bricks

The old vihāra is stated to have been built in the vicinity of Gangēśvara This is now called Gauēśvara, and is the place where the present inscription was dug out The modern corruption of the name is not of very old date The old name was at least remembered about 40 years ago This is proved by a janmapattra, which Paudit Mukund Rām found in Ārigōm, and which was written by Paudit Ganēśa Kbusrao in Laukika Samvat 4939, i.e. A.D. 1862-63 It speaks of a person as Gangēśvara-pādamūlē Ārigrāmē vāstavya residing in Ārigōm at the feet of Gangēśvara Gangēśvara was originally probably a Śiva temple, and it is not unlikely that it could be identified by means of excavations

The inscription is dated Samvat 73, Mārga śuti 5. This date must be subsequent to the burning of Ārigōm during the reign of Jayasimha Now Jayasimha's father was murdered in the Laukika year 4203, and the burning of Ārigōm took place in the first part of his reign It is therefore as good as certain that we have to understand the date of our inscription as 4273 on the fifth tithi of the bright fortnight of Mārgaśirsha, corresponding to Sunday, the 16th November 1197.

(Verse 1). Salutation to thee, the Lord of the World, who hast become a light to the three worlds, who destroys transmigration, the moon of delight to the world

(V 2) Formerly the vaidyā Ulnadêva² by name made a spotless vihāra of wood, an abode for the Lord of the World, in the vicinity of the Gangêśvara (temple) After this, by the will of fate, had been burned by king Simha, Râmadêva, the son of Kulladêva, who was devoted to him (Avalokitêśvara), made yonder (vihāra) excellent with burnt bricks

No 47 — CHANDRAVATI PLATE OF CHANDRADEVA

By STEN KOSOW.

The plate containing this inscription was found on the inner slope of the left bank of the Ganges, near the water's edge, under the fort at Chandravati, in the Benares District. Mr. Chhote Lal, the District Engineer of Benares, informs me that, owing to the erosive action of the river, portions of the fort were undermined and fell down from time to time. The plate fell into the river along with the walls of the fort, and was seen and picked up by the Public Works Department's boatman, who deposited it in the District Engineer's office at Benares. In March 1908 it was then finally handed over to the Director General of Archaeology in India.

The plate, which is inscribed on one side only, measures $15\frac{3}{8}$ " \times $11\frac{1}{4}$ ". The edges are fashioned thicker and raised into rims. In the upper part of the plate is a hole, through which passes a ring, about $\frac{1}{2}$ " thick and 3" in diameter. On the ring slides a bell-shaped seal, $2\frac{3}{4}$ " from top to bottom. The surface of the seal is circular and $2\frac{1}{4}$ " in diameter. It represents in relief, on a slightly countersunk surface, a Garuda, with the body of a man and the head of a bird, kneeling and facing the proper right. Across the centre is the legend śrīvadach-(srimach)-Chandradêvah, and at the bottom a conch shell.

The plate contains 23 lines of writing. Parts of it are much worn, and the portion containing the date cannot be made out with certainty. The characters are Nāgarī, and the language is Sanskrit. With regard to orthography I shall only note that va is used both for va and for ba, and that the dental sibilant is often used instead of the palatal one, thus, asita- for asīta-, l 1, -vaṃsa- for -vaṃśa-, l. 2. There are several other misspellings and slips, especially towards the end.

After the invocation to Śrī common in other plates of the same family, our inscription proceeds to give the genealogy of the donor in four verses, which are well known from other inscriptions. We are told that Yaśōvīgraha had the son Mahichandra, whose son again was Chandradēva, the issuer of the present grant. The inscription then goes on in prose, stating that the victorious king Chandradēva issues the following order to all the people assembled, residing in the Vadagavā-village in the Vāvana-pattalā, and also to the Rājas, Rājās, Yuvarājas, councillors, chaplains, warders of the gate, generals, treasurers, keepers of records, physicians, astrologers, superintendents of gynācenmas, messengers, the officers in charge of elephants, horses, towns, mines, sthānas and gōkulas.

"Be it known to you that the aforesaid village, with its water and dry land, with its mines of iron and salt, with its fishing places, with its ravines and saline soil, with and including its groves of madhūka and mango, grass and pasture land, with what is above and below, defined as to its four abnttals, up to its proper boundaries, has today, on the . . . day of the bright fortnight of Kārttika, Samvat 1148, been given by us for as long a time as moon and sun endure, with the pouring out of water from the palm of our hand, purified with *gōkarna*¹ and luśa-grass, to the Brāhmaṇ Varuṇēsvayasarmaṇ (-śvaraśarmaṇ), the son of Varāhasvāmī the grandson of Anarndha, of the Vasishṭha gōtra, and whose only pravara is Vasishṭha, for the increase of the merit and fame of our parents and ourselves, after having today bathed here in the neighborhood of Sauri (Śauri)-Nārāyana, after having duly satisfied the sacred texts, divinities, saints, men, beings, and groups of ancestors,² after having worshipped the sun whose splendour is skilled in rending the veil of darkness, after having worshipped Vāsudēva, the saviour of the three worlds, and after having sacrificed to the Fire an oblation with abundant milk, rice and sugar."

The first point here that is worthy of notice is the date, which is the earliest known for Chandradēva, the other copper plate of his time being dated in Samvat 1154³. It will be seen that the portion of it containing the tithi and the week day is illegible. Mr Chhote Lal, who has examined the original, writes about this point,—

"Ordinarily, it might be thought that the excessive corrosion and incrustation of rust at this particular part of the plate was purely accidental, but from a minute examination of the imperfect and damaged letters which are still discernible, I am led to conclude that the excessive incrustation at this point was due to the fact that the surface of the plate was already damaged by somebody in his endeavour to make a correction in the date. It is remarkable that the name of the place or that of the stream in which the donor took his bath, is not mentioned in the inscription. Nor is there any mention of the occasion (eclipse, sankrānti, etc.) at which the gift was made. It would appear that Śauri-Nārāyana was in those days a very well-known place of pilgrimage requiring no further details to localise it, that the occasion presumably was the ordinary Kārttika-snāna, and that the date originally entered on the plate was pañchadaśyām gurau, but was afterwards attempted to be corrected into ekādaśyām ravau. The ś of the latter just overlaps the pañ of the former, the kā of the latter being rather large has been so formed as to include the cha and to cover the space occupied by da of the former; while the space occupied by śyām of the former has been utilised for the rather clumsily large da of the latter. It will thus be seen that the space originally occupied by the word pañchadaśyām, which was of normal size, was subsequently occupied by the much larger letters, ś, kā and da, and there being no more space available for the final syllable śyām, it was omitted. Similarly, the ra of raran overlaps the gu of guran and rau of the latter has been deformed into something like rau of the former. Now the question arises, "Why was the date corrected?" The reason may be that the grant was originally intended to be made on the pañchadaśī, on the occasion of a lunar eclipse which was expected to take place on that date. A little calculation will show that the eclipse did actually occur on the specified date (corresponding to Thursday, the 7th of November, 1090 A D), but as the time of its occurrence was early in the following morning (according to calculation), it must have been very doubtful whether it would be visible at the place visited by Chandradēva. This circumstance may have been anticipated, and it may have been decided to make the donation on the preceding Prabôdhini Śādaśī (Sunday, the 3rd of November, 1090 A D) which was a most suitable day for the purpose, being the day on which Vishnu—the deity worshipped by Chandradēva—rises from his four months' sleep. I say all this may have been the cause of the alteration in the date, for there is no a priori reason against this supposition. But I consider it very unlikely that a Mahārāja, who changed his mind about the actual day of performing a religious ceremony, could have allowed a correction—and a clumsy correction at the best—to be made in the copper plate inscription recording the gift of a whole village, when the entire inscription could have been cut on a new plate in a day's time. The fact seems to be that it is no honour to a Brāhman to receive a gift on the occasion of an eclipse, and there are certain sects of Brāhmanas, e.g. Sarpuparis and Kanaupyas, who would promptly excommunicate any member of their community who was known to have received a gift on account of an eclipse. The Brāhman who received the munificent gift from Chandradēva probably belonged to one of these sects, and, after the king had made the gift and departed, he seems to have thought of concealing his disgraceful conduct and to have caused the original and genuine date to be altered as explained above."

Mr Chhote Lal further identifies Vadagavā with the present Baragaon, a village 14 miles north-west of Benares. He thinks it, however, also possible that it was the old name of Chandravatī, which was afterwards changed in honour of king Chandradēva.

After the mention of the grant, we find some of the usual imprecatory verses, and, at the end, the name of the writer, the śhakkura Mahananda.

No. 48 —BURHANPUR SANSKRIT INSCRIPTION OF ADIL SHAH.

By HIRA LAL, B.A., M.R.A.S., NAGPUR

Burhānpūr in the Nimār district of the Central Provinces is an ancient historical site¹ It was the chief seat of the Fārūqī kings. They ruled over Khândēsh, which name the Muhammadans derived from their title of Khān Their rule lasted from 1370 to 1600 A.D., when it was displaced by the Mughals. One of these Fārūqī kings built the Jam'a Masjid, in which besides Arabic inscriptions he had one carved in Sanskrit, which gives his genealogy and the date of the construction of the mosque This inscription is in the northern corner and is written within an arch, so that the lines, which are 6 in number, are of unequal length. They contain five verses, besides the invocation Śrī śrīṣṭīkartrē nāmah in the commencement and the date in the end, both of which are in prose

The letters are Nāgarī and are raised, not incised, in the same fashion as Persian letters are usually found carved Orthography hardly calls for any remarks. The sign of avagraha has been omitted throughout. Over the na of -khāna- (1 3) we find the Arabic sign of tashdīd or double consonant

The date is recorded in great detail, giving both the Vikrama and Śaka years, which are stated to be 1646 and 1511 respectively, the cyclic year being Virōdhi. The mosque is stated to have been completed on Monday, the 11th of the bright fortnight of the month Pausha, the exact moment in *ghaṭī*s and the nakṣatra, lagna, yōga, karana, etc., being added most precisely² The date in the Hijra era is given as 997 in Arabic above the inscription Its English equivalent was kindly calculated for me by the late Professor Kielhorn, C.I.E., who found it to be Monday, the 5th January 1590. The astrological details are unique in a Muhammadan mosque and show the religious tendency of the later Fārūqī kings. In Burhānpūr much of the beliefs of the two religions (Hinduism and Islām) got mixed up, traces of which are still conspicuously present there As an instance may be cited the preachings of the Pīrūdās, who are Musalmāns and who say that God will now become incarnate as *Nishkalankī*³ The Fārūqīs undoubtedly believed in astrology, as this inscription shows, and although the builder of the mosque took every care to erect it in the most auspicious moment completing it exactly in one year (as an Arabic inscription carved in the middle of the Masjid discloses) and wished by his pious act to ensure the long continuance of his dynasty, yet uncompromising destiny snatched away the crown from them, only ten years after the construction of the edifice. In fact Bahādur Khān, the builder's son, was so much infatuated with superstition, that, in spite of his possessing the impregnable Asīgarh fort with ten years' provisions, enormous treasures and numerous horses and cattle, he felt convinced that he could not hold his own against Akbar, of whom he believed that he was a necromancer and that magicians accompanied him to reduce the fort A pestilence which broke out among the animals, was attributed to the black art, and he saw no way but to surrender to the mighty wizard. This mosque was thus destined to receive another inscription, which Akbar triumphantly caused to be carved recording his victory of Khândēsh in A.H. 1009 (A.D. 1600), annihilating the glory of the mosque builder's dynasty for ever This inscription is in Persian and is conspicuously inscribed on the outside wall of the left hand minār

³ I have seen some Sanskrit manuscripts in Persian character in the possession of some Maulvis of Burhānpūr, preserved as heirlooms from their ancestors, who apparently studied them under State encouragement. Unfortunately most of these valuable records have been destroyed by the fires of 1897 and 1906 which caused damage to the extent of about 57 lakhs besides loss of life.

The chief interest of our inscription lies in the genealogy of the Fârûqis given in it. According to it the first king was Râja Malik, whose son was Ghaznî (Khân). His son was Kaisar Khân, whose son was Hasan, from whom was born Âdil Shâh, whose son was Mubârahk. Âdil Shâh, the constructor of the mosque, was the son of this Mubârahk. This genealogy differs from those given by Firishta and Abul Fazl. According to the former Âdil Shâh was the 6th descendant from Malik Râja, and according to the latter the 8th, while according to our inscription he was the 7th. The tables given below will show at a glance how matters stand —

Sanskrit inscription	Briggs' Firishta , Vol IV, p 280	Jarrett's Âin-i-Akbari , Vol II, p 226
Râja Malik	Malik Râja	Malik Râj
Gaznî (Khân).	Nasîr Khân	Ghiznî Khân, title Nasîr Khân.
Kaisar Khân		Mîran Shâh alias Âdil Shâh
		Mubârahk Shâh Chankhandî.
Hasan (Khân)	Hasan Khân.	Âdil Shâh Aynâ alias Ahsan Khân
Âdil Shâh	Âdil Khân	Âdil Shâh.
Mubârahk	Mubarak	Mubârahk Shâh
Âdil Shâh.	Râja Ali Khân.	Râja Ali Khân, title Âdil Shâh.

The Âin-i-Akbari states that "Bahâdur Khân (who was the son of Râja Ali Khân) was 9th in descent from Malik Râj." This has led Colonel Jarrett,¹ as it would indeed lead others, to suppose that the list given there is genealogical and that Ahsan Khân, the fifth king, was identical with Hasan Khân, who, as a matter of fact, was never a king. Hasan Khân belonged to a collateral branch of the family, whose son became king on the failure of male issue in the main line.

The Âin-i-Akbari has mixed up the succession list with the genealogical table. Mîran Shâh, the third descendant, was really a grandson of Malik Râja, but the point missed is that he was not the direct ascendant of the last Âdil Shâh or Râja Ali Khân. The crown first went in Mîran Shâh's line up to Âdil Shâh Aynâ, who was succeeded by his brother Dâwûd Khân, and the latter by his son Ghaznî Khân, who was poisoned two days after ascending the throne. Abul Fazl does not mention Ghaznî Khân at all, probably because his succession to the throne was only nominal. Ghaznî Khân left no son,² and hence the crown went to Râja Ali Khân's grandfather Âdil Shâh or Âdil Khân. The three kings Mîran Shâh, Mubârahk Shâh and Âdil Shâh Aynâ were not true direct ascendants of Râja Ali Khân. The Âin-i-Akbari list should therefore be left out of consideration, and the question must be decided between our inscription and Firishta's list. Briggs³ takes Hasan to be the son of Nasîr Khân, relying on Firishta's assertion that "Âdil was the son of Hasan and grandson of Nasîr Khân." If Hasan were the son of Nasîr Khân, he would be the brother of Mîran Shâh, who was crowned king after his father's death. We would, therefore, have to suppose that Mîran's nephew came to the throne after the expiry of three generations, which is an unlikely supposition. There is nothing to show that Ādil Khān (Hasan's son) was extraordinarily long-lived¹ It, therefore, seems very probable that there was an intervening generation between Nasir Khān and Hasan Khān, and the missing link is supplied by the Sanskrit inscription in the person of Kaisar Khān, son of Nasir and father of Hasan Khān. In the inscription Kaisar Khān is merely called a vīra or hero and not a king, and although Hasan was also never a king, the epithet of kshatīśa was apparently added to his name by way of courtesy, to tickle the ruling prince. Regarding the sources of his information Firishta records² that when he visited Burhānpūr in A. H. 1013 (A.D. 1604), he asked Mirzā Ali Isfahānī if any history existed of the Fārūqī family. The Mirzā replied that he knew of none, but said that he once saw a genealogy³ of the family down to Malik Rāja, which he copied and took along with him. It would thus appear that no history of the kings later than Malik Rāja existed at all. So the information he collected was apparently from traditions or other casual records, while the writer of the Sanskrit inscription must certainly have been supplied with information from the royal family, as it was intended to be a permanent record. in one of the greatest works the king built. It is, therefore, more reliable than Firishta and leaves no room for doubt as to its authenticity.⁴ A revised genealogy of the Fārūqī kings will be found below on p. 310.

Malik Rāja, the son of Khān Jahān, the son of Ali Khān, the son of Uthmān Khān, the son of Simion Shāh, the son of Ashab Shāh, the son of Arman Shāh, the son of Ibrāhīm Shāh of Balkh, the son of Ādam Shāh, the son of Ahmad Shāh, the son of Mahmūd Shāh, the son of Muhammad Shāh, the son of Āzīm Shāh, the son of Ashghar, the son of Muhammad Ahmad, the son of the Imām Nasir Abdulla, the son of Omar-ul-Faruq entitled Khalifā or representative of the last of the prophets.

(V. 2) As long as the moon, the sun and the stars, etc., exist in the firmament, so long may this Fâruki family live happily on the face of the earth

(V 3) In that family there was first the lord of Fârukis by name Râjâ Malik, whose son was king Ghazni⁵ (Khân) who was of an exalted mind, the diadem of the family.

(V 4) From him was (born) the hero Kaisar Khân whose son was Hasan (Khân), the lord of the earth From him was born king Âdil Shâh, whose son was lord Mubârah

(V. 5) Victorious is his son, the illustrious king Âdil, the crest jewel of (other) kings, whose lotus feet are rubbed by the diadems in the crowns of kings (prostrating themselves before him), (who is) of good reputation, and whose enemies have submitted to his prowess, (who is) the lord of kings (and) who bows day and night to the Supreme Being who is past all qualities

(Ll 5—6) Hail! Prosperity! ⁵ This king is well-known by the name of Nasir Khân, the title which he adopted on ascending the throne. General Cunningham erroneously took Ghazni narefah to mean King of Ghazni (see his Reports, Vol IX, p 117), not being aware that Ghazni was a personal name. Firuhta omitted this name, but Aḥl Fazl has mentioned it (see Jarrett's Ain-i-Akbari, Vol II, p 226)

⁶ The number of śris written for Râjas is usually 108, but here a single figure stands for the highest number, as 6 are written for a preceptor, 5 for a master, 4 for an enemy, 3 for a friend, 2 for a servant, and 1 for a wife or a son

Genealogy of the Fâruqî Kings of Khândêsh.

N.B.—Figures on the top of names indicate the order of succession, and those within brackets the periods of their rule.

* This date is doubtful, Firishita being inconsistent. See Briggs' translation Vol. IV, p. 142, which gives the date of his death as A.H. 943, whereas on p. 312 A.H. 942 is given. As Bahâdur Shâh of Gujardî died on 14th Feb. 1537 (ôud p. 143), Miran Muhammad Shâh, who succeeded him also in Gujardî, was evidently living in 1537, and Mubârak could not have become king before that date.

No 49.—NARAYANPAL STONE INSCRIPTION OF GUNDA MAHADEVĪ

BY HIRA LAL, B A., M R A S, NAGPUR

Nārāyanpāl is a village 23 miles north-west of Jagdalpur, the capital of the Bastar feudatory state attached to the Chhattisgarh Division of the Central Provinces. It is situated on the right bank of the "splendidly picturesque" Indrāvati, one of those minor rivers of India than which none is more interesting.¹ It "traverses the most untrodden regions of the peninsula. Here in the deepest recesses of the wild forests which cover the Mardian hills, is the home of the Gônd races—one of the aboriginal Dravidian peoples, whose origin is indistinct, a people who still erect rudé stone monuments and use stone implements, unwitting of the procession of the centuries and the advance of civilization to their borders." And yet the very place which has today all the signs of a primeval forest, may a thousand years back have compared favourably with any of the civilized provinces of those times. At least such seems to be the irresistible conclusion from the discovery of the antiquarian remains left by the forgotten Nāgavamśi kings of that little known state. Nārāyanpāl is one of those places which enjoyed celebrity in their times, a place to which "people of various countries resorted," and which instead of having a long row of wooden peg gods, which now adorn the village turf, possessed the temple of Nārāyana, "the basket of the gems of knowledge" which no doubt the residents duly picked up. The Indrāvati was to Bastar what the Narmadā has been to India, the separating boundary between the Aryan and the Dravidian peoples. It is therefore no surprise to find all the inscriptions to the north of the Indrāvati written in Nāgarī characters, while all to the south are written in Telugu. It appears that the Nāgavamśi kings, though ruling on both sides of the Indrāvati, had fixed that river as the ethnic or at least the linguistic boundary for the convenience of the Aryan and the Dravidian peoples under their sway. Our inscription being found in Nārāyanpāl on the north bank of the river is therefore in Sanskrit characters. Its discovery is due to the efforts of Rai Bahadur Pandā Baijnāth, B A, who kindly sent me five impressions. Another impression has since been prepared by Mr Venkoba Rao of the Madras Archaeological Survey. I have made use of all these materials for my edition. The inscription is engraved on a stone slab, standing near the temple of Nārāyana, to which it belongs. In this temple there is still an exquisite image of Nārāyana, 2' high. Above the ground the slab measures 7' 4" × 2' 3", and the writing covers a space 5' 9" × 2' 2", including the imprecatory figures and the additions to be referred to presently, but leaving out the top Śrī mahā. The original inscription apparently contained only 35 lines, beginning with Svasti sahaśra-phanāmani and ending with mangala mahā-śrī, underneath which the usual imprecatory figures of a cow and a calf, the dagger and shield, the sun and moon and the Śiva linga, the meanings of which I have elsewhere² explained, were carved. The additional 11 lines, marked (a), (b), (c) and (d) by me, appear to be later additions, and are either interpolations or were inserted when the ownership of the land changed hands either by succession or otherwise. They generally give the names of persons to whom the land was apparently transferred. The lines marked (a), (b), (c) have been inserted in the blank spaces between or on the sides of the imprecatory figures. Under all these a straight line has been drawn, and the four lines marked (d) have been inserted. These give the name of a queen different from the donor of the inscription proper. This may have been done when the land changed hands after the death of the original donor, when, in the ordinary course, the successor of the donor would be shown as the transferor or grantor.

The language of the inscription is Sanskrit prose, except the two imprecatory verses in lines 33 to 35, and the characters as stated before are Nāgarī. They are boldly written but the size is not uniform throughout. While in the top line Śrī-mahā, they are as big as $2\frac{1}{2}$ ", the average size in the first four lines is $1\frac{1}{2}$ ". The engraver apparently finding them too big reduced them to 1" in line 5, but in subsequent lines he again began to increase the size maintaining an average of $1\frac{1}{4}$ " throughout the rest, which forms the major portion of the inscription. In the later additions also, marked (a), (b), (c) and (d), the size varies. In (a) it is less than an inch and in (d) it is $1\frac{1}{2}$ " and in (b) and (c) midway between these two.

As regards orthography, b is not distinguished from v and there is a confusion in the use of s and ś, for instance, we have on the one hand Kāśyapa (ll. 3, 13), saranāgata (ll. 6, 10, 16), sāsana (ll. 7, 37 (b) and 46 (d)), Saka- (l. 19), -satana (l. 34), asvamēdha- (l. 34), sudhyati (l. 35), on the other hand we have śvarggatē (l. 17) and sahasra (ll. 1 and 34). The anusvāra is usually preferred to the class nasals, though the latter are sufficiently represented throughout. Letters with a superscribed rēpha have been invariably doubled. The letters lsha, dha, ra, and, in most places, bha appear in their antiquated form, and the top mātrā for é, ô and au is sometimes placed vertically before the letter to which it is attached, as in -dhanta- (l. 8), paṇṭra-kṛtōttamāṃgī . . . pārthivēndra- (ll. 8-9), -saujanya- (l. 10), -saurinēyā- (l. 11), etc. In Sômēśvaradēva (l. 17) mē has the top stroke, while dē has the vertical stroke preceding du. In line 23 in -śhityudadhī- the mātrā of u is peculiarly attached in the middle of the letter as we at present attach it to the letter ra alone.

The inscription records the grant of the village Nārāyanapura to the god Nārāyaṇa and some land near the Kharjuri tank to the god Lōkēśvara, and it is dated in the Śaka year 1033 on Wednesday, the full moon day of the Kārttika month in the Khara samvatsara, corresponding to the 18th October 1111 A.D. The donor was Gunda Mahādēvi, the chief queen of the Mahārāja Dhārāvārsha, the mother of Sômēśvaradēva and the grandmother of Kanharadēva, who was then ruling after the death of his father, as stated in line 17. The dynasty claims to be Nāgavamśi of the Kāśyapa gōtra and to have a tiger with a calf as their crest and to be the lords of Bhōgāvati, the best of cities. There can be little doubt that it was connected with the Sinda family of Yelburga. The birūdas of the two are strikingly similar. The Sindas also claim to be Nāgavamsōdbhava, born of the race of the Nāga (cobra), and the lords of Bhōgāvati, which city is a mythical place in the nether world. The discoveries hitherto made show the existence of the rule of the family at the diagonally opposite corners of this state, viz. south-west and north-east. I feel confident that if we could "explore the serpent city well," we should find at least a replica of it somewhere in the Nizām's dominions in a position intermediate between these two points. The Rāmāyana seems to confirm this, for Rāma's route to Lankā lay between the two and passed through Bhōgāvati.

As Dr. Fleet¹ says, there appear to have been more branches than one of the Sinda family, and it appears to me that they were distinguished from each other by some variations in their crests (lāñchhanas) and banners (dhvajās, patākas or kētanās). The vyāghra-lāñchhana (tiger-crest) seems to have been common to all, probably because the original ancestor of the dynasty which received its name after him, was believed to have been brought up by the king of serpents on tiger's milk.² The Bāgalkōt branch had simply the tiger crest and the phani-kētana, or banner of hooded serpents. The Bastar branch, or more properly the branch represented by our inscription, had a śavatsa-vyāghra-lāñchhana, or a tiger with a calf or child, thus depicting probably the story of their origin in a clearer way. The banner is not mentioned. In Bastar there were apparently two branches, the other one being that of Bhramarakōtṭya-mandala,¹ whose lāñchhana was dhānur-vyāghra (bow and tiger) and whose dhvaja was kamala-kadaśi, or lotus flower and plantain leaf. The Halavār² branch of the Banvāsī tract had the vyāghra-rāga lāñchhana or crest of a tiger and a deer, and the nīladvaja, or blue banner. To judge from their titles Paramēśvara Paramabhāṭṭārāla Mahārāja, the Bastar branch appears to have been more independent than the other branches of this dynasty. But more light is likely to be thrown on the history of the family when all the inscriptions found in Bastar have been deciphered. It would therefore be premature to discuss the subject here.

There is one phrase in this inscription, which to my mind appears so interesting that it should not be allowed to pass unnoticed. It is incidentally mentioned in line 32 where the land is said to be given grāma-nīlaya-nīḍa-sarva siddhā-parihārīna, which apparently means "free from the interference of the dwelling-group and territorial assemblies, and all other molestations." This throws a sidelight on the village communities of those days. With regard to nīḍa, Mr. Baden-Powell³ says, "All over the south of India we have traces of the nāḍu, which was often a sort of county, and in some places there is a clearly surviving tradition of the purpose of this division. Thus in part of Madras known anciently as the Tondaimandalam, we find first a number of niṣṭā—the name probably indicating the fort which was the seat of the territorial chief, each of these primitive territories was afterwards reorganised into nāḍu and each nāḍu contained a number of villages (called nīṭṭam or the village site). The chief of the nīṣṭā was called a niṣṭā.⁴ In Malabar we have evidence of how these nāḍu divisions were governed by the nīṣṭā niṣṭā, or assembly of representative elders out of the family groups of niṣṭā, of the ruling class, in each nīṣṭā." It appears from our inscription that this nīḍa system was prevalent in Bastar and the word nīlaya apparently stands for tara, the original local term for "the family aggregate of dwellings, consisting of the houses occupied by the members with a few humble abodes for servants and artisans." Tara is said to mean street or hamlet. The grāma or village was also recognised, but apparently had no fiscal significance, beyond being a physical aggregate of class areas with an exotic population. It will be noticed that Narāyanapura is described as full of outsiders, who had come from different countries. These apparently contributed nothing to the income of the village, and in the business portion of the charter (ll. 25 to 33) we therefore find no mention of the village, but only of the land given. The names of the owners of plots occupied by the family groups have been duly enumerated, and it is they who have been enjoined to pay the rents to the temple. The transaction has been ratified by eight persons, which was probably considered a requisite number⁵ for such business. These probably formed the executive committee of the nīḍa-nīṭṭam or territorial assembly. As would appear from the inscription, it consisted of the pregaḍi or minister, the ṭarana-nīṭṭam or Secretary of the assembly, the dhāṇḍari or treasurer, the siddhi or priest, and four *nāyaka*s, who, as has been already shown, were chiefs of *nīḍa*s. One of these *nāyaka*s is styled bhaṭṭanāyaka, perhaps a superior title to that of ordinary *nāyaka*s. The mention of his name immediately after that of the minister indicates his superior position.

Our inscription mentions only one territorial name, viz. the Nārāyanapura village, which is certainly the present Nārāyanpāl, where the inscription has been found, and where the temple of Nārāyaṇa, to which the village was dedicated, still exists. The tank Kharjuribandha, which was apparently named after the khajūr or wild date trees on its banks, is difficult to locate at this distance of time, as these trees live for about fifty years⁶ only.

⁷ Dr. Wall in his Economic Dictionary, Vol. VI., Part I., p. 211, says "The age of a tree (wild date) can of course be estimated only by enumerating the notches and adding six or seven, the number of years passed before the first year's notch. I have counted more than 40 notches on a tree, but one rarely sees them so old as that."

No 50—TIMMAPURAM PLATES OF VISHNUVARDHANA I VISHAMASIDDHI.

By PROFESSOR E. HULTZSCH, PH D ; HALLE (SAALE).

This short inscription is on three copper-plates which were "discovered in the ground in October 1907 by one Sukuru Ramasvami while digging a hole in his vacant house site in the village of Timmapuram in the Sarvasiddhi taluka" and were sent by the Collector of the Vizagapatam district to Rai Bahadur Venkayya, who describes them as follows —

"The plates measure $2\frac{1}{2}$ by $7\frac{7}{8}$ inches and are strung on an oval ring, the diameters of which are $2\frac{7}{8}$ and 3 inches. The ends of the ring are secured in the base of a nearly circular seal which measures between $1\frac{3}{8}$ and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter. In the centre of this seal is the legend [𑀅𑀲𑀭𑀺𑀓]𑀅𑀲𑀭𑀺𑀓 in the same alphabet in which the plates themselves are engraved. The third plate of the inscription is blank, and the grant itself ends in line 2 of the second side of the second plate."

The alphabet and orthography do not call for any special remarks. The final t occurs in line 1,¹ the upadhmāniya in l. 5, and the Dravidian letter ḷa in l. 11. The language is Sanskrit prose. The panegyrical portion (ll. 1—11) is comparatively correct—probably because it was copied from a form preserved at the royal secretariat. The grant portion, however, must have been drafted by a person who knew very little Sanskrit. It contains a Prākṛit word chattālīsa (l. 12) = Sanskrit chattāriṃśat, and several grave grammatical blunders which I have corrected in the footnotes.

The inscription records a grant by Vishnuvardhana-Mahārāja surnamed Vishmasiddhi,² who was the younger brother of Satyāśraya-Vallabha-Mahārāja, the son of Kirtivarman, the grandson of Banavikrama, and the great-grandson of Banarāja of the Cha[lu]kya family. This short pedigree establishes the identity of the donor of this grant with Vishnuvardhana I. Vishmasiddhi, the founder of the eastern branch of the Chalukya dynasty. That he was the younger brother of Satyāśraya, i.e. the Western Chalukya king Pulakēśin II., and the son of Kirtivarman (I.), is stated in many Eastern Chalukya inscriptions; and his grandfather Banavikrama, i.e. Pulakēśin I., is mentioned also in his Sātārā plates.³ The reference to his great-grandfather Banarāja is of some interest, because this name is known only from a few records of the Western Chalukyas.

Both Vishnuvardhana I and his elder brother receive the title Mahārāja, but the second is stated to have 'subdued the circle of the whole earth' (l. 5 f.), while the former claims only to have 'humbled the circle of all the vassals' (l. 6 f.). This distinction implies that, at the time of this grant, Vishnuvardhana I was still a dependant of his elder brother, the Western Chalukya king Pulakēśin II. He professed to be a worshipper of Bhagavat (l. 10), i.e. Viṣṇu, and resided at Piṣṭāpura (l. 1), the modern Piṭhāpuram in the Gōdāvarī district. In the Aihole inscription⁴ the capture of this fortress is ascribed to his elder brother and sovereign Pulakēśin II.

The grant portion differs from that of other records in two respects. It lacks at the end the usual imprecations and other particulars, and the donees are not mentioned by name, but simply stated to have been forty Brāhmanas of the Chhandōga school. The object of the grant was some land at Kumūlūra—a village which I am unable to identify—in the Paṭākī-vishaya.

⁴ Above, Vol. VI p. 11, verse 27.

The same district seems to be referred to in the Chīpurupalle plates of Vishnuvardhana I, where the name has been read doubtfully as 'Pāḷi-vishaya',¹ but, if the facsimile² can be trusted, the engraver has written in reality Plāḷi-vishayē, which may be meant for Palāḷi-vishayē

No 51 — SARNATH INSCRIPTION OF KUMARADEVI

By STEN KONOW

The slab on which the inscription published below is incised was found during the excavations carried on by Mr. Marshall and myself in Sarnāth, in March 1908. It was dug out to the north of the Dhamēkh stūpa, to the south of the raised mound running east and west over the remnants of the old monasteries of the Gupta period. The writing covers almost the whole of the surface of the stone, viz 21" × 15½", and it is in a perfect state of preservation. The average size of the letters is ½"

The characters are Nāgarī, of a very ornamental type, and the engraving has been done with considerable skill. Of individual letters, the form of the cerebral ṭa in -bhatah and kāndapa-ṭikah in line 8 is worthy of notice. There are comparatively few orthographical peculiarities. ṽ is used for ṭ throughout, and na is used instead of the anusvāra in sudhānśōś-, line 11. There are some few miswritings such as harmā- for dharmā-, l. 6, prakshātō for prakhyātō, l. 8, vishmayakarō for vismaya- and -ashmādrisak for =asmādrisak, l. 13, =nēnrābhīrāma- for -nētr-, l. 15, nri- for tri-, l. 22; mahābhūjah for mahābhujah, l. 19, etc. The forms Kumaradēvi,

³ I.e. the Dānavas or demons

⁵ This would give 100 nivartanas for each of the 40 donees

ll 11 and 22, and vihārō in ll. 23 and 26, on the other hand, are vouched for by the metre Kumara instead of kumāra is common in Māhārāshtrī Piākṛit, and a form Kumaravāla for the usual Kumārāpāla occurs in Hēmachandra's Dēśnāmamālā, I 104, 88¹ And vihāra instead of vihāra is justified by Pāṇini VI, 3 122.

The language is Sanskrit, and, with the exception of the invocation to Vasudhārā in l 1, the whole of the inscription is in verse There are altogether twenty-six verses Of these thirteen (Nos 3, 5, 6, 7, 11, 12, 13, 17, 18, 19, 21, 23 and 24) are in the Śārdūlavikṛīḍita, five (Nos 1, 10, 14, 15 and 20) in the Mālinī, four (Nos 4, 16, 22 and 25) in the Vasantatilakā, three (Nos 8, 9 and 26) in the Anushtubh, and one (No 2) in the Sragdharā metre

The object of the inscription is to record the construction of a vihāra by Kumaradēvi, one of the queens of Gōvīndachandra of Kanauj The wording of verses 21-23, in which her gift is mentioned, is not quite clear We are first told, in verse 21, that a vihāra was constructed, which apparently contained an image of the goddess Vasudhārā The following verses are not quite clear Rai Bahadur V Venkayya has suggested the following explanation, which I think is a very plausible one Jambukī drew up a copper-plate, in which she represented to Kumaradēvi that the Dharmachakra-Jina originally set up by Dharmāsōka required to be repaired or set up again This copper-plate must have contained information about the original setting up of the Dharmachakra-Jina and further details about its maintenance and repairs Kumaradēvi, who was apparently a stranger to the country round Benares, accepted her representation and raised her to the rank of "the foremost of pattalikās"² Moreover, she restored the Jina or set up a new one and placed it in the vihāra built for Vasudhārā, or in another one constructed for the purpose, and the wish is expressed that, after having been placed there, he may remain there for ever. It seems necessary to infer that the Śrīdharmachakra-Jina, which is said to have existed in Dharmāsōka's time, was an image of the Buddha, and that the vihāra built by the orders of Queen Kumaradēvi for him, was a shrine, a gandhakūṭi. It is difficult to explain the wish that he, i.e. the image, may reside there for ever, under any other supposition.

The inscription can be divided into four parts After an invocation of Vasudhārā (v 1) and the moon (v 2) vv. 3-6 give some information about some rulers or generals of Pīṭhī or Pīṭhikā We learn that, in the lunar race, there arose a chief called Vallabharāja, the lord of broad Pīṭhikā (v 3) The following verse introduces the lord of Pīṭhī Dēvarakṣita, without saying anything about his relationship to Vallabharāja He is described as the full moon of the lotus of the Chhikkōra-vamsa, and we are told that he even surpassed Gajapati in splendour Dēvarakṣita is again referred to as the lord of Pīṭhī in the second part of the inscription, and it therefore seems necessary to interpret vv 5-6, which apparently refer to a son of his (tasmād-āsa, etc) as an explanation of his relationship to Vallabharāja, who would then be his father

The second part of the inscription, vv 7-13, contains the information that Devarakṣita was defeated by Mahana, the maternal uncle of the Gauda king, who thus firmly established the throne of Rāmapāla, and subsequently bestowed his daughter Śankaradēvi on the Pīṭhī lord Their daughter was Kumaradēvi, in whose praise the present inscription was written

The third part, vv 14-20, then contains the genealogy of the Gahadavāla family, to which Kumaradēvi's husband Gōvīndachandra belonged It agrees with the list given in most inscriptions of this latter king, but does not carry us further back than to his grandfather We are first introduced to Chandra, the Chandra-dēva of Gōvīndachandra's inscriptions His son was Madanachandra, elsewhere known as Madanapāla, who again was the father of Gōvinda-chandra. He is said to have saved Benares from the wicked Turushka-soldier.

The fourth part of the inscription (verses 21-23) specifies the gifts of Kumaradēvi, and her praise is sung in verse 24. Verses 25-26 then inform us that the inscription, which is here called a prasasti, was composed by the poet śrī-Kunda, and engraved by Vāmana.

Gōvindachandra is the well-known king of Kanauj, whose inscriptions are dated between A.D. 1114 and 1154. Our inscription teaches us that he guarded Benares against the Turnshkas, i.e. the Muhammadans. We do not know of any Muhammadan expedition against Benares in Gōvindachandra's time. In A.D. 1033 a Muhammadan army under Ahmad Nīltagīn arrived at the town, but only stayed there for a day,¹ and there is no indication of a permanent settlement. We know, on the other hand, that Mussalman settlers remained in the country about the Jamna from the days of Mahmūd and down to the end of the 12th century.² It seems probable that Gōvindachandra took some action against such settlers, and the term turushkadanda, which occurs in many of his and his predecessors' inscriptions, gives us a hint as to the nature of this action. The word turushkadanda has been variously translated as "tax on aromatic reeds" and "Muhammadan amercements."³ The information furnished by our inscription seems to show that it was in reality a tax on Muhammadans, the exact nature of which cannot, however, be determined.

Our inscription introduces us to a new queen of Gōvindachandra, Kumaradēvi, the granddaughter of Mahana. Three other queens are already known from inscriptions, viz. Nayanakēlī-dēvi,⁴ Gōsaladēvi⁵ and Dalhanadēvi.⁶ While Gōvindachandra was himself an orthodox Hindū, his fourth wife Kumaradēvi was a Buddhist. According to information kindly supplied by Mahāmahōpādhyāya Hara Prasād Śāstrī, the king had still another Buddhist wife Vāsantadēvi, who is mentioned in the colophon of a manuscript of the Ashṭasāhasrikā in the Nepal Darbar Library (No. 331 of the third collection). The colophon runs—śrī-śrī-Kānyakubj-ādhipaty-asiapati-gajapati-narapati-rājya-trayādhipati-srīmad-Gōvindachandrādēvasya pratāpavaśatah rājñī-śrī-pravara Mahiyāna-yāyinyāh paramopāsikā-rājñī-Vāsantadēvyā dēyadharmamō=yaṁ.

It is possible that Vāsantadēvi and Kumaradēvi are one and the same person, one of the meanings of vāsanta being "youth" = kumāra. It is, however, more probable that they are two different persons.

Some information about Mahana, the father of Kumaradēvi's mother, and about the lord of Pithi, her father, can be gleaned from Sandhyākara Nandi's Rāmacharita, which work has been brought to light by Mahāmahōpādhyāya Hara Prasād Śāstrī.⁷ We are there told that Mahana was the maternal uncle of the Gauda king Rāmapāla. Vigrahapāla, the father of Rāmapāla, made a successful war against the Chēdi king Karna of Dīhāla, of whom we possess an inscription dated Kalachuri Samvat 493 = A.D. 1042.⁸ Karna's reign probably extended over a long period.⁹ We cannot, therefore, determine when the war against Vigrahapāla took place. We have an inscription of the time of Vigrahapāla's grandfather Mahipala, dated A.D. 1026,¹⁰ and Mahipala's son Nayapāla reigned at least 15 years.¹¹ Vigrahapāla's accession cannot, therefore, be placed earlier than A.D. 1041. His son Rāmapāla, who was preceded on the throne by two brothers Mahipala II and Śūrapāla, was a contemporary of Śaṅkaradēvi, the mother of Gōvindachandra's queen Kumaradēvi. It therefore seems probable that Vīrabhāpāla's accession should be placed about A.D. 1050, and Rāmapāla's reign in the last part of the eleventh century. Mahana, Śaṅkaradēvi's father, would then be a contemporary of both of them. The Rāmacharita, which calls him Mathana or Mahana, states that he was a Rāshtrakūta, and the maternal uncle of Rāmapāla. It therefore becomes probable that Vīrabhāpāla married a Rāshtrakūta princess in addition to the daughter of the Chēdi king Karna who was, according to the Rāmacharita, given to him after the war alluded to above. Mahana was Rāmapāla's right hand, and was of great assistance in the war against Bhīma. Among the feudatories of the Pāla king in that war, the Rāmacharita mentions Viraguna, the rāja of Pithī who is described as the lord of the south. Dēvarakshita of Pithī is also mentioned, but not as a feudatory. He must be identical with the Dēvarakshita of our inscription, and it becomes probable that the Pithī ruler Viraguna had originally stood on Rāmapāla's side, while Dēvarakshita later on rose against him. He hailed from Pithī or Pithikā, which according to the Rāmacharita was situated in the south. Now pithi or pithikā is synonymous with pitha, and it is therefore possible that Pithī is identical with Pithāpuram.¹ We know that a branch of the Eastern Chalukyas reigned in Pithāpuram in the second half of the twelfth century, and that the town had already been conquered by Pulikēśin II. No historical information is forthcoming about the earlier Chalukya princes of the Pithāpuram branch. The real history of the family only seems to begin with Vijayāditya III, whose coronation took place A.D. 1158.² It should also be noted that the genealogy given in the Pithāpuram inscriptions hardly can be correct. Mr. Sewell has drawn my attention to the fact that only four generations are enumerated between Bēta, who reigned in A.D. 925, and Vijayāditya III, who was crowned in A.D. 1158.

Before this branch became established in Pithāpuram, the place was one of the strongholds of the Vēngi province of the Eastern Chalukyas. In the last part of the 11th century, the reigning king was Kulōttunga Chōḍadēva, who first was ruler in Vēngi but who in A.D. 1070 was anointed to the Chōḍa kingdom. Vēngi was then ruled by viceroys, first by his uncle Vijayāditya VII then by his sons Rājārāja (1077-78) and Vira Chōḍa (from 1078). Mr. Venkayya suggests that this latter viceroy may be identical with the Viraguna of the Rāmāpālacharita. Dēvarakshita was then probably a general under the viceroy of Vēngi. He is said to have surpassed even the glory of Gajapati. As this epithet is used by some of the Eastern Gangas, it is possible that it here refers to Anantavarman Chōḍaganga. The *Kalīngattu Parani*³ describes an expedition undertaken by Kulōttunga I against this king, and Dēvarakshita may have played a rôle in it. We do not know anything about the Chhikkōra family, to which Dēvarakshita belonged.

The marriage of Dēvarakshita's daughter to king Gōvindachandra perhaps accounts for the relationship between the Chōlas and the Gāhaḍavālas commented on by Mr. Venkayya in his Annual Report for 1907-08, para 58 and ff. An incomplete Gāhaḍavāla inscription has recently been found immediately after a record of Kulōttungadēva of A.D. 1110-11, in Gangaikonda-chōlapuram, which it is tempting to bring into connexion with Gōvindachandra's marriage. Mr. Venkayya carries the acquaintance of the Gāhaḍavālas with the Chōla kings farther back to the expedition of Rājendra Chōla towards the kings on the banks of the Ganges, mentioned in the Thiruvālangādu plates, and it seems very probable that this expedition led to the establishment of friendly relations with the north. Among the princes conquered by Rājendra Chōla was Dharmapāla of Dandabhukti, and the lord of Dandabhukti figures amongst the feudatory kings who, according to the Rāmāpālacharita, assisted Rāmapāla in his war against Bhīma.

The relationship between the various persons mentioned in our inscription will be seen from the table which follows —

Vallabharāja of Pithī	Mahana, of the Rāshtrakūta family	Ohandra, of the Gahadavāla family.
Dēvarakshita, married	Śankarādēvi	Madanachandra
	Kumarādēvi, married	Gōvīndachandra

According to verse 25, the inscription was composed by Kunda, who describes himself as a lion to the tīrthika-elephants, a Rōhana mountain, full of the splendid gems of poetical composition, a poet in eight bhāshās, and an intimate friend of the king of Vanga. He is not elsewhere known. His name does not occur in the Saduktikarnāmrta,¹ nor, so far as I know, in any other anthology. The engraver was the śilpī Vāmana.

TRANSLATION.

Hail Obeisance to the exalted noble Vasudhārā

(V. 1) May Vasudhārā protect the worlds, who abates the broad stream of unlimited misery in the manifold universe by the nectar stream of dharmā, who pours out riches of wealth and gold over earth, skies and heaven, and who conquers all the misery of man in them.²

(V. 2.) Victorious be that lover of the lotuses, the flashing torch for the illumination of the world, who causes oozing of the lovely moon-gems and (brings tears into) the eyes of longing people; who opens the knot of pride in haughty damsels and also the closed lotuses; who with his nectar-filled beams revives the god of love, who was burnt to ashes by Īśvara, (who had been) smitten (by him)

(V. 3.) In his (the moon's) lineage, which enjoys a valour worthy of homage; which is resplendent with shining fame, which speedily annihilates the pride of the river of the gods by its purity; which destroys the splendour of its adversaries, was a hero, known by the name of Vallabharāja, honoured among princes, the victorious lord of broad Pithikā, of increasing mighty prowess.

(V. 4-5.) The full moon expanding the lotuses of the Chhikkôra family, known on earth as śrī-Dēvarakshita, the lord of Pithi (who) surpassed even the splendour of Gajapati by his splendour, whose glory alone ravished the hearts of the world, was descended from him (Vallabharāja), as the moon from the ocean, a (veritable) Vishnu (Vidhu), to the Lakshmi of beauty, a (veritable) moon in causing the rise of the ocean, viz. ocular pleasure (as the moon raises the ocean), a second moon, the lustre of whose light was his fame (or, a second Vishnu with Śrī in the shape of the lustre of his fame), an incomparable treasure of goodness, a treasure of resplendent virtues, an ocean of profundity, a peerless store of religion, a store of energy, the only depository of the lore of arms,—

(V. 6) Who was the veritable celestial tree in bestowing desired objects on supplicants, who was an irresistible thunderbolt in accomplishing the splitting of the mighty mountains, viz. his haughty foes, a marvellous man, whose arm was like a sprout of a marvellous herb in healing the fever of Cupid in enamoured women, and death to kings

(V. 7.) In the Gauda country there was a peerless warrior, with his quiver,³ this incomparable diadem of kshatriyas, the Anga king Mahana, the venerable maternal uncle of kings. He conquered Dēvarakshita in war and maintained the glory of Rāmapāla, which rose in splendour because the obstruction caused by his foes was removed.

(V. 8) The daughter of this Mahanadēva was like the daughter of the mountain (i.e. Pārvatī), she was married to the lord of Pithi as (Pārvatī) to Svayambhu,

(V. 9.) She was known as Śankaradēvi, full of mercy like Tārā, and she excelled the creepers of the wishing tree in her efforts to make gifts

(V. 10) To them, forsooth, was born Kumaradēvi, like a dēvi, lovely like the charming streak of the spotless autumnal moon, as if Tārā herself, prompted by compassion, had descended to earth with a wish to free the world from the ocean of misery.

² Mr Venkayya suggests to read dainyāt-tyājayanti

(V 11.) After having created her, Brahmā was filled with pride at his own cleverness in applying his art, excelled by her face the moon, being ashamed, remains in the air, rises at night, becomes impure and subsequently full of spots, how can this her marvellous beauty be described by people like us ?

(V 12) She, who in a wonderful way possesses a beautiful body, which is a glittering net for entrapping female antelopes, viz. the moving eyes, and which robs the wealth of beauty of the dense waves of the playful milky ocean by her brilliant charm of lovely splendour, who does away with the infatuation of the daughter of the mountain (i.e. Pārvatī) by her proud grace

(V. 13) Her mind was set on religion alone, her desire was bent on virtues, she had undertaken to lay in a store of merit, she found a noble satisfaction in bestowing gifts, her gait was like that of an elephant, her appearance charming to the eye, she bowed down to the Buddha, and the people sang her praise, she took her stand in the play of commiseration, was the permanent abode of luck, annihilated sin, and took her pride in abundant virtue

(V 14) In the royal Gahadavāla lineage, famous in the world, was born a king, Chandra by name, a moon (chandra) among rulers. By the streams of tears of the wives of the kings who could not resist him, the water of the Yamuna forsooth became darker

(V. 15) The king Madanachandra, a crest jewel amongst impetuous kings, was born from him, the lord who brought the circle of the earth under one sceptre, the splendour of the fire of his valor being great and mighty, and who even lowered the glory of Maghavan by his glory

(V. 16) Hari, who had been commissioned by Hara in order to protect Vārānasi from the wicked Turushka warrior, as the only one who was able to protect the earth, was again born from him, his name being renowned as Gōvīndachandra.

(V. 17) Wonderful, the calfs of the celestial cows could not formerly get even drops of the milk stream to drink, on account of its continuous use for satisfying the hearts of supplicants, but after the multitude of these supplicants had been gladdened through the liberality of that king, they sat down to the feast of drinking the milk which is always plentiful and applied according to their wishes.

(V. 18) In the excellent cities of his adversaries, hunters by mistake do not pick up fallen necklaces, thinking them to be nooses for the deer in it, and hunters quickly remove the fallen gold ear-ring with sticks, the garlands in their hands shaking with fear, mistaking it for a snake on account of its large size

(V 19) The chariot of the sun was delayed because its span of horses were greedy after the mouthful of fresh, shining, thick grass on the roofs of the palaces in the towns of his uprooted foes, and also the moon became slow, because he had to protect the gazelle (in his orb), which was falling down, having become covetous after the grass

(V 20.) Kumaradēvi, forsooth, was famous with that king, like Śrī with Viṣṇu, and her praises were sung in the three worlds, and in the splendid harem of that king, she was indeed like the streak of the moon amongst the stars.

(V. 21) This vihāra, an ornament to the earth, the round of which consists of nine segments, was made by her, and decorated as it were by Vasudhārā herself in the shape of Tārīnī, and even the Creator himself was taken with wonder when he saw it accomplished with the highest skill in the applying of wonderful arts and looking handsome with (the images of) gods.

(V 22) Having prepared that copper-plate grant, which recorded the gift to śrī-Dharmachakra Jina, for so long a time as moon and sun endure on earth, and having given it to her, that Jambuka was made (?) the foremost of all pattalākās by her (Kumaradēvi)

(V. 23) This Lord of the Turning of the Wheel was restored by her in accordance with the way in which he existed in the days of Dharmāsōka, the ruler of men, and even more wonderfully, and this vihāra for that sthavira was elaborately erected by her, and might be placed there, stay there as long as moon and sun (onduo).

(V. 24) If anyone on the surface of the world preserves her fame, she will be intent on bowing down at his pair of feet. You Jinns shall be witnesses. But if any fool robs her fame, then those lōkapālas will quickly punish that wicked man in their wrath.

(V. 25) The poet in eight bhūshās known as the trusted friend of the Banga-king, Śrī-Kunda by name, the learned, who was the only lion to attack the crowds of the elephant-like heretics, who was a Rōhana mountain of the flashing jewels of poetical composition, he made this eulogy of her, charming with strings of letters beautifully arranged.

(V. 26) This prastā has been engraved by the śilpi Vāmāna on this excellent stone which rivals the rājāvarta (i.e. Lapis Lazuli).

SAKA SAMVAT 1489

By T. A. GOPINATHA RAO, M.A., MADRAS, AND RAO SAHIB T. RAGHAVIAH, B.A., REVENUE OFFICER, MADRAS CORPORATION.

The temple of Śrī Vēṅkatāchalapati to which this set of copper-plates belongs, is situated in the middle of Krishnapuram, a village six miles south-east of Tinnevely. The temple has some fine sculptures and a few inscriptions of later times. The copper-plates were kindly secured for us by Mr. N. Gōpālasvāmī Ayyangār, B.A., B.L., Deputy Collector, Kollāgāl, and we now edit them from impressions prepared under our supervision.

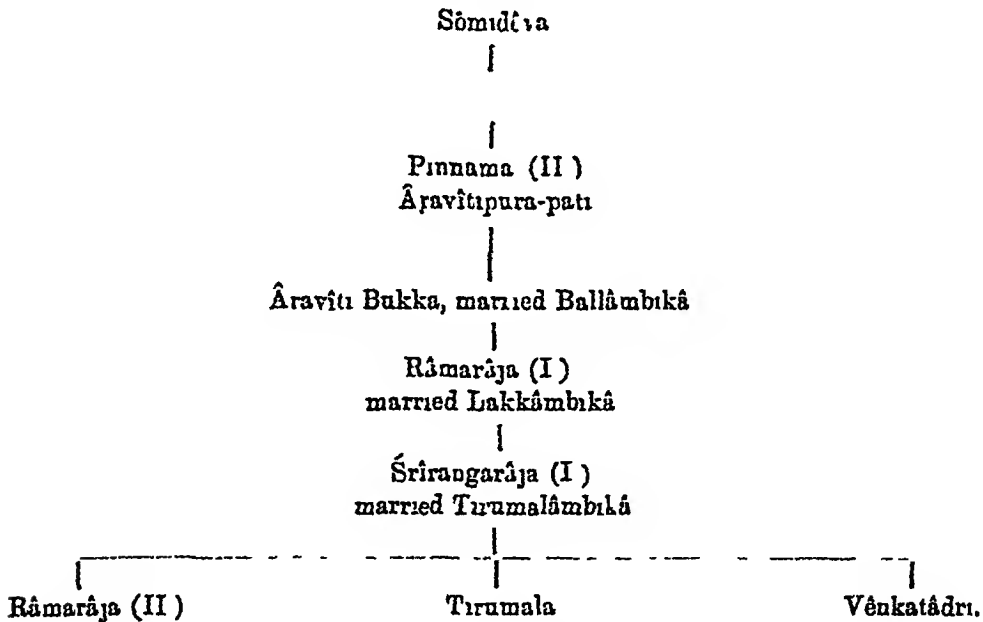

The plates are five in number, bound together by a ring, which has also a seal loosely strung to it. The upper half of the surface of the seal bears the figure of a standing bear facing the proper right, near its face is a dagger placed with its point downwards, and over it are cut out the figures of sun and moon. The lower half has a design not uncommon to the Vijayanagara seals. On the top of the first plate and immediately above the inscription is engraved the Śrīvaishnava nāmam (of the Tongalā sect) flanked on either side with the conch and the discus (of Viṣṇu). The plates (except the first) are numbered in Kannada-Telugu numerals engraved on the right-hand corner of the first side of each plate. The rims of the plates are raised, and the first and last plates are engraved on one side only.

The characters are Nandināgarī, and the language, excepting the obeisance to Ganapati at the beginning, is Sanskrit verse. The signature at the end is, as usual, the name of the tutelary deity of the Vijayanagara kings, Śrī Virūpākṣa, and is written in the Kannada alphabet. There are a few orthographical peculiarities worth noting. The long vowel ē is represented by the usual sign for ē with a secondary ē-stroke on the top. This new long ē, as employed in our record, is the same as the vowel ai as written at the present day, but in the present inscription, this latter sound is represented by an ordinary short e with two secondary e symbols on it. e.g. Adāvalipura—occurring in line 114, Amākula—in line 145, Ēbirudarāyara—in line 191, and Īkava in line 210. The Dravidian rough r is represented, as in other Vijayanagara plates written in the Nandināgarī alphabet, with a secondary r on the top of a common r, e.g. Māru—occurring in line 94, -Savalakkāram—in line 141, -pāra—in line 146, Śrīvā—in line 150, and -Aravīra—in line 159. There are several minor errors in the inscription.

such as omissions of letters, and of the anusvāra and the visarga, wrong repetitions of the same words and phrases, etc., these are noticed in footnotes under the text. The birudas of the king and of the chiefs are known from other sources

The inscription belongs to the reign of Sadāśivarāya of Vidyānagarī. It records that at the request of Tirumala, who was in his turn requested by Krishnappa Nāyaka or Krishnabhūpati as he is called in the inscription, Sadāśivarāya granted a number of villages to the god Tīrvēṅkatanātha set up at Krishnapuram by Krishnappa Nāyaka. The first part of the inscription gives in detail the genealogy of king Sadāśiva which is identical with that given in the British Museum plates of the same king published by Prof. Kielhorn¹ and No 58 of the Nāgamangala taluk of the Mysore District, published by Mr. Race². Herein also Sadāśivarāya is described as being installed on the throne by the chief ministers at the instance of Rāmarāja, who is here, as in the other plates,³ called his sister's husband. Later on (vv 84-95) the inscription details the pedigree of the family to which Tirumala belonged.

The genealogy begins with Nanda, who is said to have been born in the race of the moon. In his race was born Chalikka and in the latter's Bijjalēndra Sōmidēva, who captured seven forts, was born in his line. His grandson was Pinnama "lord of Āravītipura". His son was Āravīti-Bukka, whose wife was Ballāmbikā. Their son was Rāmarāja who married Lakkāmbikā. To them was born Śrīrangarāja (I) and his wife was Tirumalāmbikā. Their sons were Rāmarāja (II), Tirumala (I) and Vēṅkatādri. Tirumala is styled in the plates a Bhōja in poetry. Appended below is a genealogical tree of Tirumala's family —

We learn from the British Museum plates that Rāmarāja II, Tirumala and Vēṅkatādri belonged to the same family, from which Kondarāja of that grant was descended (see table above, Vol IV, p 4). Tirumala bears (vv 98-101) the family birudas of antembavaragamda, srīmandalīkaganda, birudamañniyavibhāḷa, dharañivarāḥa, Kalyāṇapurānātha and *Vēṅga-tribhūṇanimalla*¹ At the time at which the present grant was made, Rāmarāja, the powerful general and minister of Sadāśiva, and his brother Vēṅkaṭāḍri had both been dead two years, they having fallen in the famous battle of Tālikōṭa on the 23rd January A.D. 1565. Tirumala, the second brother of Rāmarāja, now became the minister and commander and was the de facto king. In the course of the same or the beginning of the next year he was to become eventually the de jure king and founded the third dynasty of Vijayanagara.

³ Compare the British Museum Plate Inscription, above, Vol IV, p 3 f, No 7 of the Hassan taluk, Ep. Carn, Vol. V, Part I, and No 186 of Chennappaṇṇa, Ep. Carn, Vol IX. Compare Prof. Kielhorn's remarks on the meaning of "sister" in this connection

Krishnappa Nāyaka, at whose request the present grant was made, is described as the grandson of Nāgama Nāyaka and the son by Nāgamā of Viśvanātha Nāyaka.² He has the virudas, Kāñchīpuravarādhīśvara, Mōḷālipaṭṭavaradhana, Samayadrōharaganda, Samayaśōḷāhala, Aḷavāḷipuravarādhīśvara, Pāṇḍyakulasthūpanāchārya and Dakṣiṇasamudrādhipati (vv. 49-52).

In connection with the conquest of the Pāṇḍya country by the kings of Vijayanagara, we might notice that Narasa or Narasā Nāyaka, as he is more commonly called, is said to have subjugated Mānabhūsha, the king of Mādura.³ We know that Narasā Nāyaka lived about the last quarter of the 15th century⁴ and that Mānabhūsha or Aikāṣaṇ Parāhrama Pāṇḍya began his reign in 1422 A.D.⁵ and ruled for at least 42 years, i.e. till about 1466 A.D.⁶ It is quite likely that this Pāṇḍya king was the one referred to as defeated by Narasā Nāyaka.

Our inscription is dated (vv. 44-45) in the Śaka year 1489, computed by the nīdhis (9), vāraṇas (8), vēdas (4), and indu (1), in the year Prabhava, on the Makara samkrānti corresponding to the new moon tithi of the month Pushya, on a Monday. Sadāśivarāja was then encamped on the island of Śrīrangam and made the grant in the presence of the god Ranganātha. The last known date for Sadāśivarāja is 1567 A.D.,⁷ some ten months earlier than that of our record, and hence it is likely that the king, after the disaster that befell him at Tālikōṭa two years previously, was spending his last years, Srīvaṇṇa as he was, at the sacred shrine of Śrīrangam. Of all Śrīvaiṣṇava places of pilgrimage, Śrīrangam is the most sacred, and the Tuluva kings of Vijayanagara, at least those beginning with Krishnadēvarāja, were very staunch Śrīvaiṣṇavas.⁸ Achyutadēvarāja, during his expedition against the Tiruvadi kingdom, is described, in the Achyutarāyābhyaṇḍayam of Rājauṭhakavi, as having halted at Śrīrangam and sent the son of one Sagalarāja⁹ to conquer the Tiruvadi rājya.¹⁰ Hence it might not be wrong to suppose that Sadāśivarāja ended his days in Śrīrangam, but we have not any positive proofs to support our surmise.

³ Verse 11. The word has been treated as an ordinary noun by Profs. Hultzsch and Kielhorn.

⁴ The Dēvulapalli plates give Ś 1427 as a date falling in the reign of Immaḍi-Nṛsiṃha; hence Narasa must have lived prior to this. See also footnote 7, above, Vol. VII, p. 79. [It should be noted that Immaḍi Nṛsiṃha was a Śāḷva, and not a Tuluva like Narasa — S. K.]

⁷ South-Indian Inscriptions, Vol. I, Nos. 43-46, p. 70.

⁹ This Sagalarāja was the father-in-law of Achyutadēva and father of his wife Varadāmbā. See Achyutarāyābhyaṇḍayam. Canto III, verse 43. The printed copy of this work reads the name as Salagarāja; see p. 77, but Mr. T. S. Kuppasāmi Śāstri reads it as Sagalarāja, and we follow him in calling the father-in-law of Achyuta, Sagalarāja.

Krishnappa Nāyaka constructed a temple in the village of Krishnāpuram and built a prākāra round it and a tower as high as the Mandara mountain over its entrance. In front of the shrine he erected a rangamandapa, standing on pillars containing exquisite sculptures and decorated with rows of beautiful creepers. In this newly constructed temple he set up the image of the god Tiravēkatanaātha. He built a big car for the deity and surrounded the temple with broad streets with a view to provide an easy circuit for the car. It was for the conduct of the daily pūjā, for offerings, lighting, for incense, flower-garlands, etc., and for the annual celebration of the car and the floating festivals, that he requested and got from Sadāśivaiyā the villages mentioned in the grant.

Though the Nāyakas are believed to have usurped the throne of the Pāndyas, they still call themselves 'the establishers of the Pāndya dynasty'. In corroboration of the claim of the Nāyakas of Mālura to the title of Pāndyaśūlasāhāpanāchāryas, we see several hundreds of inscriptions belonging to the later Pāndyas, scattered over the country believed to have been ruled over by the Nāyakas, showing that they were also ruling simultaneously with the Nāyakas. One of the later Pāndyas, named Śrīvallabha, is described, in the Pudukkōttai plates of Ativirarama Pāndya,¹ as having established the Pāndya kingdom. This Śrīvallabha must have been a contemporary of Narasā Nāyaka, for he is the brother of Mānabhūsha defeated by Narasā.² How he established the Pāndya kingdom and under what circumstances, is not apparent. But we see as a matter of fact the Pāndyas ruling in a semi-independent condition over their ancestral kingdom till at least 1585 A.D., what political relationship existed between them and the Nāyakas, we do not know.

At the end of the inscription, it is mentioned that Sabhāpati Svayambhū was the composer of the śāsana, and Viranāchārya, son of Virana, was the engraver.

Kilavēmbu nādu in the Pāndya mandalam, Śrīvallamangalāchāvadi in the above nādu, Ardhatintrini (Arappuli?), Villamarāyan Nedungulam, Śavalakkāran kulam, Puliyangula-ōdai, Pirāyankulam, Bhūsuratātāka (Parpagulam, a corruption perhaps of Pāppānkulam), Kallikulam, Vēlamkulam Sundarapāndyaṇ pudukkāl, A[ya*]ṇākulam, Śrikulam, Ēryāru Peryālangulam, Kokkantāmpārai (modern Kongandāmpārai), Paṇayangu- lam, Muttūr hill; Puttanēri, Āriyakulam, Kōdikulam, Kuttukkāl, Muttūr, Rāmangulam, Īttampāttu, Śiriyālangulam, Pāttakulam, Murappunādu, Ālikudi and Sri-Krishnapuram.

Of these Vēmba-nādu comprises the northern portions of the Native State of Travancore and of the District of Tinnevely, and in the former state there is a large backwater lake known by the name of Vēmba nādu-kāyal indicating the ancient name of the country where it is situated. We find the following names in the list of villages belonging to the Tinnevely tāluka of the same district and situated near Krishnāpuram — Pirāyānkulam, Pāppānkulam,³ Vēlānkulam, Sundarapāndiyaṇ kāl, Kongandāmpārai, Paṇayānkulam, Muttūr, Āriyakulam, Murappanādu, and Krishnāpuram. The other places we are unable to identify.

² [The Pudukkōttai grant mentions Mānābharaṇa as the brother of Śrīvallabha, and, besides, Mānakavacha, whom Mr Venkayya identifies with Arikēśarin Parākrama Pāndya. The identification of Mānābhūsha with any of these two is far from being certain —S. K.]

³ It now goes popularly by the name Pāppānkulam. This name means "the Brāhman's tank," and it has been translated into Sanskrit in the record.

ABRIDGED TRANSLATION.

Vv 4-5 trace the genealogy of the family from the Moon

(Vv 6-7.) In his (i.e. Turvasu's) line was born the husband of Dēvakī, king Timma, as famous among the Tuluvas as Krishna was among the Yadus. To him was born king Īśvara, a jewelled crown of virtues to kings, (and) the husband of Bukkamā

(V. 8.) To him, the son of Dēvakī, was born king Narasa, as Kāma (was born) from the son of Dēvakī (Krishna).

Vv. 9-10 describe his generosity and his conquest of the kingdom of Tamcha (i.e. the Chōla country) and Śrīrangapattana.

(V 11) Conquering the Chōra and the Chōla, Mānabhūṣha, the Pāndya king of Madura, also the fierce Turushka, king Gajapati and others from the Ganges to Lankā, and from the Eastern to the Western mountains, he made all kings bear his commands on their heads as flowers on their crowns

(Vv 12-14) Of Tippāji and Nāgalādēvī, like Rāma and Lakshmana of Kausalyā and Sumitrā to Daśaratha, were born to him two sons Vira-Nṛsiṃha and Krishnarāya who were brave and modest. To him were also born of Ūbāmbikā two (more) sons able in protecting (the subjects), Rangakṣatindra and Achyutadēvarāya

(V 15) Vira-Nārasimha, seated on the jewelled throne at Vijayanagara, eclipsing by fame and policy Nṛga, Nala, Nahusha and others of the world, praised by the Brāhmanas from Sētu to Mēru, from the Eastern to the Western mountains, ruled the kingdom pleasing the hearts of all people

(Vv 16-18) His praises

(V. 19) Having ruled his large kingdom without obstacles, the king of the earth, famous for his virtues, went to heaven as if to rule the kingdom of heaven

(V. 20) After him, king Krishnarāya, of unabated valour, bore the whole of the earth on his shoulders with as much ease as a jewelled bracelet.

(Vv. 21-23.) Praises of Krishnarāya.

(V. 24.) When Krishnarāya had taken for his part the world of the dēvas (i.e. had died) his younger brother Achyutēndra, doer of good deeds, conqueror of foes, worshipper of Viṣṇu, who made gifts satisfying the desires of the learned, got for his share the whole of this earth.

(Vv. 25-26) Praises of Achyutēndra

(V. 27) When, having set up on earth a body in the form of his fame, Achyutēndra reached Viṣṇu's abode, his brave son Vēnkatarāya ascended the throne.

(Vv 28-30) He who was like the flower-arrowed Kāma, and was ruling his kingdom (well), owing to the bad luck of his subjects, soon went to the city of Indra. The son of Rangakṣatindra and the precious pearl of the sacred womb of Timmāmbā, king Sadāśivarāya, who was like the santāna tree on the hill of dēvas, was duly installed on the throne that was the jewel of the prosperous town, Śrī-Vidyānagarī, by king Rāma, his sister's husband, the protector of the goddess Śrī of the great kingdom of Karnāṭa, who was an ornament to all Kṣatriyas, who was endowed with valour, nobility and kindness, and by the chief ministers

(Vv 31-43.) Praises of Sadāśivarāya

(Vv 44-45.) On Monday, the new moon tithi of the dark half of the month Pausa, during the Makara-sankramana, in the year Prabhava, (corresponding to) the Śaka year counted by the māhī (9), the *vārana*s (8), the vēdas (4), and indu (1), (i.e. Śaka 1489) on the banks of the sacred river Kāvērī, in the presence of (the god) Ranganātha, (this grant is made).

(Vv. 46-57.) By Kṛṣṇabhūpati, of sacred fame, the ocean of mercy, who was the jewel of the family of Kāśyapa; on whom much wealth was conferred by (the god) Viśvanātha, who was pleased with his devotion, who knew the truth about duty, who was always studying the art of protecting others, who was a wise man, whose mind was purified by truthfulness; who shone by his desire to do good actions, who possessed great wealth; who was endowed with the virtues of a wise man; who bore the title 'the lord of Kāñchīpura,' who was also the recipient of the famous title 'Mōkālīpattavardhana,' who was also known as the 'Samaya-drōbara-ganda;' whose policy was like that of Maṇu, who also shone by the celebrated distinction 'Samayakōlāhala,' who was also entitled 'the lord of Ailāvalīpura,' who by his valour deprived the insolent king of the Tiruvadi-rājya of the seven (component) parts (of his kingdom); who was famous as the 'Pāndyakulasthāpanāchārya,' who was the revered lord of the great Southern ocean, who was the grandson of king Nāgama; who was equal to Nala and Nābhāga in fame, who was the cool moon of the ocean named king Viśvanātha; who was the pearl of the oyster, vis the womb of the virtuous Nāgamā,—was built a temple at Kṛṣṇāpura, which was encircled by a wall of the shape of the pranava and a broad and lofty tower 'It has' a large ranja-manḍapa raised on a collection of beautiful stone pillars and adorned with rows of spouts (?). He built a car like the Mandara mountain and also broad roads round the temple, for the propitiation of the god Viṣṇu set up there (i.e. in the temple),

(Vv. 67-69) (For the worship of the god Viṣṇu) who shone in this place under the name of Tiruvēnkatanātha, by means of burning incense, by lights, and by the offering of good food, cakes, etc., by means of offerings of several kinds of flowers, by illumination with many lights, by means of dancing, singing and music, with umbrellas, chauris, on days both ordinary and special, for the car festival at the beginning of each year, for the floating festival during the hot season, and for the yātrōtsava,

(Vv. 70-82) The excellent village known by the name of Śrī Kṛṣṇāpura, resplendent with cereals,—including the villages known as Puttanēri, Āriyakulam, Kōṭṭikkulam, Kuttukkal, Muttūr Rāmangulam, Ittampattu, Śiriyālangulam, Pātankulam together with thirteen bhū in Muṇṇappu-nādu (and) Ālikudi, which is situated in the Kīlavēmbu-nādu belonging to the Pāndya-maṇḍala, on the banks of the pure river Tāmraparai, in the chāvadi known as Śrīvallamangalam, and which is situated to the north-east of the road commencing with the Arddhatatṛipī tree, etc., east of Villamarāya's charity and the famous Nedungulam and of the extreme limits of Śrī-Śaṇakkaṇṭh-kulam; south-east of Puliyangula-ōḍai, Kulappirāyankulam and of the extreme limits of Bhūtsura tatāka; south of the extreme limits of Kalikkulam, south-west of the Vēlangula channel, west of Śrī-Sundara-Pāndya's new channel; north-west of the extreme limits of Ainākulam; north of the extreme limits of Śrīkulam, Eryāru-Peryālangulam and of Kokkantāmpāra and Panayankulam; and north-east of the hill known as Muttūrmala—is to be enjoyed by (this god) Vēṇkatēśa as a sarvamānya.

(Vv. 96 and 102 to 104.) Having been requested by Kṛṣṇabhūpati, the fruit of the long penance of Viśvanātha, whose eyes are the ocean of mercy, Tirumala Rāja respectfully requested Sadāsivarāya, the respected of the learned men, who, surrounded by his staunch friends, priests, followers, all kinds of learned men, and ambassadors and by their advice, made this gift joyously with gold and pouring of water.

Vv. 105-106 mention that Sabhāpati Svayambhu wrote the śāsana.

V. 107 mentions that Viranāchārya, son of Virana, engraved the document.

Vv. 108-112 the usual imprecatory verses.

No. 53.—ARANG COPPER-PLATE OF BHIMASENA II.

GUPTA-SAMVAT 282.

By HIRA LAL, B.A., NAGPUR.

This copper-plate was found by me with Śrī Kṛishṇa Mālguzār of Ārang on my visit to that place on the 31st May 1908. Ārang is 22 miles east of Raipur, the headquarters of the Chhattisgarh Division in the Central Provinces. It contains several ancient remains¹ and it was there that another plate in box-headed characters belonging to Mahā-Jayadēva² was found. There is also another mutilated inscription at the place on a stone in characters like those in which the inscriptions of Sirpur,³ which is 15 miles from Ārang, are engraved. The details as to the exact find-spot of our inscription are not available, as Śrī Kṛishṇa told me that it was found long ago by one of his ancestors, and as no Pandits could read it, it was stowed away, so that being out of sight, it got out of mind. He, however, assured me he had heard from his ancestors that it was dug up in Ārang itself and that it was not brought from any other place. There is only one plate with an uncut ring passing through a round hole, its ends being soldered to a round seal. The plate measures $10\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4''$ and has irregular edges and an uneven surface, partly corroded. In spite of this, the letters are all visible except two or three (ll 6 and 11) which have been much worn out and are difficult to decipher. The seal is a little brittle and has in bas-relievo a lion in a sitting posture as the family crest, beneath which are inscribed in raised letters Śrī-mahārāja-Bhīmasēnasya.

The inscription contains 13 lines, 9 on the obverse and 4 on the reverse side. The average size of letters is $\frac{3}{16}''$. The characters belong to the Northern class of alphabets of the type, which, according to Dr. Fleet, "may be called the standard alphabet, with northern characteristics, of Central India from towards the end of the 5th to the middle of the 6th century A. D."⁴ There are also numerical symbols for 200, 80, 2, 10 and 8, the last being doubtful. The language of the record is Sanskrit prose except the imprecatory verse in ll 11 and 12. In respect of orthography, we have to notice the use of the dental nasal instead of the anusvara before s in vansyaśi (l. 10) and instead of the class nasal before a guttural in pidān-kuryāt (in the same line). Letters with a répha have been mostly doubled. The vowel sign for i occurs in srī (l. 2) and ā is sometimes denoted by a short vertical stroke after the consonant to which it is joined, at other times by a top curvo, especially when combined with sa or pa (ll. 2, 3, 5, 10 and 12). Final forms of m occur in ll. 6, 7 and 11.

The object of the inscription is to record the grant of a village named Vatapalikā in the district of Dēndā by the Mahārāja Bhīmasēna II. to two Brāhmins Harisvāmin and Bappasvāmin, both of the Bharadvāja-gōtra and students of the Rīgvēda. The charter was issued from the Suvarnna-nadi (river), where apparently the donor had gone to bathe on some festival. The genealogy of Bhīmasēna is given for six generations, thus —Bhīmasēna (II), son of Dayitavarmman (II), son of Bhīmasēna (I.), son of Vibhishana, son of Dayita (I), son of Śūra; but it is not clear to which particular dynasty they belonged. They are stated to have been born of a family celebrated for its dignity like that of royal ascetics (rājārshatulyakula).⁵ From this it may be inferred that they were something like the Parivrājaka Mahārājas of Dabhālā (Jnbbulpore country) and were like them vassals of the Early (or Imperial) Guptas in whose era our inscription is dated.¹ The Parivrājaka inscriptions range from 475 to 528 A.D., and ours belongs to the Gupta year 282 or A.D. 601. Our inscription introduces us to another similar family under the overlordship of the Guptas, which apparently continued to be acknowledged, at least in Chhattisgarh, up to so late a date as the commencement of the 7th century A.D. It was in the middle of the 4th century that Samudra-Gupta conquered the Mahākṣala (Chhattisgarh) country, by defeating the then ruling king Mahēndra, of whom we know nothing beyond his name and so have no materials to establish any connection between him and the dynasty of our inscription. We know that Mahēndra was not ousted. He was liberated,² and his dynasty must have continued to rule for about 100 years, if Bhīmasēna's family was a different one. The first king Śūra of the latter line must have flourished in the middle of the 5th century, to judge from the number of generations which intervened between the two. In Chhattisgarh several dynasties have ruled and many inscriptions have been found, but ours is the only one among them which is dated in the Gupta era. In other parts of India, too, inscriptions referring to the Guptas have been discovered, and their era remained in use even after their imperial power had come to an end. That is, in the words of Dr. Fleet, though the direct line of the Early Gupta dynasty itself may have become extinct, Gupta dominion still continued, and the name of the Gupta kings was still recognised as a power down to A.D. 601. Prior to the discovery of our inscription, the latest date expressly given in the Gupta era was only 528 A.D.³ It is true that the inscriptions of the Valabhi kings shew that the Gupta era continued in use in Kāthiāwād and some neighbouring parts of Gujārāt, at least as late as A.D. 766,⁴ but the era has not been specifically named after the Guptas in them.

The exact date of our inscription appears to be the 18th of the Bhādra month of the Gupta year 282. It does not admit of verification, as the week day is not mentioned. Its English equivalent, as calculated by Mr. Gokul Prasād, Tahsildār of Dhamtari, is Tuesday, the 22nd August 601, on the assumption that the Gupta era began on 26th February 320 A.D. which is taken as the coronation day of Chandra Gupta I.⁵ The accuracy of the above calculation cannot, however, be relied on, owing to the uncertainty as to whether the date is really the 18th, the figure for 8 being doubtful. Again, there is the question of intercalation⁶ and the alteration of the commencement of the year by the Valabhi kings who put it back 7 months, which may also interfere with the reckoning. So much, however, is certain that our inscription was recorded in the year 601 A.D. With regard to geographical names, Suvarṇanadī is apparently the Sōn, which rises from the Amarkantak hills and after a course of about 40 miles in Chhattisgarh finally joins the Ganges. It has been identified with the Sonos of Arrian as also with his Erannoboas, the other Sanskrit name of the Sōn being Hiraṇyavāha or Hiraṇyavāhin. The Sōn is frequently mentioned in Hindū literature, in the *Rāmāyana*s of Vālmīki and Tulsidās, the Bhāgavata and other works. There are numerous legends about it, one of the most picturesque assigning the origin of the Sōn and Narmadā to two tears dropped by Brahman, one on either side of the Amalkantak range. Its waters possess great sanctity, the performance of sandhyā on its banks ensuring absolution and the attainment of heaven even to the slayer of a Brāhman.¹ This must therefore be the river, the third in India, as recorded by Arrian, whence Bhīmasēna issued his charter, and not another Sōn flowing in the south of the Bilāspur district, falling into the Borna which joins the Mahānadi. As for Dōndā and Vatapallikā, the latter of which must be looked for in a form such as Badapālī or Barapālī, there are so many places in Chhattisgarh bearing those names that it is difficult to say which particular ones were meant. The nearest Dōndā or Dundā, as we now find it, is one situated 25 miles west of Ārang, where the plate was found, and the nearest Barapālī is 30 miles east of Ārang and about 50 miles east of Dundā. It is included in the present Kandiā Zamindari on the other side of the Mahānadi. It would then appear that Ārang also was in those days included in the Dōndā district, and the donees, if they were residents of Ārang, lived half-way between the headquarters of the district and the villego granted to them.

(Ll 8 to 13) Therefore, being obedient to their commands, you should render (to them) in proper manner the taxes such as gold and bullion, etc If anybody, being regardless of the two worlds⁵ and wishing to go to hell with ten past and (a similar number of) future (generations) of his family, does, causes to be done, or assents to even a small harm to this (charity), he would become joined with five great⁶ sins and also minor sins Moreover, in this matter it has been said by the venerable Vyāsa. "the giver of land enjoys in heaven for sixty thousand years, (but) the confiscator (of a grant) and he who assents (to an act of confiscation) shall dwell for the same number of years in hell," and so forth (in other) verses In the year of the Guptas in hundreds 200, 80 2 (in the month of) Bhâdra on the day 10 8(?). Prince Subhadra was the dûtaka (officer carrying the king's orders) Engraved by Lakshmana
